THE BARODA ARMY.—The military resources of Baroda were described lately by the Minister, Sir Madhava Rao, with comments by Mr. Melville. The regular army, now of some 3,500 men, was reorganised in accordance with arrangements made by Sir Richard Meade, whose experience in a matter of this kind will doubtless bear fruit for years to come. The men of all arms, artillery 154, cavalry 247, and infantry 3,000, are said by Mr. Melville to be "well dressed, and turn out in a very creditable fashion." The Minister says that the force is tolerably well disciplined, adequately armed for its purposes, and an efficient instrument for keeping the peace. The regular army costs about seven lakhs a year. Then there is the irregular branch of the army, representing the old Maharatta army which once upon a time levied black mail almost up to the walls of Calcutta. The survival has but small pretensions to good discipline or equipment. There are 4,800 horse and 200 foot; out of which 3,000 sowars serve as the Gaekwar's contingent in Kattywar, Deesa, Sudra, and Rewa Kanta. The Irregular force has still to undergo reorganisation; and the task will be one of great difficulty. Large numbers are interested in its maintenance, whilst there are many rights and personal privileges which must be touched with caution. Sir Madhava Rao would use the body for police duties; but these the men as a body are averse to, though large drafts have already been made from the Irregular army to the new police force. The cost of the Irregular army comes to about fifteen lakhs a year. Out of this, ten lakhs go to the pay of the Gaekwar's contingent of 3,000 already spoken of as being employed for some while past in the Tributary Mehals. The re-organisation of this contingent has been under consideration for some years now; in June, 1876, the Government of India shelved the matter for a year, and up to the end of last year nothing had been done. "But the matter," says Mr. Melville, "shall very shortly be taken up in a decided manner."—Pioneer.

THE INDUS FLOTILLA.—It is said that the Government of India is negotiating for the disposal of the Indus Flotilla steamers, and has asked, among others, the Commissioner in Sind whether he wants them for any purpose. The principal obstacle in the disposal of these steamers are the officers of the company who are under an agreement which does not expire for some five or six years to come. They would all be entitled to one year's pay if they were dismissed now, and the Government of India is desirous to avoid this charge, but is believed to be determined to get rid of the Steam Flotilla steamers as soon as practicable. The steamers still run the whole way to Multan, as much inconvenience would be caused by the transshipment of the goods at Rohri. No arrangements have been made, apparently, for the accommodation of passengers at Rohri, or for continuing their journey to Kotree, and consequently the traffic on the Indus Valley State Railway is not likely to be very large just yet.—Beacon.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate, and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expanded, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . . The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans, or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five COCKLE'S PILLS will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Summary and Review.

OUR advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, August 9th; Madras, 7th; Allahabad, August 7th; Calcutta, August 6.

THE general accounts of the prospects continue to be favourable; in Bombay a break in the rains was much wished for; the rainfall during the month being fifty inches, the largest amount since 1828. The floods in Baroda and in Broach, have caused much damage, and a similar account is given of Karachi. The correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette gives a most gloomy picture of the devastation caused in Upper Sindh, which might have been prevented by timely efforts. A correspondent of the Statesman describes the losses in Assam from the inundations as threatening serious distress in consequence of the destruction of growing crops, and the stoppage of planting of the Sali winter crops. The Pioneer mentions that in the Terai there has been scarcely any rain; there has been abundance in the Bhabhur, the strip of country immediately against the foot of the hills, and also in the district, on the hither side of the Terai. Cholera is partially on the decrease. An outbreak in the Lakhnau poorhouse was arrested by prompt removal of the inmates. From Aurungabad forty to sixty deaths per diem were reported. In Puna, during the last week in July, sixty deaths occurred in city, sixty-two in district. Ahmednagar returns ninety-five deaths; Satara ninety-eight. In Balasor, owing to want of drinking water, cholera is causing great mortality. In the Central Provinces it is gradually decreasing, but it continues very prevalent in British Burma.

THE general remarks on the state of the season and the crops, for the week ending July 30 are—in Madras: General prospects improved; total number on works 12,703; total number gratuitously relieved, 74,969; exports of grain by rail from Madras during the week ending the 27th, 1,295 tons. Bombay: Rain general and plentiful, prospects of Presidency everywhere favourable. Strong monsoon continuing in Bombay. Bengal: Prospects this week generally favourable; good rain has fallen where it was needed, but in Manbhoom and parts of Singhbhoom and Hazaribagh and in the Jamtara sub-division of the Sonthal Pergunnahs rainfall is still very insufficient; in Cooch Behar, Rungpore, Dinagepore, and parts of Bogra, Pubna, Dacca, and Mymensingh early crops are damaged, and aman transplantation is delayed by floods; in Cooch Behar and Rungpore prospects now improving with present dry weather. North-West Provinces and Oudh. Rainfall light and very partial; more rain is needed, especially in Agra, Meerut, Sitapur, and Shansi; prices inclined to rise. Punjab: Agricultural prospects generally are good, and though more rain is needed in Delhi and Hirsai districts it may yet be in time for the Kharif sowings. Central Provinces: Rain copious in eleven districts; rice transplanting progressing; prospects favourable; cholera gradually decreasing; prices steady but high. British Burma: Agricultural prospects much improved; rainfall generally much less than in the previous years, but there is at present no cause for anxiety except in Prome. Assam: Weather seasonable; floods subsiding; asu crops and sali nurseries much damaged; tea progressing favourably. Sylhet: Prospects good. Central India: Heavy rainfall throughout; prospects excellent in Malwa. State of Gwalior and Bundelkhand much improved; in latter anxiety still great for rain. Rajaputana: More rain wanted; cholera decreasing.

THE meteorological report gives the following as the more important features in the amount and distribution of rainfall for the past month:—1. There have been excessive rainfalls due to local storms of considerable intensity, at certain stations which have consequently formed well-defined centres of heavy rainfall. The chief of these are Colombo, Masulipatam, Hyderabad, Cuddapah, Ahmedabad, Bombay, Kurrachee, Bareilly, and Rungpore. At the majority of these it has been due to excessive rainfall during two or three days, and not to continued rain. Thus storms (chiefly thunder-storms) from 28th to the 31st of July gave Kurrachee 10·3 inches of rain. Its July average rainfall is only 2·71 inches. At Colombo the rainfall from the 11th to the 13th was 24·45 inches; the average for the month is only 2·74 inches. 2. At the majority of the remaining stations the rainfall for the month does not differ much from the average. The rainfall is, however, considerably in defect in South-Western Bengal, Orissa, Burma, a considerable part of the North-Western Provinces, and at Gwalior, Deesa and Jubbulpore, and probably in Bundelcund. The returns of the average fall indicate a general deficiency in British Burma, the rainfall averaging only 50 per cent. of its normal amount. In certain districts of the North-Western Provinces, including Benares, Lucknow and Meerut, the defect is even greater than in Burma. 3. One interesting feature in the rainfall during the month has been the alternation between the occurrence of rainfall in Northern and Southern India. Large barometric range has usually accompanied heavy general rainfall in Northern India; diminished barometric range and feeble winds, rainfall in the Deccan and Southern India.

THE observations on the official notification of the recent alteration of the salt duties in Bengal contain the following statement, which is desirable in the interests of the salt trade, so that any uncertainty as to the present rate of duty on salt may be removed. The Government of India is sensible that the changes in the rates of duty which have been necessary in carrying out its policy could not be made without causing some disturbance in the salt trade; and it takes the occasion of the present reduction of duty to announce that, so far as those provinces are concerned in which the duty has now been fixed at Rs. 2-8 per maund, the measure of equalisation may be regarded as complete and final, and that no further alteration is contemplated; the financial position of British India not admitting of the hope of a lower general rate than Rs. 2-8 per maund being adopted within any period that can now be foreseen.

THE repeated statements as to the increasing poverty of the lower class of the native population do not seem to be confirmed by Sir Ashley Eden, who, in reviewing the Sanitary Commissioner's Report, makes the following remarks:—"The Lieutenant Governor does not know the grounds upon which the Sanitary Commissioner declares that in Bengal 'large bodies of the people are in a chronic state of extreme poverty but little above starvation point.' There are no doubt many persons who will not, or cannot work, who are in a condition of great poverty, especially when high prices prevail; but certainly, with the present demand for labour and high wages over a great part of the country no one who can and will work need want."

THE danger which was recently telegraphed as having menaced the entire water supply of Bombay is described by the Gazette as a "scare." The impression that the slip in the Tulsi tunnel would probably cause a break in the dam of the lake above Vehar naturally caused serious alarm, and required the personal inspection of the Governor and the chief engineer for irrigation. The result was reassuring. What danger there may have been seems to have passed over without any further damage than the slip of earth choking up the Tulsi tunnel. The accident was caused by a strong stream of water being allowed to escape through an unfinished and unlined tunnel. The Governor, however, was of opinion that the slip had been "facilitated by the unfortunate delays on the part of the contractors."

THE loan of sixty lakhs of rupees asked for by the Bombay Municipality, in order to carry out the much-needed new drainage scheme, has been refused by the Government of India. The loan will have to be raised elsewhere, and the Government are willing to assist the Municipality in raising it locally or otherwise. The Bombay Gazette argues that the loan will be easily obtainable from Bombay capitalists.

THE recent murder among the Khojas of Bombay, and the necessity for allaying the feuds which led to that crime, have rendered imperative the inquiry into the customs of this sect which had been previously proposed. A commission, presided over by Mr. Justice Melville, and including three representatives of the Khoja community, will examine and determine the Khoja customs as to inheritance and succession. The Bombay Gazette regrets that in consequence of Aga Khan's opposition, the inquiry will not extend to the civil government and internal taxation with a view to introduce reforms desired by the body of the sect, and remove the causes of dissension which might lead to another outbreak of fanaticism.

THE current season coffee crop in Ceylon will, according to the Ceylon Times of 30th ult., most certainly exceed the maximum out turn which was hinted at as possible, viz., cwt. 600,000; up to the 26th ult. cwt. 558,081 had been shipped. Nearly the whole of the Uvah crop has to arrive, and some from Uvah Pussellawa, besides which there will be, in September, portions of the early gatherings in the Rakwane, Kadugannawe, and other early districts, ready for shipment. The floods are reported to have abated, but the immense damage can scarcely be as yet estimated. The Government have the matter under consideration, with a view of carrying out an effective scheme of relief. The rainfall of July in Colombo measured up to 28.04 inches, which exceeds that of any month since 1869, except October, 1870, in which month 36.23 inches fell.

THE version of the result of the Congress current in the best-informed circles at Kabul is that England has seized Cyprus in the interests of Russia, and will hold it until Turkey pays the indemnity.

A PARAGRAPH in the Times of Wednesday states on good authority that a diplomatic mission is about to be sent from China into Russian territory, whether to St. Petersburg or not is uncertain. The chief of the mission is Chunghou, the Mandarin who was despatched to France after the Tientsin massacre in 1870 to apologise for that outrage. According to what appears to be Chinese usage, he is provided with a coadjutor, named Silum, like Chunghou, a Manchu, who has been employed during the late troubles as an agent—civil or military—on the north-western frontier. The business of the mission is believed by some to be a negotiation affecting the Mohammedan colonies which we have taken to calling Kashgaria, the territory recovered by China since the death of Yakoob. By others it is stated to concern the cession to Russia of the Kuldja or Ili country, so long occupied by the Russians, from which the Chinese were expelled in 1864. It is not impossible that both questions are about to be discussed. The Russian frontier was rectified some eight or ten years ago down to the mountain range which divides the two regions, Kashgaria and Sungaria, from each other; a rectification further south being postponed until the southern country, Kashgaria, should be in a condition to admit of it.

WE understand that the Secretary of State has suggested to the Government of India the expediency of omitting in future, from the various yearly sanitary reports, (except the report of the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India) those Sections which relate to "Meteorology," "European Army," "Native Army," and "Jails." These subjects are at present specially reported on by officers immediately concerned with them, and it is thought desirable that the unnecessary multiplication of reports should, as far as possible, be avoided. At the same time sanitary officers are not deprived of the opportunity of referring to these subjects under other heads of their reports, while the adoption of the Secretary of State's suggestion will enable them to direct their attention more exclusively to the work which specially belongs to them.

THE Report on Public Instruction in Assam for 1876-77 has been submitted to the Secretary of State, who agrees with the Government of India in regarding the general results of the working of the department during the year as satisfactory. The most gratifying circumstance in connection with the department is that twenty-one pupils of the higher class schools passed the University entrance examination out of thirty-eight candidates, a larger number than ever passed before. There was a considerable increase, during the year, of the number of female pupils attending the schools.

A QUANTITY of the seeds of a tree called the Pithecolobium Saman has lately been forwarded to the Government of India by the Home Government, with a request that the seeds may be widely distributed wherever facilities exist for their being properly cared for. The tree, which is a native of Jamaica, appears well adapted for park and avenue planting, but its principal advantage to India will probably be found in the use of its fruit as a fodder for cattle. The fruit is a bright dark-coloured pod when ripe, six to ten inches long, nearly an inch thick; in substance consisting of a sugary amber-coloured pulp. These pods are borne in great profusion, and hang prior to their maturity dangling in clusters from every branchlet. As they ripen they drop to the ground and are picked up and eaten with much relish by all stock, even sheep and goats. Cattle may be seen lingering about the trees waiting for the passing breeze to shake the fruit down. Its excellent quality as a fodder is evident by its fattening effect. Stock having access to it improved markedly during the time it is in season. From the sugary nature of the substance of the fruit it will keep a good while packed after maturity. It is therefore often gathered on the pens, packed in barrels and kept for use till the dry early spring season has parched up grass and made herbage scarce. Hot plains having an annual rain-fall of from thirty to sixty inches appear best adapted for its successful growth either spontaneously, or by cultivation, while a maritime influence is particularly favourable to its development. As regards its cultivation in India, Dr. Birdwood thinks it is likely to flourish luxuriantly everywhere above the Western ghats of the Deccan; on the Coromandel Coast; and across Central India from the mouth of the Nerbudda and the deltas of the Mahanuddee and Godavery, in the Lower and North-Western Provinces, and westward of the latter along the Southern slopes of the Himalayas to the confines of Kabul, while it is less likely to flourish in the table land of Mysore, Rajputana and Sind; although it might be tried on the banks of the Indus. The Secretary of State attaches so much importance to the cultivation of this tree in India that he has asked to be informed of the success which may result from the experiments made with the seed now sent out. As a fodder for cattle in districts affected by famine the fruit of the tree would probably prove invaluable.

A CURIOUS result of the Burmese Treaty with Italy was recently arrived at. In the trial of a suit brought by a British subject before the Mixed Court at Mandalay against an Italian subject this treaty was appealed to. After carefully considering it, the judges found that they had no jurisdiction, inasmuch as the treaty was held to require differences with Italians to be tried by the local (Burmese) tribunals, with power of appeal to the Italian Consul. No wonder, if this decision be correct, that the Rangoon Gazette calls attention to the influence which Italians are exercising in Upper Burma.

A FACTORIES Bill for the Presidency of Bombay was recently introduced by the Hon. Sorabjee Shapoorjee Bengalee, with the object of limiting the hours of work in mills to eleven hours for men, ten for women, and for children of eight to fourteen years eight hours, with an hour's rest. Children under eight years not to be employed. The measure advocated by the Bombay followers of Lord Shaftesbury has been remitted to the Government of India, but without approval of its details by the Local Government, in whom there resides no power of legislating on this subject.

THE accounts of the Queen's Military Widows' Fund for the year 1877 have just been published in the General Orders by the Commander-in-Chief. The receipts amounted to Rs. 1,21,144, of which Rs. 39,231 were received as subscriptions. The amounts disbursed to widows and families for their maintenance and journey home amounted to Rs. 39,608. The actual balance credit invested in Government Securities amounts to Rs. 3,00,000, to this the investment of Rs. 10,000 more has been sanctioned by the committee at the late meeting. In addition to this there is a cash balance amounting to about Rs. 40,000. In the report made by the Honorary Secretary to the meeting he mentioned that opinions have been expressed that the cash balances kept in hand are too large, but pointed out that heavy awards may come in at any time, and that frequent buying and selling of securities would be likely to lead to more loss than gain. The sums invested form an insurance against failure in case of war or great sickness, when the demands may be rapid and large. The last six years have fortunately been exempt from such calamities. In answer to a suggestion that the awards should in all cases be proportionate to the amount of subscription, it was remarked that the fund was not altogether an insurance office, but was originally, to a large extent, a charity, on which grounds the Government grant is given and many bachelor officers subscribe. To give help to the widow and orphan at the moment when most urgently needed is a great consideration with the committee, and the recommendations of the local committees are at once accepted, so far as they are consistent with the rules of the fund without further question, and assistance is sent with the least possible delay. In cases where money was to be remitted to England to widows who have proceeded home at once and at their own expense, the Honorary Secretary recommended, and the committee confirmed, the decision that all awards are payable in rupees, on the ground that the fund contemplates payment in rupees only. In 1877 the number of officers subscribing to the fund was 590, a small proportion compared with the number in this country; if a fair proportion of officers in each regiment and battery subscribed, there would not then be the necessity for raising regimental subscriptions for charity in these cases. Such subscriptions also are generally late, and cannot but be humiliating to the recipient.

THE first number of the Roman Urdu Journal, already alluded to in our columns, gives the raison d'être and the objects of the Society, which has been formed to advocate the substitution of the Roman alphabet for the Oriental characters. The chief objection to the use of the vernacular characters "apart from their multiplicity," is that "they are all vitiated by numerous practical defects, which render them unfit for purposes of record and reference, and as a medium for imparting an advanced education." The defects of the Persian character are enumerated; the classical and popular Talq, being declared unsuited for type printing, while want of clearness and distinctness of letters, omission of short vowels and want of capitals, as well as minor devices of Roman printing, are prominently specified. The Society proposes to discuss, among other kindred topics, the defects and difficulties of Oriental characters in courts of law, as well as for maps and scientific works of reference, and the comparative merits of Roman Urdu and of English as the medium of education in Northern India. As a first fruits of its labours a Roman Urdu version of "Robinson Crusoe" is about to be published by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co.

THE growth of cotton-spinning enterprise in the Madras Presidency bids fair to attain considerable proportions. At present in Madras there are three cotton spinning mills working very satisfactorily, viz., the Buckingham Mill Company, the Royapooram Spinning Mill Company, and the Choolay Mill Company. The Buckingham Mill Company is solely the undertaking of the European merchants in Madras, superintended by Mr. Brennand, of great experience in spinning and weaving, both in Lancashire and in India. The mill at present contains a number of carding-machines, rulers, mules, &c., and about 16,500 spindles, but the engines are of sufficient power to drive over 30,000 spindles, and about 400 looms. The mill at Royapooram is purely the undertaking of the Parsee community of Bombay, and is superintended by one Bavanjee Eduljee Petal. The mill works almost on the same principle, except in the turning out of twist; the latter turns out twist of Nos. 4, 6, 11, 16, 18, and 28, while the former turns out only Nos. 20 and 21 at present. The mill at Choolay is on the same principle, but on a small scale, superintended by natives. The Madras Athenæum expects that, by the beginning of next year, the "Imperial Spinning and Weaving Mill Company" will be started by Messrs. Wilson and Co., merchants, Madras, with a capital of about 1,000,000 rupees, divided into 1,000 shares. The services of efficient men in spinning and weaving are being engaged.

REFERRING to rumours as to the projected reforms in Asia Minor, the London Correspondent of the Manchester Guardian has reason to believe that the first practical proposition of the British Government has been with reference to the collection of taxes. It was proposed in the first instance to ask the Sultan to place European officials over the nineteen villayets into which Turkey in Asia is divided, or such modification of those districts as might be deemed expedient, but this was felt to be a too serious interference with the authority of the Porte, and pressure is now being brought to bear upon the Sultan to induce him to entrust the financial administration of each administrative province to the hands of European, and presumably English gentlemen, not perhaps precisely upon the plan recently introduced into Egypt, but in a cognate manner. If the Porte should agree to these appointments, it is not impossible that England might see its way to finding Turkey a little of the money, without which her efforts for good must be paralysed for the present; but no determination has been come to by the Government as to the way in which such money should be obtained.

A TELEGRAM, dated Larnaca 27th inst., received by the Director-General of the Army Medical Department from Sir A. D. Home, says that the health of the troops in Cyprus is generally much improved. There are in camp and at Larnaca ninety-nine sick in 1,666 men. The 42nd (980) at Kyrenia, not included in the statement, is believed to have very few sick—no return has been received, but report says barely any. In the Royal Engineers at Nicosia, the most unhealthy part of the force, there are twenty-six sick in about 180 men, and the cases are severe. Since landing the force has lost eight men by death—sunstroke three; fever, three; cancer, one; dysentery, one. The heat is still great.

THE detachment of Royal Engineers under orders to proceed to Cyprus are to be taken out in the new troopship Humber, which will also take out a large quantity of stores from the Royal Arsenal. The men will embark on the 6th September.

LIEUT. M. B. SEAGER, of the Royal Marine Light Infantry, has been appointed Assistant Civil Commissioner in the Island of Cyprus. Mr. Seager is a barrister-at-law, and was called to the degree of the utter bar of the Middle Temple in June, 1871.

UPON the recommendation of the Government of India, and in consideration of the distinguished services rendered during a long series of years to India by the late Colonel Meadows Taylor, the Secretary of State has sanctioned a pension of £100 a year to each of Colonel Taylor's two daughters for life.

WE are authorised to announce that Mr. C. E. Johnston has been admitted as a partner in the long-established firm of Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., with whom he has been connected for twenty-one years. Our readers who have had personal dealings with the firm will agree with the sentiment that no better deserved promotion is recorded in the pages of the Official Gazette.

Odds and Ends.

MR. E. R. DOUGLAS has been appointed to be Assistant Director-General of the Post Office of India.

CAPTAIN C. N. MARTILLI will probably succeed the late Captain Burton as Political Agent at Bikaner.

MR. A. P. DOUTRE has been confirmed by the Secretary of State as Acting Consular Agent for France at Coconada, and Mr. F. Muraglia as Acting Consul for Italy at Bombay.

MR. ALFRED CLARKE EDWARDS, M.A., of Lincoln College, Oxford, barrister-at-law, has been appointed by the Secretary of State to the fourth class of the Bengal Educational service. Mr. Edwards was a scholar of his college, and obtained a second class in the final classical schools at Oxford in 1873.

SIR WILLIAM HERSCHELL, Bengal Civil Service, now on furlough, has, it is said, taken orders, and his return to India is considered improbable.

THE Bombay Gazette understands that a telegram was received in Bombay on Wednesday announcing that Cook and Stanley, the celebrated billiard players, will arrive here in the middle of October, and it is just possible that Cook and Roberts will play their match for the championship of the world in India.

THE Madras Times understands that Mr. Porter, the new tutor to the young Maharajah of Mysor, considers the progress already made by his Highness in his English studies more satisfactory than the Bangalor Press led the outside public to believe. Mr. Porter has set about his work in earnest, and is much liked by the Prince and the leading men in Mysor.

THE Rangoon Gazette has heard that Dr. Oswald, the Surgeon-General, will be relieved either in October or November next by an officer from Madras.

Bharut Skungskarat says that the Collector of Pubna discovered a new Hindu sect, established there some twenty years ago. This sect goes by the name of Sammarga or Kaluik. The disciples of this sect acknowledge the Shastra of Kilkabach and Argul; and do not observe the rules of caste distinction. They celebrate their religious festivals from the 15th to 25th of Ashin and Choitra. They number now nearly 1,000 souls, and are daily increasing.

THE report of the Aboo Lawrence School for the official year ending 31st March, 1878, states that the health of the children, who numbered seventy-eight, was unusually healthy, and no death has occurred there for the last four years. During the year under review the premises of the school were enlarged and almost rebuilt, but for the want of funds a project of providing separate hospital accommodation had to be abandoned.

THE military stations of Julpigoree and Buxa are to be transferred from the Eastern Frontier to the Presidency District. This rearrangement has been rendered desirable by the opening of the Northern Bengal Railway.

A NATIVE journal says that the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is about to sanction 110 scholarships to the value of Rs. 3 per mensem, for the students of the lowest class vernacular schools. Out of these, 23 will be given to the Burdwian circle, 22 to the Presidency circle, 28 to Rajshahye, 26 to Dacca, 9 to Cooch Behar, 4 to Patna, 27 to Bhaugulpore, 19 to Orissa, and 16 to Chittagong.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.—It is notified that the Hon. W. H. Ravenscroft, Acting Colonial Secretary, and A. Haly, Esq., Director of the Colombo Museum, have been chosen as members of the committee appointed to supervise the Colombo Museum. His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to make the following appointments:—G. W. Templer, Esq., to be Acting Assistant at Ratnapura to the Government Agent for the Western Province, and Superintendent of the Prison at Ratnapura, with effect from the 1st August. W. P. Conolly, Esq., to be Acting Fiscal for the Central Province, Additional Commissioner of Requests and Police Magistrate, Kandy and Panwila, and Coroner for the district of Kandy and for the Divisions of Upper and Lower Dumbura, and Superintendent of the Bogambra and old Jails at Kandy, with effect from the 13th September. W. J. S. Boake, Esq., to be Acting District Judge, Commissioner of Requests, and Police Magistrate, Negombo, and Coroner for the District of Negombo, with effect from the 13th September. G. S. Williams, Esq., to continue to act as District Judge, &c., Tangalla, until further orders. His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint H. W. F. C. Brodhurst, Esq., to be Extra Office Assistant at Colombo to the Government Agent of the Western Province, with effect from this date.—Ceylon Gazette.

MOZAMBIQUE OPIUM.—Not long ago a Portuguese gentleman visited Malwa for the purpose of ascertaining how to grow opium; and under the patronage of the Portuguese Government, a farm of 50,000 acres has now been established in Mozambique by the enterprising traveller, who is allowed to grow as much opium and extract as much juice and profit as he can for twelve years, after which period the patron Government steps in and takes the pickings. The question whether or not East-Africa can become a successful rival to North India in the opium trade will be probably decided, not so much by the effect of climate as by the cost of collecting the drug.

A ROMANTIC INCIDENT.—The "Border Shikari" writes from the far North-West some account of an interesting shooting-party in Swat. Mian Gul, eldest son and successor of the late Akhund of Swat, last month organised and carried out a shooting expedition on a large scale in the direction of Kashkar. He was accompanied by a considerable retinue, including some of the chief Khans; his younger brother, who has adopted the life of an ascetic in imitation of his father, was left behind in charge of the public dole, which is given weekly to the deserving faithful out of the funds of this mountain Melchisedec, priest and prince. The famine in Swat is said to be very sore throughout the land, and the weekly dole established by the late Akhund is almost the only means of subsistence for many of the Swatis. And in consequence of this famine, Mian Gul's expedition was cut short, after he had secured a fair bag, and had received the present of a hawk and three horses from the chief of Kashgar. A romantic incident occurred in the course of this shooting expedition. The young prince had occasion to pass not far from the haunt of one Sherdil Khan of Aladand, a disaffected chieftain who has been in disgrace; and at one of the halting-places the young and beautiful wife of Sherdil presented herself before the prince, threw herself at his feet, and implored pardon and peace for her husband. It is satisfactory to relate that Mian Gul's chivalrous feelings were equal to the occasion, he raised the lady, treated her with the utmost respect, and promised the husband his forgiveness and favour.—Indian Weekly Review and Sportsman.

THE MISSION TO CABUL.

THE steady approximation of the Russian and English frontiers in Central Asia has been declared by good authorities to be a work of time. It may be slow, but that it is sure, argue those who profess to see in the absorption of the Central Asia Khanates by Russia, only an extension of the rule of order and civilisation, over semi-barbarous countries, that we prefer to leave to their own devices. The succession of geographical explorations, diplomatic missions, and military advance and annexation, repeats itself with mathematical regularity on the part of the Russians in Central Asia. Their friendly and conciliatory spirit, the declared opinion of the Czar that "extension of territory is extension of weakness," and that "he had no desire of going further south," have been from time to time overborne by the necessities of the position. In the words of Lord Granville's despatch of January 7, 1874, referring to the then reported intention of sending an expedition against Merv, "circumstances may occur, as they have more than once occurred before, to force the Russian Government into a course to which they are on principle opposed." But that these repeated advances of frontier, the fresh expeditions necessary to give immunity from attack to the most recently-acquired territory, are in any sense part of a plan, or have any ultimate intention of disturbing the Anglo-Asiatic Power, is in the minds of some quite incredible. The recent military preparations in Turkestan, the expedition, the object of which was so mysterious, could not have for their object an invasion of India. The embassy forced upon the reluctant Amir of Kabul has nothing to do with intrigues against the peace of our frontiers. This is a view of the present situation in Central Asia that is vigorously upheld. The Times Correspondent is charged with being an "Anglo-Indian Jingo," because, to use the words of the Examiner, "he asks us to believe that the Russians are ready to sow sedition throughout the length and breadth of India; that the Russians are equally ready to follow up the advantage which they will then gain with an invasion from the Oxus, and that our proposed Kabul Mission is absolutely necessary for the purpose of countervailing the effect of the Russian intrigues." The arguments against the present possibility of such a scheme as a Russian invasion of India in force, especially by the Oxus-Peshawar route, are forcible enough. But surely there is quite sufficient potentiality of mischief in the Russian, we will not say, intrigues, but diplomatic interference with the Amir to make it a simple necessity for the Government of India to despatch a Mission to Kabul. The recollection of our former disastrous interference in the affairs of Kabul may well serve to make us avoid the "divided counsels and delay in seizing opportunities" which were the cause of all our disasters. But we fail, however, to see how they can be used as an argument against the present Mission. As a morning contemporary says, "the question of Kabul is only the question of Constantinople." Let us, if possible, provide against the fertile oasis of Balkh, being made a permanent set-off against our occupation of the island of Cyprus. If we had any hesitation in coming to the conclusion that this last Russian move meant menace, if not mischief, the declarations of the Russian Press would speedily remove it, that is to say, unless we are disposed to treat all Russian utterances of antagonism as untrue, and credit nothing but professions of inactive amity. How it is regarded in Constantinople, we may judge from the fact, that a recent issue of La Turquie contains a translation of an article from the Moscow Gazette, which is worth perusal:—"The time has come to augment the influence exercised by Russia on all the populations of Central Asia. This will be now easier because the ruler of Afghanistan is on bad terms with our adversaries. The development of our influence on the confines of the possessions of the Empress of India will be a natural reply to the seizure of Cyprus by the English. There are in Asia two political forces marching against each other, and destined by fatality to meet. England has desired to become the immediate neighbour of Russia in Asia Minor it is quite natural that Russia in her turn desires to approach the English frontiers of India. On the confines of India, to the North-West, there are warlike populations, which form, so to speak, the advanced guard of those populations of Central Asia of which the ambition has ever been, from time immemorial, to conquer the plains of India. England understands that every new diplomatic or military success achieved by Russia in Central Asia hastens the period when she will be able to extend and consolidate her influence in the countries bordering on the English frontier. The present moment seems very favourable for this line of action." The Government of India seems to us to accept this as the true explanation of the recent sudden diplomatic advance, and the approval bestowed on the prompt counter-move will be the more widely given as the circumstances of the case are more clearly understood. Sher Ali, the ruler, who may be supposed, to borrow from a current caricature, to be just now fully sensible of the truth, "how happy could I be with either," is a most undesirable ally or protégé. Our conciliatory policy, our substantial benefits, have been requited by him with faithlessness and sulky ill-humour. An "Afghan of the Afghans, fickle, treacherous, and ungrateful," he at the same time has an overweening self-conceit, and, doubtless, thinks that he can play off the Russians against the English to his own profit. We view with pleasure the selection of the members of the Mission; their intimate knowledge of the characters and policy of the Afghans and their Amir, gives us good hope that mistakes will not be committed, and the firmness of character of the Envoy will not be trifled with. It may be thought that our past inactivity contrasted with the fresh renown acquired by Russia, the conquests achieved in Central Asia, and the victories magnified by rumour, which have been won in Armenia, must immensely overweight the Russian scale. It remains to be seen whether at this juncture an assured succession to the elder son, whose brother and rival has been removed by death, a clear manifestation of our purpose to preserve as an outwork those territories that should be a neutral zone, may not outweigh that prestige in the estimation of the Kabul despot. The present complication finds us in the occupation of Quettah; may this not be an element in the calculations for the future? If Sher Ali dreads the Power that draws nearer and nearer on the north, he will at the same time recognise the facts that the distance from Quettah to Kandahar is 150 miles, from Candahar to Kabul about 200; and from Kandahar to Herat about 280; so that in point of time there would be but little delay in placing a strong force before any of these positions. It may be unpalatable to the Amir, but it will soon become plainer even than it is now, that, whether for defence of the territories on behalf of the Affghans themselves, or for the insuring the inviolability of our own frontiers, a strongly-occupied post at Quettah must hold one end of the country, while Peshawur protects or restrains the other.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL"

SIR,—I have read with interest your remarks on the debates which have, on two recent occasions, taken place with regard to the finances of India, and I shall feel much obliged if you will allow me to offer a few remarks on the same subject. According to the figures of the Under Secretary for India, in his speech on the Indian Budget last Tuesday, the three years reviewed in that document appear to have resulted thus:—

1876-77	Deficit	...	...	£2,182,778
1877-78	Deficit	...	...	3,383,381
				5,566,159
1877-79	Estimated surplus	...	...	2,156,000
	Net deficit	...	...	£3,410,159

These figures, however, afford but a partial view of the situation, as the expenditure on "Public Works Extraordinary" (now officially designated as "productive") has been excluded from them. That expenditure, during the three years, amounts to £3,809,284, £4,903,285, and £4,555,000 respectively; and if these sums be taken into account, the actual result of the period under review will be found to be a deficit of no less than £16,677,728. When it is considered that this sum is nearly equal to half the net annual revenue of India; that taxation in that country has already been pushed much beyond the limits prescribed by sound policy, and that the land revenue, which is the principal source of income, has, in spite of increased assessments, been steadily declining of late years, it will perhaps be admitted that the finances of India are in a very critical condition, and that the subject urgently calls for the attention of the many in this country who are deeply and personally interested in the safety and welfare of our Indian Empire.

In 1873, Lord Hobart, then Governor of Madras, wrote:—"I believe that recent fiscal measures in taxation have caused most serious mischief, and that taxes are now paid with curses the deeper because they are scarcely heard." Since then fresh taxes have annually been levied, excepting during the short term of Lord Northbrook's administration; and this year a Licence-tax has been imposed in the Bengal Provinces, which reaches incomes as low as Rs. 100 a-year or 3s. 6d. a week; while £500,000 have been added to the burdens of the impoverished and famine-stricken populations of Madras and Bombay, by an increase in the salt duty, a tax which presses with the greatest severity on the poorest classes of the community.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, Llandudno, August 20.

A NEW PRIVILEGE TO BRITISH OFFICERS.

The recent remarks relating to Medical Boards in Bombay have at last produced some beneficial result, as the Government of India, at the instance of the Commander-in-Chief, have very properly rescinded the order requiring certain officers who have already passed a Board of Medical Officers up-country to appear before a second committee at the Presidencies. We say certain officers, because the class favoured by exemption from the trial of a second Board comprise but a minority of the whole of the services, being only the officers of British regiments. Even officers belonging to British regiments, but holding any employment under the Indian Governments, or on the staff of the Army, will still be obliged to pass through the old routine of dual Medical Boards with all their grievances and inconveniences. Similarly officers of the Indian Service are still under the old regulations, and whether military or civil must satisfy the Board in the Presidency as well as the Board up-country that their state of health is such as to render it necessary for them to proceed to Europe. There is no manner of reason why Leave regulations should be relaxed in favour of the British officer only, for on the whole he is more fortunate in this respect than his brother militaire of the Indian service; but the result appears as if the authorities had more confidence in the abilities or working of an up-country Board, composed of medical officers of the British service, than they have in a Mofussil Board of officers of the Indian service; for the class of officers exempted from the second Board at the Presidency appear before a primary committee of officers belonging to the British army, while the larger sections of officials not exempted from the dual Board receive their primary leave at the hands of a Board of Indian medical officers. We may regard this recent order as the sharp end of the wedge, and we do not despair of seeing the new regulation speedily applied to the services throughout. One properly constituted Medical Board should be quite sufficient to determine the desirability or the necessity of an officer's proceeding for the sake of his health to Europe or anywhere else. Indeed, we even go further and say, that a Mofussil Medical Board is better situated to form a correct opinion than any strange committee at the Presidency can possibly be. In the first place, the up-country Board will usually have the benefit of direct or personal communication with the medical attendant on the invalid, and it is simply a matter of common sense to believe that the medical man who has seen the sick person daily, or even more frequently, and who has probably known his constitution for years, will be better able to form a correct view of matters than even presidency doctors at the port of embarkation, who are strangers, and who can only take a comparatively cursory glance at the invalid when he comes before their Board. The applicant is, moreover, not unfrequently known to members of the Mofussil Board, and under that system of gossip going on in Indian cantonments, as in English villages, the case and circumstances of the invalid have probably been well talked over, and any deception rendered the more impossible. It is not, however, to be believed that officers, whether civil or military, do very frequently attempt to impose on either medical men or Medical Boards. Of course such endeavours may be made sometimes, for people hold different opinions as to what constitutes an ungentlemanly or even a dishonest procedure. It may also be admitted that men may get "hipped," and think themselves sick when they are well, and may so unwittingly endeavour to impose on the doctors. But whether an imposture is attempted with reason, or without reason, knowingly or unknowingly, we assert that the Mofussil Board is best calculated to meet the case as it should be met. If full responsibility were placed on individual medical men, and on Mofussil Boards, all presidency dual committees might be abolished—just as they have been already abolished for officers of the British service—to the advantage of all concerned. Medical officers at the presidency would be relieved of an unpleasant and constantly recurring duty; and still more to the point, invalid officers coming to the presidency would be guaranteed from the fatigue and uncertainty entailed upon them by the present system. It certainly is little conducive to the recovery of a sick man that he should be obliged to drive about Bombay in search of the different officials, and in quest of the scattered offices with which he must do business, before being permitted to proceed on sick leave. He has to find the doctors and the doctors' Board, before which he has to appear on a stated occasion, and until he has passed the doctors' Board he cannot feel sure that he will not be again remanded to his regiment or station; especially, if, as not unfrequently happens, he has improved in health and spirits by the change from the mofussil and by the prospect of a trip home. A man generally disposes of all his household gods, his horses, his dogs, and his gun, before leaving his station for the voyage home. Rejection by the Mofussil Board after this procedure is a serious matter pecuniarily, even to a bachelor; to many married men it would be ruin, for buying and selling, unless in the hands of a professional artiste, are usually very losing games. We cannot but hope that the order exempting British officers from the dual Board ordeal will be extended to all classes; so far as we can see there is little in favour of the two-Board system, compared with what may be advanced against it. The class of officers affected, comprising as it does both civil and military, and officers on staff employ, is so large, that judicious protest on their part can scarcely fail to relieve them from an incubus which has been too long borne.

STATION TALK.

RAWALPINDI, July 24.—Notwithstanding the energetic measures adopted by the Maharajah of Kashmir to relieve the famine-stricken people in his dominions last year, the utter failure of the crops, together with the heavy mortality, has resulted in a reappearance of dire want this year also, and the latest reports from Jummoo state that every day the numbers requiring relief are increasing at an appalling rate, rendering the importation of grain from India in large quantities into Kashmir necessary; and, accordingly, his Highness has deputed his wakil to purchase from 100,000 to 150,000 maunds of grain in the Punjab, which will be sent to Kashmir via Murree. Great difficulty is being experienced in finding sufficient carriage, but as the Government of India has directed the local authorities to assist the wakil in this respect, it is hoped the grain will be expeditiously transported. This heavy drain on our markets will inevitably result in sending up the prices, which is much to be deprecated, but it is an evil that must be endured, as otherwise the starving thousands in Kashmir would perish wholesale. Happily for us the khareef prospects continue excellent, although the young crops are being slightly damaged by the appearance of a small species of caterpillar, known as the "toka" amongst the natives. The rains which set in so auspiciously have ceased, and for the past week we have had no rain whatever, and the country is commencing again to look parched and sunburnt, whilst the weather is disgustingly hot and close. In the city and sudder-bazaar there is a good deal of small-pox and fever.—A police constable at Nowshera was murdered in broad daylight a couple of days ago; it appears he saw a suspicious-looking Pathan on the road, and was going up to examine him, when the Pathan suddenly drew a pistol from under his clothes and shot the constable dead. The murderer was allowed to escape, notwithstanding that the murder was committed close to a police chowkey where there was a guard, consisting of a havildar and three or four constables. The matter is being investigated by the police authorities, and will, it is expected, result in the whole of the guard being tried for culpable neglect of duty. The sooner the Arms Act is introduced into the Punjab, and more especially in the trans-Indus districts, the better, for so long as the Pathans are allowed to carry arms, there is no security against assassination and murder. They should be deprived of all offensive weapons, even down to the large-sized knives which all of them carry.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE Times of India mentions there are rumours, for the truth of which, however, it cannot vouch, of the imminent retirement of Mr. Whiteley Stokes from the Legal Membership of Council and from India.

THE sudden death is reported of Dr. A. W. Cooke of Calcutta. He was returning from a visit to Assam, and was found dead in his bed on the morning of the 22nd ultimo, on board the steamer Nepaul. It is surmised that Dr. Cooke died of heart disease.

THE Government of India in the Public Works Department is said to have sanctioned an outlay of upwards of six lakhs of rupees for the extension of the Rajpootana State Railway to the Sambhur Lake.

THE Native State of Rewah is said to have recently paid to the Allahabad Treasury the sum of Rs. 50,000, being the balance of the loan of ten lakhs of rupees granted by the British Government, in full payment of the said loan, with interest.—Indian Daily News.

COURT OF WARDS.—In 1876-77 there were ninety-seven estates under the Court of Wards' superintendence in the N.W. Provinces, comprising the entirety or shares in 3,224 villages, which yielded a rental of Rs. 2,400,000, and paid to Government Rs. 1,225,000 on account of land revenue, cesses, and patwari rate. More than half a lakh of rupees was expended on improvements during the year; and good work was done by the Court in rescuing encumbered properties from ruin.

ARMY DOOLY.—On the completion of experiments, after an extended trial, Dr. Bourk's Pattern Army Dooly has, on the recommendation of the Surgeon-General of her Majesty's British Forces, and with the concurrence and approval of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, been adopted as the "Standard Pattern Army Dooly," as it meets all the requirements of an army dooly both in cantonments and in the field. The advantages claimed for it are that it is lighter, easier in motion, pleasanter to carry, and more portable than the old dooly, and that it also forms a good camp bed as well as a good stretcher.

JESSOR.—Another case of police oppression has cropped up in Jessor. Two men were arrested for theft, and one, Hunnoor, admitted having stolen certain property, but would not indicate where it could be found. The head constable, who had made the arrest, thereupon confined Hunnoor and his companion for four days, instead of at once bringing them before a magistrate. Torture was resorted to during this period, until at last Hunnoor managed to escape. It was, however, supposed from his injuries that he committed suicide; and the evidence of a surgeon who examined the body was conclusive. A policeman turned Queen's evidence, and the head constable was convicted and sentenced to seven years' penal servitude, two of his subordinates being punished with a term of five years. The Calcutta High Court have rejected an appeal to mitigate the punishment.

THE DISTRESS IN KASHMIR.—The following are the measures adopted by the State to alleviate the distress in Kashmir:—1. Grain to the extent of Rs. 4,00,000 is being purchased through specially deputed agents at Rawalpindi, Jhelum, Gujarkhan, Chakwal, Lahor, Jammu, Nowshera, and Minawar (the three last-mentioned places are in the Maharaja's territories). Grain for about Rs. 1,00,000 has already been bought at Jhelum, Rawalpindi, Nowshera, and Jammu, and delivered at Gohala, Shopian, and Ramban respectively. 2. It has been publicly notified that any trader who imports grain into Kashmir shall be entitled to a reward from the State equal to 5 per cent. in value of the grain imported. No customs duty shall be levied on such grains, and no interference made in the free sales in Kashmir. The State further guarantees that any quantity of grain which may not sell in Kashmir will be purchased by the State by paying Rs. 3½ per cent. on actual purchases, which ought to be attested by the Maharaja's Amin at the custom-houses. Poor houses have been opened in four districts, and relief works opened, including forts, roads and embankments. 5. The well-to-do community has subscribed a fair sum, to which H.H. the Maharaja has liberally contributed, and out of this sum "sattus" mixed with sugar are distributed in about twenty places in Srinagar, each pauper receiving three-eighths of a seer. 6. A central committee composed of Government officials and the chief inhabitants of Srinagar has been formed to manage all the measures taken to mitigate the severity of the dearth, and to report thereon.—Civil and Military Gazette.

BROKERS' MEETING AT CALCUTTA.—A meeting was held by the Exchange Brokers on July 27, in consequence of information received by the last mail that the managers of the Indian Banks in London had decided upon reducing the rates of brokerage by one-half. This news has roused the whole fraternity of brokers, and an attempt to reduce the rates in all branches of the business is anticipated. A few days ago the stock-brokers were put to work on the reduced scale; it has now come upon the exchange-brokers; and it will next be the turn of produce-brokers. These are the gloomy apprehensions among brokers, and as the reductions proposed at present will affect a large body of people in a very serious way, it was with the view of getting the matter reconsidered that the meeting was held. A similar attempt to reduce the brokerage by one-half was made about eight years ago. Meetings were then held, the opinion of the merchants was taken, and the matter represented at home. The managers then, in deference to the decided opinions of the merchants, that brokerage was not too high, instructed their agents in this country to continue work on the old scale. The present proposal for reduction, however, comes from home, and the merchants here are not quite so unanimous as to the advisability of continuing the present scale; so that at the meeting on the present occasion the members were not so decided as to what should be done as they had been at the former one. Many old and well-known faces were absent on Saturday, and the meeting was chiefly composed of those who had not fought the previous battle. A suggestion was made for the formation of an association to protect the interests of brokers. It seemed to meet with general approval. Gentlemen were thereupon nominated to form a committee to draw up rules for the proposal association.

THE REVENUE OF THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.

The Madras Presidency is known to be one that yields a very large revenue to the Indian Government, and it has in the last few years made a considerable advance in this respect. The actual income from all sources was about five or six years ago not much above eight crores of rupees, but with the introduction of additional burdens upon the people in the shape of Registration Acts, Stamp Laws and revised systems of Revenue Settlement, the income has risen to ten crores of rupees—the actuals for 1875-76 being given at Rs. 10,47,57,427. Taking these and the previous year's figures as their guide, the Government calculated upon an income during the official year 1876-77 of a little above ten crores. But it is explained in the Administration Report issued a few days ago that the revenue had considerably fallen off, and that the actual income of the year was close upon nine crores, or Rs. 8,70,38,303. This result is clearly attributed to the famine. Before the first six months of the official year had passed the effects of the famine on the treasuries of the presidency were manifest. The inflow of revenue was checked to an unprecedented degree, whilst the expenditure rose so rapidly that it was soon apparent that the revenues of the presidency were quite inadequate to meet the requirements of the famine-stricken districts. The receipts of 1876-77 fell short of those of the previous year by Rs. 1,77,00,000, whilst the charges, including those on Public Works, exceeded the charges of 1875-76 by Rs. 1,50,00,000, making a total disturbance in the budget of about three and a quarter crores. The consequence was that a considerable decline took place in remittances to the Secretary of State either in bills or in cash, the net amount remitted being only Rs. 30,16,000, against Rs. 2,84,46,000 in 1876-77. The land revenue showed a decline in the year from Rs. 4,54,50,128 to Rs. 3,29,65,750; excise on spirits and drugs showed a decline of about seven and a half lakhs, and customs and salt about six lakhs. The salt revenue in the presidency comes after land. The income in 1875-76 was Rs. 1,35,37,190, against Rs. 1,02,19,528 in the following year. The stamp revenue Rs. 49,90,366, and Post-office income Rs. 10,50,061. Taking the imperial receipts as a whole, there was a gross increase of Rs. 2,78,189 and a gross decrease of Rs. 1,45,57,113 in 1876-77, compared with 1875-76. The increase was chiefly owing to interest on arrears of land revenue obtained from one zemindary tract. The Post-office receipts were large, owing to the increase of correspondence consequent on the famine. The gain by exchange was small. The expenditure showed a total of Rs. 3,60,85,982, against Rs. 2,77,06,181. There was a large increase on account of law and justice, owing chiefly to the adjustment of salaries of acting officers. Famine expenditure in the year was a little more than eighty-one lakhs, of which sixty-two lakhs were spent in the purchase of grain. There was an increase in charges under many heads, such as administration, stamps, customs, medical and ecclesiastical. Under the last head the increase is attributed to the fact that fewer chaplains were on leave than in the previous year, and to the Lord Bishop of Madras having acted for the greater portion of the year as Metropolitan of India on the full pay of the appointment. The expenses connected with the Delhi Assemblage and the local rejoicings on 1st January, 1877, amounted to a little over two lakhs of rupees.—Madras Standard.

Miscellaneous.

THE EUROPEAN BURIAL-GROUND AT ARCONUM.—Government have declined to sanction the construction of a wall round the European Burial-ground at Arconum as a famine work, or as a charge against famine relief; and stated that the work must be carried out from funds provided in the usual course.

ENGLISH PLOUGHS.—Mr. Harman's agricultural tour in Maisur to exhibit the advantages of the use of English ploughs has evidently impressed the cultivators in favour of these implements, for he has received orders to make upwards of fifty similar ploughs for different rayats.

GENERAL PROSPECTS.—The prospects continue to improve, and more rain has fallen since our last notice of the season. The damage done by locusts, too, is not so bad as was apprehended, and altogether we may congratulate ourselves on having escaped what every one feared was going to be a repetition of the terrible times we lately passed through.

MADRAS MEDICAL COLLEGE.—In April last, the Government sanctioned the admission of twelve entrants to the Senior Department of the Medical College on the 1st of October next, while the number of applications registered are twenty-eight. On the recommendation of the Principal of the College and of the Director of Public Instruction the Government have extended the number of admissions from twelve to twenty-eight Candidates.

THE PRINCE OF ARCOT.—His Highness the Prince of Arcot, G.C.S.I., completed his fifty-seventh year on the 25th ult., and the day was celebrated by his Highness was the Palace at Royapettah with due ceremony. A grand Durbar was held at the Amir Mahal, at which the Government agent of Chepauk, the Rajah of Pittapore, and his Highness's family and officers were present. A salute of fifteen guns was fired on the occasion from his Highness's battery at the Amir Mahal.—Madras Times.

CATTLE POISONING.—In a large community of Europeans such as characterises Madras too much care cannot be exercised that no poisonous meats should find their way into the markets patronised by them. The Chemical Examiner has recently had some intestines of cattle sent him for analysis under the following circumstances: It appears that the inhabitants of the Cuddapah and Bellary Taluqs of the Madras Presidency, since the famine, have had their cattle poisoned by the Chuckler caste for the sake of their flesh and hide. The ryots, in all such instances, are the sufferers. Now that we have drawn the attention of the "powers that be" to this nefarious practice, we trust it will be speedily stamped out.—Madras Athenæum.

THE PODOCOTTAH STATE.—The Poodocottah correspondent of the Madras Times, writing on the 22nd July, gives the following:—"Last week, the Political Agent, Mr. Sewell, and the Honourable Seshia Sastriar, C.S.I., came here at the request of the Rajah, and at a conference held between them, the contemplated change in the administration of this Native State has been finally settled, and Mr. Seshia Sastriar will assume the reins of Government on the 7th prox., on a salary of Rs. 1,000 per mensem. On the evening of Friday last a grand Durbar was held at the Palace, at which the Political Agent and Mr. Seshia Sastriar were invited. All the principal officers of the State were requested to attend the Durbar to meet the latter gentleman, and an unusual splendour was displayed by a new State chair, or throne, exhibited for the occasion, on which the Rajah sat, magnificently clad in full State dress. The general public is jubilant over the change of administration, which is now a settled thing, and it may be said that 'good times are coming' for Poodocottah."

PROSPECTS IN MYSOR.—The interim report for the 3rd of August says: "Weather continues most favourable." We extract as follows from Statement No. 77, regarding Famine Relief Operations in the Province of Mysor, for the week ending the 27th July:—Rain fell during the week over nearly the whole province, especially in the western districts, and agricultural prospects are everywhere encouraging. Locusts have almost disappeared, and there is reason to hope that the injury done by them has not been so great as was apprehended. Prices show a slight tendency in some places to fall, but they are still very high, and the decrease of 2,064 on Relief Works is chiefly due to an increased demand for field labour. Fever is still very prevalent in the province. The imports of grain by rail have been 1,098 tons, or 272 tons less than last week; 413 tons were exported from Bangalore into the interior, eleven tons more than last week. There was a decrease of 294 coolies on Civil Relief Works and of 1,770 on those of the Public Works Department. Of the whole numbers employed 91 per cent. are in the three districts of Bangalur, Tumkur and Chitaldrug. In Famine Hospitals there were 2,339 patients, nineteen more than last week. There were 10,304 paupers relieved in the village grain dole, 792 less than last week.

THE TRADE OF MADRAS.—In the month of June the total value of goods imported into Madras by sea was Rs. 33,45,419, exclusive of treasure, valued at Rs. 75,028, against Rs. 46,71,048, the value of goods imported in June, 1877. The quantity of cotton twist, grey, imported was 669,315 lbs., value Rs. 4,84,435; dyed, 322,620 lbs., valued at Rs. 2,44,968; gold thread, 41,816 oz., valued at Rs. 99,708; grain, 126,182 cwt., valued at Rs. 7,02,033; malt liquors, 16,377 gallons, valued at Rs. 31,197; metals, wrought, 513 tons, valued at Rs. 135,725; piece goods, cotton and linen, 145,657 pieces, valued Rs. 5,67,736; railway stores, Rs. 3,04,435 for 2,235 tons; silk, Rs. 1,29,684 for 24,814 lbs.; spirits, Rs. 59,191 for 6,037 gallons; stationery valued at Rs. 42,429; timber at Rs. 1,07,959; wines and liquors, Rs. 60,910 for 8,156 gallons. The value of goods exported was Rs. 23,41,006, namely, coffee, 4,975 cwt., valued at Rs. 1,49,265; cotton, Rs. 4,80,120, for 21,433 cwt.; dyes, Rs. 14,087 for 4,973 cwt.; hides and skins, Rs. 10,20,173 for 43,723 corges; indigo, Rs. 2,68,373 for 1,268 cwt.; oils, Rs. 36,356 for 1,872 cwt.; piece goods, Rs. 1,60,923 for 2,202 corges; tobacco and cigars, Rs. 2,472; sugar, Rs. 500 for 50 cwt.; horns, Rs. 13,743 for 52,000 number; oils, Rs. 36,356 for 1,872 cwt.—Madras Standard.

MUSKETRY INSTRUCTION.—In view to the fuller development of the present system of organisation of the Native army of this Presidency, as well as to further test the fitness of the native officers for the performance of those duties which, looking to their improved pay and position, may be fairly expected from them, the Commander-in-Chief directs that from the commencement of the next annual course of musketry, the native officers who, in the opinion of their commanding officers, are qualified for the task, shall personally conduct the practices of their respective troops and companies; sign the registers and summaries; and be held responsible for the thorough efficiency of their men in this the most important of the soldier's exercises: the close supervision of commanding and wing officers will nevertheless be required. His Excellency feels assured they will do their utmost to induce the native officers to take interest in this branch of their duty, and discharge it efficiently; but while Sir Neville Chamberlain expects that some of the older officers may not be found equal thereto, he requires that those who have been recently promoted shall give their best attention to this portion of their duty. Names of native officers considered incompetent to discharge this duty are to be submitted for the information of his Excellency with the next annual returns, together with any remarks commandants may wish to offer on the working of the system.—Madras Athenaeum.

INDIAN SCHOOL BOOKS.—In the Report of the Committee appointed to examine Text-books in Indian Schools, one of the first principles laid down with reference to the instruction of Indian children in English is that in the lower classes of secondary schools knowledge should be imparted in the Vernaculars. We regret that in most of the Aided and Private Schools of our Presidency town instruction in all subjects is still imparted, even in the lowest classes, solely in the English language. Morris's History of India in English, and Geography Text-books in English are put into the hands of children who are utterly unable to understand an English sentence, and they are made to learn by rote the very words of the Text-books like parrots. By this system the pupils not only make little or no progress in a knowledge of history and geography, but they get into a habit of using English words and phrases without attaching to them their proper meanings, and this habit so clings to them in after years, that whenever they attempt composition in English, the temptation to use fine phrases, though utterly irrelevant, comes upon them too strong to be resisted, and the result is a farrago of pedantic nonsense that causes the world to laugh and their teachers to grieve.—Madras Journal of Education.

A STRUGGLE WITH A MAN-EATER.—"A Planter" writes from Kolaturpullay Valley, 6th July, 1878:—I send you the following particulars which may be of interest to your numerous readers. Hearing that a man-eater was in the neighbourhood, and one of my ganyanes informing me that ten of his coolies were attacked on their way up to my estate (one being killed), myself and two other planters (whom I will call Messrs. A. and B.) with six coolies started on the morning of the 4th inst. to kill the brute. On arriving at the spot where the coolie was killed, we found tracks of the tiger leading through a piece of dense jungle, and on following up for about a mile we heard a growl about twenty yards to the right of us. The six coolies with us immediately bolted. Mr. A. was in front, myself next, and Mr. B. was following. When we had advanced in this order for a few yards, the tiger suddenly sprang from a neighbouring shola on Mr. A., seizing him by the right arm before he had time to raise his rifle. I at once fired both barrels and hit the animal in the shoulder, on which it dropped Mr. A., and retreated into the jungle. Myself and Mr. B. followed, and on advancing a short distance we saw the tiger crouching under a rock. Mr. B. fired, but missed, and this only riled the brute more, for it immediately sprang on him, knocked him down, seized him by the shoulder, and shook him as a dog would shake a rat. I then fired, this time with success, my bullet passing through the heart. I bound up Messrs. A. and B.'s wounds, walked back to my estate for coolies, and had my companions carried down to the low country for surgical aid. Mr. A.'s arm was found broken in two places, and Mr. B. had his collar-bone broken. I am glad to say both are doing well.—Western Star.

WESTERN INDIAN RIFLE ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the Western India Rifle Association will commence this year at Puna on the 4th September, and will continue over four consecutive days. There are fifteen matches to be shot off, thirteen of which are open to all comers, the other two only being confined to members of the Association. The matches open to all comers are—The Governor's Prize (Rs. 100), ten shots at 800 yards; the Association stakes (five prizes, Rs. 50 to Rs. 10), seven shots at 500 yards; the Dorabjee Pudumjee Prize (Silver Cup, value Rs. 50), ten shots at 900 yards; the Nichollett's Prize (Rs. 50), seven shots at 700 yards; two Sportsmen's contests at 150 and 200 yards, three prizes in each contest, from Rs. 50 to Rs. 10; and seven other matches at 500 and 600; 900; 600; 700; 200; 500; 600; 700, and 800 yards respectively, seven shots at each distance, prizes—eight for each match, varying from Rs. 50 to Rs. 5. There are also the "Members' Match," seven shots at 200 yards, eight prizes from Rs. 50 to Rs. 5, open to members only; and H. E. the Commander-in-Chief's Prize, seven shots at 500 yards, six prizes from Rs. 20 to Rs. 10, open to soldiers and volunteers who are members or associates of the Western India Rifle Association.

The Association Gold Medal will be awarded to the man who makes the highest aggregate score in the matches numbered 1 to 10 in the prospectus.

The Silver Medal of the National Rifle Association of England will be won by the highest aggregate score in matches numbered 1, 4, 6, and 9. The winner of this medal will be entitled to compete for the Prince of Wales's prize at Wimbledon on the first occasion on which he is able to attend.

The Hyderabad Rifle Association Silver Medal will be won by the highest aggregate score in matches numbered 2, 3, 6, 7, and 10.

The Southern India Rifle Association Silver Medal will fall to the highest aggregate score in matches numbered 2, 5, 7, and 10.

The highest aggregate score in matches, 1, 3, 8, and 9 will win the Northern India Rifle Association Medal.

No. 1 in the prospectus is "The Association Stakes," No. 2 "Governor's Prize," No. 3 "The Members' Match," and Nos. 4 to 10 inclusive the seven matches previously enumerated.

One of the bye-laws is as follows:—"Meetings for competing for the prizes offered by the Association may take place at any military station in the Bombay Presidency where not less than five members most to compete. There must be five bona fide competitors for each match at any place of meeting to render that match a valid contest, and enable the competitors there to win any of the prizes offered in that match, and there shall be no less than three bona fide competitors for the championship, to enable a competitor to win at any station. This rule shall not apply to the "Sportsmen's contests."

We understand that what is ordinarily known as "the big meeting" at Puna, and which is usually held immediately before the Western India Association meeting, will commence this year on the 23rd September. It will be necessary for all competitors at this second meeting to shoot on the Puna ranges.—Bombay Gazette.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, July 24.—One of the topics of the day, which is particularly interesting to us in Sindh and Kurrachee, and not only to us locally, but to the large districts comprised in the Punjab, North-Western Provinces, and the whole of India east of Delhi, is that of the postal arrangements with England. Matters have been all along bad enough, and the Bombay Government has made it worse for us by the cheese-paring economy that has deprived us of the daily post—land post via Ahmedabad and Hyderabad—whereby our inward and outward communications and correspondence have been seriously compromised and affected by being placed entirely at the mercy of a capriciously and inadequately arranged bi weekly steamer service with Bombay. It would almost be idle to enumerate the countless instances of hardship hence accruing; but it has so far served us as to stir our somewhat apathetic Chamber of Commerce into (some-what irregularly, but still effectively) addressing the Secretary of State for India on the subject, with the effect of obtaining thereby a reference for opinion to the Government of India; which cannot, I should hope, do other than endorse the statements and prayer of the memorial for a weekly service to Aden, in view of the great benefits thence derivable. Till this be gained—I mean the weekly Aden mail—there seems to me to be no reason why an alternative boon—which will cost the postal service nothing but the abandonment of a little red-tape obstructiveness, should not be obtained in connection with the fortnightly steamers that the B.I.S.N. Company are arranging to run direct to and from England. All that has to be done is to get these so timed as to meet the inward and outward P. and O. mail boats at Aden; thereby giving us three, if not four, days clear gain, in the receipt and despatch of our letters, and the present mal-organised arrangement. This is not a mere local advantage that we plead for, but a real gain to all who now depend for their European correspondence on the service by the P. and O. steamers, which now make an unnecessary and most annoying detour via Bombay. Of the advantages to passengers from the districts above alluded to by the bi-weekly, and probably hereafter weekly, direct running English through steamers, now that Lahor, as a centre, makes transit of hours, vice days, by the substitution of the rail for the river, it will not interest you in Bombay to speak; seeing that to a certain class of hotel keepers and traders in your island it will involve a loss by the abstraction of a large amount of transit passenger traffic that has heretofore brought them profit. Suffice it to say that to us and to ours this will be a great and substantial gain, not to this place alone, but to the whole district so served; and it will be the fault of the B.I.S.N. people if, being the first in the field, they do not, by liberal and punctual arrangements for the benefit and comfort of their passengers, work the mine they are opening with unlimited success. One thing I would suggest to them as likely to prove a great boon to many, and a source of gain to themselves, which is to grant three and six-monthly return-tickets at a fair rate. Many would thus be attracted to the advantages of a run home, in preference to the more questionable and equally (if not more) expensive trips to the hills. I commend the hint through your columns, to the directors, as being "something to their advantage." I have not so far, modo Anglice, gone into the weather; but, as I heard an old salt say the other day, we have had a teaser. The oldest inhabitant, &c., &c.: you can fill up the rest. Heat mortality has been unusual; natives as well as Europeans here and in our mofussil have succumbed; old and young have been alike taken. The greatest shock that we have had here was perhaps the all but sudden death of the Rev. Digby Henry Cotes, our chaplain, who had deservedly endeared himself to all his own flock by his unfeigned kindness and Christian piety, and was universally held in respect far beyond the limits of that flock. He succumbed after a very short illness, to an attack of fever, which, not dangerous in its first symptoms, took on brain complication, and carried him off with a progress rapid beyond all expectation. The deceased gentleman was followed to the grave by almost all the European community here of all persuasions, and by a large number of soldiers, to which class he had greatly endeared himself by his kindly ministrations. Mr. Cotes was comparatively a very young man; an earnest, or rather indefatigable scholar and an able and even eloquent preacher. He had only been some four years in Sindh, here and at Hyderabad, where his own father had ministered before him in the memory of some of the oldest of us here; and the autopsy showed that he was never fit to have encountered the dangers of an Indian climate. I hear it is in contemplation to erect some memorial of him in his own church. If I might be allowed to suggest a fitting one, it should take the form of an endowed widows' and orphans' home, to be named after him, which would not only be a memorial of the departed, cere perennius, but also after his own kind, pious heart. Many who have known him might well cast in their mite or contribute of their abundance to such a cause as this, whether they be Churchmen or not: and I hope that a handsome "Cotes' Widows' Home" may yet rise in useful memory of one who did his best in the cause of charity and Christian love and unity when among us on earth.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MAJOR PROBYN.—An interesting petition was recently submitted to the Governor of Bombay, signed by eighteen hundred of the inhabitants of Khandesh, who prayed that Major Probyn, superintendent of police, might not be removed from among them. The memorial shows a sincere appreciation of the services rendered to the district during his long service, and after eulogising his treatment of the Bheels, goes on to show that sportmanship is an official merit. The destruction of wild beasts is not unimportant among the benefits conferred by this officer upon the Khandesh district. He has killed upwards of four hundred tigers by himself in Khandesh, besides numberless other wild animals. And when, in the last hot season, the distressed ryots drove their cattle desperately into the very heart of the Satpooras for pasture, the security afforded on that one emergency may well be considered to have fully repaid Government for all their attention to the destruction of wild animals.

OFFICERS SERVING AT JACOBABAD.—Colonel Nuttall, having left Jacobabad for Kurrachee on leave, Colonel W. G. Mainwaring, commandant 30th Regiment N.I., or Jacob's Rifles, has assumed command of the Sindh Frontier Field Force. The officers at Jacobabad are distributed as follows: Lieutenant Robertson commands No. 2 Mountain Battery. The 1st Sindh Horse has Captain McNair as officiating commandant, Lieutenant Alexander as adjutant, and Surgeon McClochery in medical charge. Major Carpendale commands the 2nd Sindh Horse, with Captain Lucas as second in command, Lieutenant Abbott, Squadron Officer, Lieutenant Abbott, officiating ditto, Lieutenant Monteith, and Surgeon Bartholomew. The 3rd Sindh Horse has Colonel Malcolmson as commandant, Captain Gordon, and Lieutenant Smith. The 30th Regiment N.I., or Jacob's Rifles, has only two officers with it now, Colonel Mainwaring and Captain H. F. Smith. Captain McNeil is Brigade-Major to the Sindh Frontier Field Force.—Civil and Military Gazette.

BOMBAY CAVALRY.—For some time past the military authorities of this Presidency have had under consideration the expediency of doing away with the local character of one or two of the Bombay Cavalry regiments; and, though no decision has as yet been taken on the subject, we understand that a Committee, consisting of Colonel Moore, V.C., Major Prendergast Walsh, and Major Seton, R.E., have proceeded from Poona to Seroor, to frame an estimate of the value of the buildings belonging to the officers and men of the Poona Horse, which must be taken over by Government if the head-quarters of that regiment be removed from Seroor. It has been the custom in the Poona Horse for the officers and sildars to take over successively from one another the camp buildings, &c., constructed when the corps was first created and its head-quarters fixed at Seroor, so that the regiment, as now composed, owns all the buildings in camp as its private property, and could not be dispossessed without receiving good compensation.—Bombay Gazette.

DEATH OF LIEUTENANT-COLONEL R. T. CLARKE.—It is with great regret that we announce the death of Lieutenant-Colonel R. T. Clarke, Bombay Staff Corps, which occurred at the residence of Sir Frank Souter, on Malabar Hill, on Sunday. The deceased officer complained of a slight indisposition on Wednesday last, up to which date he attended to his duties in the Executive Commissariat office at the Presidency, and his illness was not supposed to be of a serious nature, until Saturday, when alarming symptoms set in; and on Sunday morning the disease was pronounced to be diphtheria, under which he rapidly sank. An upright and conscientious man, an able official, and a perfect gentleman, he was deservedly respected; and his loss will be severely felt, not only by his brother officers of the Commissariat Department in which he had served so long and with such distinction, but by numerous friends. Colonel Clarke served with the Central India Field Force under Sir Hugh Rose in 1857-58, was present at the siege and capture of Ratghur, the operations before the fort of Garrakota, and its subsequent capture, forcing of the Muddenpore Pass, battle of the Betwa, and subsequent pursuit of the enemy, siege and capture of Jhansi, action of Koonch, and subsequent pursuit of the enemy, action of Muttra, battle of Galowlee, the taking of Calpee, and capture of Gwalior (medal and clasp). He has left a widow and four children.—Times of India.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES.—We learn from the report of the Registrar of Joint-Stock Companies in Bombay for last year that seven new companies were registered as against nine in the previous year. Two of them were started in lieu of others which had been wound up. At the end of the year, 98 companies were carrying on business; 9 went into liquidation during the year, and 6 of these Subaltern officers who cannot be provided with a passage in a troopship, or who, during the trooping or non-trooping season, are directed, or allowed to proceed from any other port than Bombay, will also be allowed free conveyance for themselves and families by rail to the port at which they are permitted to embark. In cases where officers, entitled to passage-money from the Indian military funds, may prefer to make their own arrangements for proceeding to Europe, they will proceed, as heretofore, under the rules of the funds to which they may belong, and will not, therefore, be entitled to free conveyance by rail to port of embarkation.

Superintendents of gymnasia are under the orders of, and responsible only to, the officer commanding the station. 2. Regimental instructors of infantry regiments quartered at a station where there is a first-class gymnasium will be attached to the gymnastic staff for general duty in the gymnasium. They will be under the orders of the superintendent, and are not to be taken away from their duties in the gymnasium without the sanction of the officer commanding the station. 3. In regimental gymnasia the instructors are not to be placed on other duties, unless the duty at the station is so severe as to necessitate such a course. 4. Class reports and other documents are to be prepared by regimental instructors, and submitted to the superintendent of 1st class gymnasia, or officer in charge of a regimental gymnasium, for correction and signature. They will then be signed by the commanding officer, and transmitted, through general officers commanding, to the inspector of gymnasia in India, Simla. In filling up Bengal form 379, the following points will be carefully attended to:—Averages are only to be struck for men who have had both first and final measurements recorded, all others are to be omitted. To find the average add up each measurement and divide by number of men finally measured. Daily attendance: Add up the numbers of days' attendance of the whole, and divide by the number of working days in the course, showing the result decimally to two figures.

SECRET SOCIETY OF YOUNG PARSEES.—Somewhat startling disclosures are being made by a vernacular journal regarding a clique which appears to have been formed some years ago by a Parsee lad. The object seems to have been to tempt boys and girls happening to be heirs to large fortunes to become members of the clique, with the sentimental object of securing each other's happiness by founding a colony in some part of America. The result of the constant teachings of their guru was that some of the boys and girls who were inveigled into it grew insubordinate to their parents and left off honest industry. They are so much even now under the teaching of their guru that some of the members of the clique, who have succeeded to rich inheritances, are, it is feared, ready to waste in fanciful pursuits large amounts of money. It seems that the guru of the would-be colonists has succeeded in impressing upon them the necessity of having a large fund for their grand purpose, and while the boys were of very tender years he bound them over by sacred oaths to contribute all their money on getting possession of it, and to do nothing without each other's consent, as well as to other conditions of a nature that might leave all of them at the tender mercies of their leader. The strange affair has been discovered through some of the members having divulged the secrets, which are said to be of an "appalling nature," to their friends.—Times of India.

SERVICE DONE BY MILITARY OFFICERS DURING THE RECENT FAMINE.

Resolution by the Government of India, Public Works Department (Famine), No. 1,385, dated July 26, 1878.

During the famine of 1874 many officers, non-commissioned officers and men, belonging to the army in Bengal, took an active part in the operations for the relief of famine, and did excellent service to the country and to the Government. When sore need for additional assistance was felt last year at the crisis of the famine in Madras and Mysor, officers of the army were, with the permission of their Excellencies the Commanders-in-Chief, invited to volunteer for famine duty. Eighty officers responded to the invitation, and among them were represented the three armies of India, and all branches of the service.

2. Now that the work of the famine is nearly over, H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council has much satisfaction in publishing the annexed extracts from the Proceedings of his Grace the Governor of Madras in Council, and of the Chief Commissioner of Mysor. Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of Madras, Revenue Department (Famine), No. 1,490, dated July 8, 1878.

The army officers from all parts of India, who, having volunteered their services, were placed by the Military Department at the disposal of the Madras Government for famine duty, having now rejoined their regiments, his Grace the Gov. in Council desires to convey to those officers the thanks of Government, and to place on public record the appreciation of their valuable services during the past season.

2. Of those whose services commenced at the close of 1876 or early in 1877, the services of Capt. R. Wilson, of the 13th Madras Native Infantry, who held charge of the Red Hills Camp for fifteen months; of Captains A. Broome and W. Biscoe, and of Lieutenant C. A. Coats, of the Bengal staff corps, performed the difficult task of scrutinising the relief lists of the villages of that portion of Chingleput allotted to his charge proved him to be a valuable officer.

4. The Government have to deplore the death of one officer and the serious illness of many—more than one-fifth of those who volunteered their services in the emergency having been attacked with fever or other serious illness, brought on by necessary exposure to the sun and climate.

Proceedings of the Chief Commissioner of Mysor, dated 30th April, 1878.

Extract from the Farewell Minute by Mr. C. A. Elliott, c.s.i., Famine Commissioner, Mysor.

Before I leave the province of Mysor, I desire, with the permission of the Chief Commissioner, to record my appreciation of the services which have been rendered to Government by its officers, or which have been voluntarily tendered by non-official gentlemen, during the famine which is now, I trust, near its close.

The second body of special relief officers consists of those who were placed at the disposal of this Government by the Bombay and Oud Governments, and the Bengal Military Department, after the 1st September, 1877. Their numbers have altogether been twenty-seven; they consisted of . . . , ten officers of the Bombay Army, seven of the Bengal Army, . . .

The following officers have all been in charge of taluks, and have performed their duties so as to deserve my hearty thanks:—

Lieut.-Col. G. W. Holdsworth, Bengal infantry.

Capt. F. D. Mander, 13th Bombay N.I.

Capt. W. Chard, 2-7th royal fusiliers.

Lieut. E. A. Mostyn, 2-7th royal fusiliers.

Lieut. C. O. Nicholletts, 5th Bombay N.L.I.

Lieut. W. J. Orr, 25th Bombay N.I.

Lieut. R. S. Simpson, 21st Bombay N.I.

Lieut. S. C. F. Peile, 2nd (Q.O.) B.N.L.I.

Lieut. C. W. Fitzgerald, 3rd B.N.I.

Lieut. C. H. Des Vœux, 4th B.N.I.

Lieut. H. C. Lamb, 4th Bengal cavalry.

Many of these officers suffered from severe illness, and yet, such was their devotion to the work, that the moment they felt able they returned to their duties without taking the time to recruit, which in some instances I pressed them to take. Captain Chard, in particular, carried his zeal to such excess that, when at last he was forced to resign his post, his life was in serious danger.

Captain J. Healey, 66th foot, and Lieutenant P. E. Anderson, 25th B.N.I., were in charge of important relief operations in the cantonment and town of Bangalore, which they executed with marked discretion and success. Captain Healey especially had the merit of so winning the regard of the native gentlemen who formed his staff, that, in gratitude for his courtesy and cordiality, they presented him, on his departure, with an address of thanks. Their chief duty was to supervise the distribution of grain to the helpless poor, and the restoration to their former position of those who had lost their capital and their implements of trade.

C. A. ELLIOTT, Famine Commissioner, Mysor.

C. BERNARD, Officiating Secretary to the Government of India.

WAKHAN.

Wakhan is a small territory lying north of the Hindoo Koosh, between the Chitral country and the Pamir Khanate of Shagnan. It has at all times been in some kind of subjection to Badakshan, which it touches on the west. Its inhabitants are considered to be of a purer Aryan stock even than the Tajik, and their language is very much akin to Sanscrit or Takri. Their numbers are, however, limited, and the country they hold is barren and inhospitable in the extreme; nevertheless it has, as will be seen, its important functions. In the sixteenth century Baber established a dynasty in Badakshan in the person of a cousin, and that rule continued down to the middle of the last century in this family. Their rule was effaced in the western portion of their State by the inroads of Nadir Shah and Ahmed Khan. About the year 1760 this line became extinct, and a fresh ruling family of Mirs was installed in its place. They likewise ruled in Wakhan and over Shagnan, although expelled from Balkh and Kundus, at first by Afghan and at last by Usbeg valour. When Mourad Beg overthrew Miryar Beg, of Badakshan, and annexed his dominions, Wakhan passed from a state of subjection to Faizabad to a similar condition under Kundus. When the Usbeg power was overcome by the Afghan, Wakhan so far became Afghan that it retained its old relations to the Badakshi Mirs, who acknowledged themselves to be Afghan vassals. That order of things is still undisturbed. Faizabad pays tribute to Cabul, and Wakhan bears its own small share of the levy at the present moment. Wakhan is consequently a dependency of Cabul.

The importance of Wakhan is twofold. In the first place, it holds the southern route of the caravan trade between Eastern Turkestan and Western Turkestan and Afghanistan. In the second place, it commands the Northern entrance to the Baroghil Pass leading from Kashgar to the Chitral Valley. For both of these reasons Wakhan is of importance to this country. But Wakhan, as commanding the northern entrances of the Baroghil and Ishtragh Passes, leading into the Chitral Valley, only some 350 miles by an easy route through Mastuj, Chitral, and Dir to our frontier north of Peshawur, as shown by the recent explorations of the Mollah, is of more pressing importance still than it may be as the main artery of a great caravan line.

The strategical importance of Wakhan will become very clear should Russia absorb Karategin alone; but if Darwaz and Shagnan are to share the same fate then our eye will have to be constantly fixed upon the whole northern frontier from Pamir to Merv. Under Mourad Beg Darwaz was a very prosperous country, and, although its present condition is somewhat obscure, we may assume that, as it has enjoyed a long lease of tranquillity, it maintains its old character. It should be remembered that Russia cannot seize Darwaz or Shagnan without also taking Karategin, Macha, Kulab, and Roshan, the series of small States which intervene between the Oxus and the Alai Tagh range, or a tract of country of great dimensions. From Wakhan, now a border province of the Chinese Empire, to the Turcoman country round Merv, there stretches a broad and clearly defined zone, on which may be written at any point "high road to India." Russia is drawing very near to that zone, if she has not already touched it, and it is idle to doubt that she will very clearly decipher the sign post, whether her arrival be in the eastern, or the central, or the western portion of that neutral region. Now that the danger is recognised in this country by all parties, England is of course able to cope with whatever emergency there may arise; but it may, nevertheless, be very questionable policy to sanction Russian conquests because they may not immediately jeopardise our hold upon India. It is true that the Oxus forms an admirable limit to Russian progress, but it by no means follows that it should be made the Russian frontier.—Standard.

THE BETHUNE SCHOOL AND THE BOARDING SCHOOL FOR INDIAN LADIES.—The Committee of the Bethune School, Calcutta, and the Committee of the Banga Mahila Bidyalaya have resolved to unite these two schools. The Bethune School has been from its foundation, twenty-nine years ago, little more than an infant school, and yet it involves great expense to Government. Mr. Bethune intended that it should be a leading institution for the education of ladies. The benefit of the school was, however, until lately, confined to the children of strict and orthodox Hindus, who marry their daughters so early that education becomes almost an impossibility. There are sections of the native community now who have begun to promote adult education for ladies; it is to these that an appeal has been made. A boarding institution will be connected with the Bethune School, where a higher kind of education will be provided for ladies who are willing to join it, and the Committee of the Banga Mahila Bidyalaya have agreed to allow their students to remove there.—Journal of the National Indian Association.

Home.

THE Peninsular and Oriental steamer Lombardy, sailing on Thursday with the India mails, took no specie of any description. The same company's steamer Surat has left Galle for Suez and Southampton, with £350,000 in Australian gold.

IMPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamship Teheran, from the East, is expected to arrive about the 2nd prox., with £428,598 in specie, comprising £145,641 from Sydney, £187,188 from Melbourne, £16,583 from Yokohama, £10,272 from Shanghai, £30,314 from Hong Kong, and £38,600 from Bombay.

LIEUT.-GEN. H. J. WARRE, the new Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, will proceed to India by the mail steamer of Sept. 12. He has selected Lieut. C. T. Barrow, 26th Regt., for his aide-de-camp. There will be no change in the military secretaryship, as Lieut. Col. W. C. Justice is to be continued in his present appointment.

PATENT COTTON GUNPOWDER.—The dangers attendant on the transport and storage of strong explosives appear to have been completely neutralised by the Cotton Powder Company. This Patent Cotton Powder when divorced from its peculiar detonation refuses to be exploded by concussion, fire, acids, or electricity. As to spontaneous explosions, it appears to be less liable than even common gunpowder to this risk.

MAJOR-GENERAL C. V. WILKIESON.—The death is announced at Inverness of Major-General Charles Vaughan Wilkieson, Royal (late Madras) Engineers. He entered the Hon. East India Company's service as second-lieutenant in 1842, became first-lieutenant in 1851, brevet captain 1857, captain 1858, lieut. col. 1863, brevet colonel 1868, colonel 1871, and major-general 1878. General Wilkieson, who had been many years employed in the Public Works Department, served as Assistant Field Engineer with the army in Ava in 1853.

BILLS ON INDIA.—On Wednesday tenders were received at the Bank of England for £300,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted, were, to Calcutta £267,200, to Bombay £31,800, and to Madras £1,000. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 7 13-16d. will receive about 14 per cent., above that price in full. These terms are nearly 1-16 lower than last week's allotments. Notwithstanding, however, this depression in the exchange the Council propose to draw next week for £50,000 more, that is, for £350,000, of which not more than £100,000 will be on Bombay.

GREAT TRIGONOMETRICAL SURVEY.—The Secretary of State for India has presented to the Crystal Palace Company's library a copy of the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India, on the scale of four miles to the inch. This series of maps, which together would cover a superficies of fifty-one feet square, has been bound in two grand volumes, to admit of close examination in detail, and orders to inspect the volumes may be had in the Tourists' Court of the Palace free on application. The gift was accompanied by a copy of the Survey of Turkestan and the countries between the British and Russian dominions in Asia, compiled by Colonel J. T. Walker, R.E., on a scale of thirty-two miles to the inch, and that of Persia, compiled for the Government by Captain O. B. C. St. John, R.E., as well as the map of Central Assyria, the iconographic sketch of remains of ancient Nineveh, with the modern Mosul, and the similar chart of the ancient cities of Nimrud and Felamiyeh, made by command of the Government of India by Captain Felix Jones. There is also the map of India on the scale of sixty-four miles to the inch, that was compiled from the Topographical and Revenue Surveys.

THE MAIL SERVICE TO INDIA AND CHINA.—We have the satisfaction to announce that the Government have seen the wisdom of concluding a contract for the continuance of the Mail Services to the Far East for a period of eight years with the P. and O. Company, from the expiration of the present contract in February, 1880. The bankers and merchants interested in the punctual performance of the various services did well to inform the Postmaster-General of the great inconvenience which would arise from splitting up the service among other companies. The changes which will take place in the working of the various lines are simple and unimportant. The day of departure remains Friday, and the due date for delivery in London, Monday. These two days were earnestly fought for ten years ago by all interested in the trade, and it would have been a great mistake to disturb them. The chief features of the new contract are that the Southampton Mail Service is abolished, and all correspondence and papers will be forwarded via Brindisi, and be conveyed by rail through Egypt. The time allowed to Bombay has been accelerated by two and a-half days, and to Shanghai three and a-half days, with a corresponding difference for Penang, Singapore and Hong Kong. The line between Hong Kong and Yokohama will be discontinued as a mail service. With respect to the subsidy under the new contract, we understand that, having regard to the amount of work to be performed, it does not differ materially from the old basis. We may be confident that the directors, having secured this renewal of confidence, will take steps to ensure the efficiency of their steamers and the punctual performance of the various services.—London and China Express.

RIDER'S PATENT HOUSEHOLD PUMPING ENGINE.

SOLE MAKERS

HAYWARD TYLER & CO.,
LONDON.

The cost of running an Engine of half-a-horse power does not exceed 2s. 6d. per week for coke and oil.

An Engine of half-horse power will raise all the water required for a large mansion or public buildings, and one of a third-horse power is sufficient for most gentlemen's houses, whilst its simplicity is such that no skilled labour is requisite,—in fact, a gardener's boy of sixteen years old, of ordinary intelligence, can work it.

The following gentlemen have ordered a second engine for private use:—

Cranston's Nurseries, King's Acre, near Hereford,

Messrs. HAYWARD TYLER and Co.,

Gentlemen,—We have much pleasure in being able to state that the "Rider Hot Air Engine" has given great satisfaction, and has done all we expected of it. Our fear at first was that it would soon lose air by the packing getting worn, but this has not been the case, as we have worked it now for twelve months without its having cost us a penny for repairs. Any of our men can work it, and the consumption of fuel is as small as you state. We should be very sorry to be without it now in the nurseries.—Yours truly,

CRANSTON AND CO.

In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

BY THE

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,*C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.
"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, August 16th; Allahabad, August 14th; Madras, August 14th; Calcutta, August 13th.

REPORTS on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 6th August, 1878, state that good rain has fallen throughout the west coast, northern east coast, and the ceded districts of Madras, and in Kurnool; in the southern east coast districts the fall has been slight, but this is not the season when rain is usual in those tracts; general prospects are reported good. The total number on works is 124,060, and gratuitously relieved 75,746, less by 2,963 and more by 777 than last week. General rain is reported throughout Mysor; prices have slightly fallen in Mysor, Shimoga, and Chitaldroog, and prospects are favourable; the total relieved during the week ending the 27th ultimo was, on works, 31,064, gratuitously 12,643, less by 2,064 and 773 than in the previous week. General heavy rain has fallen in all parts of the Bombay Presidency, including Sindh; damage from floods has occurred in Sindh, and in Guzerat excessive rain is causing some injury to the crops; prospects are generally excellent, but a break is now wanted in many places. Good rain has fallen throughout the Central Provinces, and a break would now be beneficial; prospects are favourable. In Berar also there has been excellent rain, and prospects are good. In Central India excellent rain has fallen throughout Malwa, and good rain in Gwalior; the state of Bundelkhand still gives cause for anxiety, and distress there is increasing. In Rajputana there has been general heavy rain, and prospects are very good. In Bengal the rainfall has somewhat slackened during the week in those parts where it was previously excessive, and good rain has fallen where it was before deficient; prospects are generally favourable, but damage from inundations has occurred in Northern Bengal, Dacca, Furreedpore, and Mymensingh; more rain is also required in parts of Hazaribagh, Sarun, Chittagong Hill tracts, Shahabad, and Gya, and in Purneah and Maldah generally. In Burmah there has been a good general fall in all the coast districts, and prospects have much improved, but in the northern inland districts of the Pegu and Tenasserim divisions more rain is required. In Assam there has been moderate rain; the floods in the valley districts are subsiding. In the North-West Provinces general moderate rain has fallen, except in Benares and Agra, where more rain is required; prospects appear to be favourable. In the Punjab there has been general good rain, except in Umballa (where probably some has fallen since the date of report), and parts of the Hissar division; prospects are elsewhere favourable.

ACCORDING to the Times of India fears were entertained at the date of our advices, by the cultivators near Calcutta that a continuance of the heavy rains would cause serious injury to their crops. They were quite unable to work in the fields, and the country looked like a vast lake dotted with islets.

A TELEGRAPHIC report from Jacobabad, dated August 12, reports that the Indus flood on the 11th passed through Nurwah at several points between Jacobabad and Sirki. Part of the Jacobabad Taluk is under water. The town is surrounded, and much damage has been done to the crops and canals. A report dated 13th states that the Kushmore bund is threatened. Five breaches have been caused at forty-six mills by the hill floods, but all have been closed; heavy floods are passing Massu Wala and making openings in the bund. The weather at Jacobabad is clear and settled.

HIS Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General in Council, while recording the Government of India's high appreciation of the good services rendered by Brigadier-Generals Keyes and Ross in having brought to a successful issue the expedition against the Jowaki Afridis, directs that the despatches and their enclosures submitting reports on the operations which were carried out be published. His Excellency in Council also desires to convey the acknowledgments of the Government of India to officers commanding corps, batteries, and detachments; to the several staff officers, and to those of the medical, commissariat, and other departments whose services have been brought to notice, as well as to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the force, whose admirable behaviour and endurance during a protracted and trying service merit the highest commendation.

WE submit to all whom it may concern the following incident of Bombay prison life, which needs no comment. About a month ago, Jacob Williamson, employed on board the British ship Staffa, was committed to the Bombay House of Correctoin, on a conviction of "wilful disobedience to lawful commands." Being a coloured man, he was made to work with the natives; and his diet was regulated according to the scale on which native prisoners are fed. He complained of it several times that he could not live on this diet, and finally became ill and died on the 13th ult. According to the medical evidence, the jury returned a verdict: "death caused by acute dysentery," and added, "the jury are of opinion that the disease was due to a sudden change of diet unsuited to the habits of the deceased." It is due to Dr. Partridge, the yard surveyor, to add that he had objected to the monstrous absurdity of feeding coloured men on the native side on native diet, without reference to their previous habits of life. His remonstrance had been duly forwarded to the Inspector-General of Prisons; but, unfortunately, the poor coloured man could not wait for the decision which might have saved his life. Death by dysentery is rather too severe a penalty even for a coloured man to pay for wilful insubordination on board ship.

THE most recent intelligence as to the Kabul Mission is afforded by the Times telegram of the 1st inst., according to which the latest Press news from Simla states that a report has been received from Kabul, but not yet authenticated, to the effect that Yakoob Khan escaped from his confinement during the confusion ensuing on the death of Abdullah Jan. He fled towards Ghuzni, and is said to have become half idiotic from long confinement and the severity of the Ameer's treatment. It is also rumoured that, although the terms offered the Ameer are studiously kept secret by the Government at Simla, the Ameer will be required to admit a permanent Resident at Kabul, together with British agents in other parts of his territories. It is further generally believed that the Ameer will refuse to accept from the Government these terms unless the fact is made distinctly intelligible that such refusal on his part will inevitably compel the Government to give effect to their policy by one less pleasing and peaceful, and by an armed occupation of Afghanistan. The Indian Press generally approves the policy of the intended Mission, and strongly advises the Government to adopt the measures of Russian statecraft so successfully practised in Central Asia, and to support the Kabul Embassy by a powerful military demonstration on the frontier. The latest authentic news received the same date from Simla states that no official confirmation has been received of Yakoob's escape, while the latest letters from Kabul rather throw doubt upon the report. The native Envoy started on Friday from Peshawar, and reached Ali Musjid the same evening. He stopped first at the Kabul Fort, where he was hospitably received and entertained by the Afghan Governor. Advices from Kabul, dated August 21, state that the Ameer, after much persuasion by the Mustaphi, attended a public durbar that day for the first time since Abdullah Jan's death.

AMONG those attached to Sir Neville Chamberlain's Mission the Times Correspondent mentions Mr. Henry Walter Bellew, Sanitary Commissioner of the Punjab. Mr. Bellew, a man of ripe experience, accompanied Lumsden's Mission to Kabul twenty-one years ago, and also formed one of the party despatched to Yarkand under Sir D. Forsyth, to conclude a commercial treaty with Yakoob Beg, ruler of Kashgar, and rebel against the Chinese Emperor.

COLONEL FRASER, Secretary to the Government of the North-West, in the Public Works Department, is about to go home to England for some months' leave. Had the agricultural condition of the provinces continued critical, his departure would have been postponed; but the rain that has now fallen puts an end to all fears of calamities that might have called for the extensive development of relief works.

COLONEL C. C. JOHNSON, Officiating Quartermaster-General in India, has issued a return showing the number of European troops located in the hills for the hot weather and rains, 1878. The return shows that the number has steadily increased up to 1877 from 1870. In the latter year there were 6,107 men, including 837 men as working parties, in the hills, without any women or children, whilst in 1877 there were 9,185 men, 964 women, and 2,135 children. This year the number is not so large, being 9,163 men, 829 women and 1,863 children; and as no explanation is given of the decrease, it would seem that the health of the troops in the plains has been better than in 1877. The total number of European soldiers in the Bengal Presidency this year is 36,747, of women 2,956, and of children 6,012, and the percentages of those sent to the hills are 25·63 of the men, 28·03 of the women, and 30·99 of the children.

THE last annual report of the Sanitary Commissioner for Bengal states that excessive mortality had been caused by fever, to which 11·85 deaths per thousand were assigned. This excessive mortality is attributed by the Government Resolution to the defective drainage. Some districts are affected in consequence of the natural silting up of the rivers which traverse them, as is the case with the villages of the Dum-Dum division of the 24-Pergunnahs district, the sanitary condition of which is under the consideration of a special committee. But in other districts the natural drainage is impeded by the earth works of roads and railways, as, for instance, in the Chogdah Union, to quote the words of the Lieutenant Governor, "the rail and ferry roads are said to interfere with the natural drainage of this locality. Again, in the Barrackpur sub-division of the 24-Pergunnahs district, the fever, it has been said, was chiefly confined to the tract of the country which lies between the river bank and the railway embankment, and extends from Kadihatti in the Dum-Dum sub-division to Nyehatti. The drainage of this tract is away from the river and to the eastward, and it is believed that there is not sufficient waterway through the embankment, and that consequently the soil has become water-logged." The facts, taken in connection with a large amount of similar evidence from other parts of the country, certainly justify the Government in drawing the attention of the Public Works Department in the Road and Railway Branches to these obstructions.

THE steam tramway from the terminus of the Northern Bengal State Railway at Siligori to Darjiling, which the Lieut. Governor has announced his purpose of constructing, will, according to the Englishman, be an immense boon, especially to the poorer Europeans of Calcutta. The present difficulties of transit are so great that the result is that Darjiling, which is only some 370 miles from Calcutta, is more difficult to reach than Simla, which is some 1,200 miles. With a steam tramway up the cart-road, there is no reason why the traveller should not leave Calcutta in the middle of one day and breakfast at Kurseong the next, taking all his servants and baggage with him, at about one-third of the present cost. The advantage to the tea interest, and to the general trade of Darjiling and its neighbourhood, which will result from it, can hardly be exaggerated. Not only will it furnish a cheaper, safer and more expeditious mode of transport for the produce of the tea gardens, but its tendency will be to cheapen labour by virtually bringing the supply nearer to the gardens, and by reducing the cost of rice and other articles of food imported into Darjiling from the plains, while the planters will also get their fuel and stores at less cost.

THE annual report of Sir Juland Danvers for the year 1877-78, published yesterday, states that the length of railway now open in India is 7,551½ miles, of which 492½ were completed during the year 1877, and 223 since the close of the year. There are 806½ miles laid with a double line; 5,912½ miles are constructed on the 5ft. 6in. gauge, and 1,638½ on narrower gauges. The most important operations have been connected with the State lines, to which 580 miles have been added. The line which proceeds through Northern Bengal towards the Hills at Darjeeling, the Dhond and Manmad, and that between Rangoon and Prome, have been opened for traffic. The Punjab Northern line has also been finished to Jhelum, and the South Indian has been extended 132½ miles. The Indus Valley will be ready for traffic in the course of this year.

THE Government of India has circulated to all guaranteed railway companies a note that was written in March last by Major Dowden, R.E., on the effect of low fares on Indian railways. The conclusions arrived at in this note—writes Colonel Williams—may be formulated as follows:—That a maximum fare should be fixed for the lowest class at 2½ pies per mile, but that a general maximum should not be fixed; applicable to all railways, irrespective of special circumstances. That the speed for through services should be accelerated, because through passengers travel, individually, longer distances, and are therefore entitled to consideration. That the speed for local services should be reasonable and not too slow. That return tickets do not, as a rule, show gain to a railway, and therefore inducements to the entire public to travel freely by single low fare should pay better than inducements to a minority under restrictions as to times and places of booking. That the intermediate class traffic has hitherto been of little importance, because the difference between its fare and that of the lowest class is too great.

In acknowledging, from the Government of India, the papers relating to the attack of the Utman Kheyls on the coolies employed on the Swat River Canal, and the punitive measures subsequently adopted, the Secretary of State expresses his entire concurrence in the appreciation expressed by the Viceroy in Council to the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab of the prompt and effective manner in which the operations against the tribe, sanctioned by the Government of India in February last, were carried out; and cordially adds his commendations to those bestowed by the Indian Government upon Captain Cavagnari, Captain Battye (who commanded the troops), and the other officers engaged in the operations. In a separate despatch the Secretary of State expresses his satisfaction at the successful results of the punitive expedition against the Ranizai village of Iskakot, on the Peshawur frontier, and considers that the manner in which the enterprise was conducted reflects credit on Captain Cavagnari and his assistant, Captain Warburton, and on Major Campbell, commanding the Guide Corps.

An interesting discussion at a recent meeting of the Bengal Social Science Association, on the advantages and disadvantages of preserving caste distinction, was communicated by the Times telegram of Sept. 1st. The discussion was remarkable for the fact that only one speaker ventured to defend the maintenance of caste, before a large assembly of learned high caste native gentlemen. The discussion received special significance from the fact that two flagrant scandals, arising out of native habits and customs, have lately formed the subject of judicial investigation. In the first case are respectable Hindu solicitor, of the Calcutta High Court, was convicted of carrying on an intrigue with his own niece. The lady was a Hindu, daughter of a late Member of Council, and, though strictly confined to the Zenana, had been partially educated after the English mode. She was further assisted in her intrigue by a cousin, who was a widow, and who had been educated outside the Zenana in an English school. The case has excited profound excitement and indignation among the natives, and has given rise to a rather acrimonious controversy between the English and Native Press. The former alleges that this case is by no means abnormal, but the direct outcome and result of a fruitless and factitious endeavour to compel virtue and female chastity by mere physical seclusion. The Native Press replies that this case is purely abnormal, being the natural and logical result of endeavours to subvert Hindu domestic life by the unsuccessful attempt to graft a code of alien ethics upon Hindu customs. In the second case a Hindu had consented, in consideration of £40, to marry his daughter, eleven years old, or in other words, to sell her in marriage to an old man of seventy. A suit was brought in the Allahabad High Court to remove the girl from the custody of her father, and for an injunction to restrain the marriage, and the Court, though expressing sympathy with the objects of the suit, held it had no legal power to prevent the iniquitous, immoral bargain.

The Naini Tal correspondent of the Pioneer gives an amusing illustration of the artfulness of the Khansamas of the Kumaon Station. The Brewery established there is doing a good trade, and ousting the familiar Bass from economical households. But the Khansamas dislike the Naini Tal Brewery, because the bottles are returned instead of becoming their perquisites; so they hit upon the ingenious idea of putting a few drops of Kerosene oil in each empty bottle, with the expectation that the bottles would be refilled with beer, the flavour of which would disgust the customers of the objectionable brewery. They forgot, however, that the bottles would be examined to see if they were clean, a process which would never enter the perpetrators' thoughts. It has been found needful to break a large number of bottles publicly, in order to convince the Khansamas that the manoeuvre was useless.

The Cuzco maize seed which was some time ago sent out by the Secretary of State for India has proved to be a failure on being sown in the Punjab, the N.W. Provinces, the Central Provinces, Tirhoot, parts of Behar, in Upper and Lower Bengal, &c. The seed germinated readily, grew well, but did not yield fruit. At Ranikhet, in Kumaun, and at a height of 5,950 feet above the level of the sea, Colonel T. H. Chamberlain sowed 150 seeds in well-prepared ground; and all grew to fine healthy plants from ten to twelve feet high, while 118 bore exceedingly fine and well-formed cobs, some of which the Colonel had prepared for his table, and declares them to be the best he has ever tasted. Lieutenant Pogson states that he raised some plants at Simla which attained a height of from twelve to fifteen feet; most of them produced seeds, a single grain of which weighed as much as five of those of the common hill varieties; and the stalks were exceedingly rich in sweet juice, which was as abundant as in the best sugar-cane. The Honorary Secretary to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Mysor, Colonel Boddam, sowed three batches, which were respectively destroyed by rats, wind, and thieves; but a fourth proved more fortunate, and a few magnificent cobs were obtained. In reviewing the several results reported the Secretary of State observes that the experiments made in the plains and at low elevations in the hills had everywhere proved a failure, but that those tried at higher elevations, such as Simla, parts of Sikkim, Ranikhet, and Bangalor had been more successful. Lord Salisbury expressed a hope that the Cuzco maize would be naturalised in the highlands of India, and become a useful additional source of food supply, and wished to be informed if the large quantity of sugar which was reported to be contained in the stalks might possibly become a sugar-producing crop. Seeds were accordingly sown at various elevations, but the results proved not to be very satisfactory.

The management of punkahs for European troops would at first sight appear a very simple matter, but there are several considerations to be kept in view, the chief of which is to attain the object of giving as much circulation of air as possible in the barracks without incurring any unnecessary expense. With the view of obtaining practical opinion on the subject at each station in the Bengal Presidency, committees were formed, generally consisting of regimental officers and an officer of the Royal Engineers. In many cases the committee reported the existing system of working punkahs to be satisfactory. The chief fault lay in the connection of the punkahs by ropes, "which," to quote one report, "are liable to slacken, and cause loss of power in the forward swing; and for want of rigid connection, the impetus which would be conveyed by the weight of the forward to the backward punkahs of each train is quite lost in the backward swing." To remedy this it was proposed to substitute bars of wood for the ropes, and this has been carried out in many barracks; yet at the Dalhousie Barrack in Fort William, although the punkahs rigidly connected worked with a steady swing, the men did not appear to like it so much as the old jerking motion. "They appear to think," the report says, "that the sudden jerk the punkahs get when connected with ropes disturbs the air better than the steady swing of those connected with bars, and the Superintendent Engineer remarks that rigid connection while economising labour is open to the objection of want of jerk." On the other hand, the Morar Committee objected to the jerking action, asking for a steady swing. During the present season experiments are to be made with a movable frame from which punkahs will be suspended, which is expected to give a considerable circulation of air with economy of labour. A punkah system invented by Conductor Mortimer was tried in an Artillery barrack, but the men did not like it, and it was removed at the request of the officer commanding the battery. It was afterwards applied to another barrack-room, apparently with satisfaction. Several of the committees seem to have concurred in the opinion that a train of six punkahs is about the average weight that coolies working in three reliefs can be fairly expected to pull; occasional cases occur, when punkahs from the size of the rooms must be in trains of eight, in which case a selection should be made of strong coolies, and the reliefs should be shorter. The chief complaint that is often made on the working of punkahs in European barracks is that the rate of movement is slow. This, however, largely depends on the number of coolies employed; the present number of punkah pullers in the Bengal Presidency alone amounts to about 18,000 men (according to an abstract sent in by the Quartermaster-General), and the estimated cost for punkah-pulling in the budget is Rs. 3,50,000 for the season.

The annual report on the administration of the Andaman and Nicobar Islands for last year has been submitted to the Secretary of State, who expresses his opinion that the results of the administration are creditable to General Barwell. The report indicates progress in all departments, with a single but important exception—that relating to the health of the convicts. Out of a daily average strength of 8,642 convicts the daily average sick were 894, or 8·35 per cent. The number of deaths were 361, or 4·17 per cent. of the strength. The Government of India has issued instructions for the issue of additional clothing in the rainy season so as to enable each man to change his clothes after his day's work—a measure which will no doubt considerably add to the comfort and health of the convicts. The year was opened by the absolute release, in honour of the assumption by Her Majesty of the title of "Empress," of 430 convicts—336 males and 94 females. In addition to these, 182 were set free on condition of not leaving the settlement. To these latter liberal concessions were made for the purpose of affording them the means of a livelihood, and the Superintendent states that those conditionally released have behaved well, and fully appreciate the benefits conferred upon them. One encouraging fact noticed is a considerable increase in the number of horned cattle, and a saving of nearly Rs. 9,000 a year in fodder to Government herds in the southern district by the issue of Indian corn obtained from the newly cleared land between South Point and Corbyn's Cove. The Superintendent anticipated that, after supplying all local wants, he would be able during the current year to export large quantities of timber.

Odds and Ends.

THE imperial title is to be brought into more general use by the substitution on service envelopes of the words "On Her Imperial Majesty's Service," for "On Her Majesty's Service."

YAKOOB KHAN.

Yakoob Khan was born in or about the year 1849, of a noble mother. His first appearance in public life may be said to be the occasion when he detected the European beneath the disguise of the dervish, and despite the fluency and nerve of Arminius Vambery. That was in November, 1863, when the Afghan Prince appeared to the traveller "a good humoured, inexperienced child." His career in the history of his country commenced very shortly after his interview with the Hungarian traveller; for in 1864 Shere Ali's brothers disputed his possession of the crown, and Yakoob Khan was left in command at the recently-captured fortress of Herat. While Shere Ali was carrying on the war with a varying fortune, victorious at Kujbaz, routed at Shaikhabad, losing his eldest son in the former fight, and deserted by his best General, Mahomed Refik, on the eve of the latter, but in the end expelled from Kandahar, and all the eastern country, Yakoob Khan was slowly but surely consolidating his rule over Herat and Ferrah, and propitiating, in so far as he was able, the northern Khan of Maimene. So it happened that when Shere Ali suffered his last overthrow beneath the walls of Khelat-i-Ghilzi and fled to Herat, he had not abandoned all hope of restoring the declining fortunes of his cause. During three years Yakoob Khan had preserved peace in the west, and had restrained the Persians, and had sent many a welcome contingent of hardy troops to the scene of battle in Kandahar and Kabul. There was yet one chance left, but the degree of success that might be attained no longer rested with Shere Ali. In the field of battle he had been worsted both by Azim and Abderrahman, and his own reputation had become dimmed by disaster. The fate of Kabul trembled in the balance, when its real arbiter advanced on Kandahar in the early days of 1863. That city fell at once after a sharp fight in the outskirts of the town, and then once more Kandahar became Shere Ali's base for the reconquest of Kabul. In the meanwhile the disintegrating causes in the confederacy of the Barucksai brothers were beginning to become manifest. On Afzul's death his younger brother Azim seized the reins of power, and relegated Abderrahman to the minor post of Governor of Balkh. His own son, Surwar Khan, had just been driven out of Kandahar by Yakoob Khan. Abderrahman's hostility was scarcely concealed to his uncle Azim, who evidently desired to found a dynasty of his own, and Abderrahman, knowing the ability of the man, must have dreaded the contingency as almost inevitable. Whatever claims Azim may have had to the admiration of his countrymen as a wise statesman, he forfeited by his tyranny, once he came to supreme control. So at first the joint army of Shere Ali and Yakoob Khan encountered little opposition. Kabul, after an absence of more than three years, was entered in triumph, and south of the Hindoo Koosh there remained no rebel. Azim in the meanwhile had fled to Balkh to join his nephew, and in the face of the great emergency they each agreed to forego their jealousies. With a large force they advanced against Kabul, but their adversary had been more prompt. Yakoob Khan held the Bamian Pass as they came forth from the Sigban Valley, and worsted them in a pitched encounter. But they found their retreat cut off. The Khan of Maimené had declared for Shere Ali and was operating in their rear. They had no hope left now, except in making one desperate rush on the capital and surprising Shere Ali.

But each of their schemes was frustrated. They crossed the Hindoo Koosh by a pass to the east of Bamian, but Yakoob Khan was close behind, driving them before him. Past Kabul they fled with the young chief hot on their track, until they turned to bay in sheer despair in the neighbourhood of Ghizni. Routed there, they fled for safety to Persia, where Azim died, and Abderrahman passed on to Khokand and the Russian territory. The five years' war had at last terminated, but its close brought credit to Yakoob Khan alone.

Since then Yakoob has been Governor of Kabul (1869), of Kandahar (1870), and, after a brief exile, of Herat (1871). In all these posts he exhibited the same great capacity that he had demonstrated on the field of battle; but Shere Ali feared him as he fears him still. He recognised his superior, and he believed that ties of blood would prove but a slight restraint upon the impulses of ambition. Yakoob Khan is said to have intrigued with Persia and to have coquetted with Russia. There are some who declare that he has loudly proclaimed his hostility to England, and Shere Ali himself endeavoured once to make him appear as a Russophile; but all these assertions are mere idle rumours. On the other hand, he certainly expressed in 1872 to Captain Marsh very friendly sentiments towards us, and had commenced the study of English in proof of his good feelings towards our country. It was shortly after this interview with the author of "A Ride Through Islam" that he came to Kabul, trusting to a safe conduct from Shere Ali, and it was then that he was imprisoned, while his younger brother Ayoob Khan, threatened in Herat, was glad to find safety in Persia. The debt Shere Ali owes his son has been repaid with the blackest ingratitude; but the Ameer may yet make atonement for the past. Before the six weeks' mourning for Abdullah Jan have concluded, Shere Ali, if wise, will have installed Yakoob Khan in the Bala Hissar and publicly proclaimed him his heir.—Times.

ROMAN URDU.

OUR readers will have already learned from our columns that certain zealous enthusiasts who advocate the substitution of the Roman Alphabet for the various Native characters at present used in printing Oriental Works have established a society at Lahor, and started a journal with the view of carrying out their pet project. As might have been expected, the first issue of the Roman Urdu Journal—such is the name of the publication in question—is but an exposition for the benefit of the public of the reasons which have led these reformers to advocate so startling a change. The “statement of reasons” commences by propounding a dogma which few will be prepared to dispute that “the education of a people, and with it the whole civilisation of a country, are dependent to a very great extent on the mechanical means by which ideas are perpetuated and transmitted from man to man.

The printing-press is cited as evidence of the truth of this assertion. Unquestionably thus far the position assumed is unassailable; but what follows? the journal must speak for itself. “The multiplicity of the characters used in Asiatic countries is of itself a very serious obstacle to education and progress.” Yet it is generally supposed that a page of Oriental type represents at least ten of Roman letter-press; there is a well-known Oriental story which fitly satirises the line of argument pursued in this instance:—A certain judge unacquainted with any of the languages of the East had occasion to sentence a prisoner to death, and made use of the well-known lengthy formula so familiar to every reader of our Criminal records; the native translator turning to the culprit simply exclaimed, “Jahannam Ko Jas,” or, in other words, condemned the unfortunate wretch to a place better imagined than expressed. “Dear me!” said the astonished judge, “I had no idea that a native language could be so concise as to express in three words what it required in English several sentences to convey.” It is certainly a somewhat astounding proposition that in languages proverbial for their terseness the multiplicity of characters should be cited as an objection, and somewhat inconsistent with the further statement of the Roman Urdu Journal that short vowels are omitted; this at any rate would, we would think, tend to lessen this unfortunate “multiplicity of characters.” Again, it is argued that in the native characters the “letters are not clear, distinct and prominent, like those of printed Roman.” What, then, must be said to our English ordinary hand writing; is this to be abolished and another strange character introduced? If the assertion is meant to apply to the letters used in printed books a simple denial of the assertion will best combat the argument. The diminution of expense which the adoption of the Roman alphabet would entail in the publication of Oriental books is a practical advantage in favour of the change; but when this argument is to some extent weakened by the fact that Oriental printing is not so costly as formerly, as any one who has occasion to apply to Messrs. Allen will easily ascertain, curiosity will naturally be evinced as to the final object of the Society's exertions. It is nothing less than “the substitution of Roman Urdu in the Courts of Law, and in all Government Records, where Persian Urdu is at present in vogue. When this object is once permanently secured the Society will regard its victory as complete, and its work as consummated.” This is indeed “a consummation devoutly to be wished!” When once the records shall be written in such a disguised character that natives cannot read a word thereof, then and then only will the “Roman Urdu” advocates rest happy. Does it never occur to them that to abolish the difficulty of mastering an unfamiliar character, even supposing that the letters of one language can convey the ideas of another, is but to take a drop from the ocean of perplexity in which a student is engulfed? Let the Roman Urdu Society remove the barrier which is created by the varied “spirit” of languages, which have few ideas in common, and then, indeed, will its “victory be complete.” When a student shall have mastered this difficulty he will have left far behind the comparatively insignificant bar to his progress, interposed for the first few months of his labours by the unfamiliar form of the characters with which he had to deal. There is one argument, however, in favour of the change which demands more serious attention. It cannot better be given than in the words of the author of that charming little work recently published, entitled “Natural History, Sport and Travel.” Speaking of the district of Monghyr, he says, “the chief drawback to primary education is the variety and difficulty of the current alphabets. The Mussulman has the Persian or Arabic character, which runs from right to left. The pious Hindu delights in the Sanskrit character, which runs from left to right. The trader cares alone to learn Mahajani. The rustic likes Kaithi; and the ambitious youth learns the Roman character, as he considers it a stepping-stone to a Government appointment and to fame. It is difficult to imagine how any real progress in literature is to be made until the Roman character is adopted.”

The evil is undeniable, but surely the proposed remedy does not strike at the root of the disease. A universal language, not a universal, or seeming universal character, is the desideratum. Of what use is it to be able to read a language, and not to understand the purport of what is written? As well might an attempt be made to bleach all the skins of the Orientals, in the expectation that the Natives would thereby become Europeans; obviously the ideas, the habits, the peculiarity, the various differences of character would remain unchanged, and in spite of a similarity of colour, the two races would be as distant as ever. So with language; Europe and Asia look through different ends of the telescope, and nothing in the way of uniformity, of unity, or printing, can ever bridge the chasm which separates England from her fair domain in the East. Let us rather seek to draw the Natives nearer to us by inspiring them with a sense of our equity and impartiality, and leave to enthusiasts the impossible task of making black white, and attempting to Anglicise what is, and ever must remain, Asiatic.

The Roman Urdu Journal concludes with a story “illustrative of the evils of the Persian character in our courts of law:” a ring having been lost, a “jama' talashi,” or “personal search” was made in regard to a person suspected of having committed the theft; the jewel was found, a record was duly and accurately filed. "At the preliminary hearing the word in the vernacular character was read glibly as 'khána talashi,' i.e., 'home search.' The learned judge at once noted this grave discrepancy, and admitted the appeal, coming to the conclusion that the case was all got up by the police, to get rid of the accused, an old offender. The man's conviction was in the greatest danger of being upset, when it was discovered in court that the word was not 'khána,' but 'jáma,' and that there was thus no contradiction at all, and the appeal was dismissed." Comment, says the Journal, "is needless." Quite so; it would be a pity to spoil so naïve a story, which, however, may be supplemented by another applicable to "Roman" character:—A certain functionary reported to his superior, that he was glad to be able to announce that no cases of death had occurred during the voyage of a certain ship charged with coolies; his surprise was great at receiving a severe rebuke for his heartlessness in rejoicing over the loss of no less than one hundred poor wretches, into the circumstances of whose death no inquiry had been made. Poor man, he had written "no" deaths, the authorities had transmogrified "no" into "100." Must the use of the cursive English character be abolished? But perhaps comment is needless.

L'Inde Britannique et l'Exposition de 1878. Par Clovis Lamarre et A. Front de Fontpertuis. Paris: Librairie Ct. Delagrave.

This is the first of a series of volumes whose object is to treat separately each of the nations which have taken part in the Paris Exhibition; to give a sketch of its history from the earliest times to the present day, pointing out more particularly the rational connection between the great events that have succeeded each other; to study its institutions, its government, its statistics; to describe the soil which it occupies, the provinces of which it is composed, the cities in which are concentrated both its commercial energy and its intellectual life, and to estimate, by means of its contributions to the present International Show, the greater or less approach to perfection which it may have made in the fine arts, in public instruction, in the productions of science, and the activity of man. To his first volume M. Lamarre has contributed only the preface; for the main body of the work we are indebted to M. de Fontpertuis, an eminent publicist and economist, who, as numerous articles of his in the Journal des Economistes and in the Economiste Français prove, has, for some time past, made British India his special study, and who has, so far as that country is concerned, amply redeemed in the work before us the pledge given by his collaborateur.

English visitors to the Exposition who have been sufficiently well-advised to provide themselves with Dr. Birdwood's excellent Handbook to the British Indian Section will probably think that they need no additional commentary on the contents of that section, nor will they be far wrong in so thinking; but they may nevertheless be honestly assured that they would find M. de Fontpertuis' little book a very serviceable supplement to Dr. Birdwood's, which it resembles in possessing a much more enduring interest than its title imports. To compress the whole history of India, from the days of Menu to those of Lord Lytton, into little more than a hundred extremely readable pages, is of itself no ordinary feat, and M. de Fontpertuis, besides accomplishing this and describing very vividly all the more remarkable of the specimens of Indian skill, industry and taste which are now collected in the Exhibition, has enriched his catalogue raisonné with criticisms, æsthetic, economic and political, which may be referred to with advantage long after the Exhibition has itself become matter of history. Journal of the National Indian Association, in Aid of Social Progress in India. September, 1878. London: C. Kegan Paul and Co.

We have received the September number of the Journal of the National Indian Association, which contains some interesting papers. One on Hindoo Marriages, by Mr. S. J. Manhar, is a modest attempt to "give to the English readers of this journal" an idea of the way in which marriages are performed among the Hindoos. The writer manages to convey a very distinct idea, without detailing all the ceremonies of the preliminaries and celebration of the nuptials, which cause "the house of a Hindoo, on a wedding day, to present a spectacle not unlike what Covent-garden Market does of an early morning." A short paper on Letter-writing in India points out that educated natives write little, and exhibit a strange absence of a love of any epistolary correspondence; hence arises a want of private records, memoirs and diaries to serve as materials for the history of the people of India, which "is not yet written." The progress of the work of the Association, which has now existed seven years, is steady, and its influence on the promotion of education is increasing, and being unsectarian and unsentimental is likely to render good service. We gladly repeat the intimation that the Association has arranged scholarship grants for native girls, of which ten have been allotted to Bengal and four to Gujerati schools in Bombay; besides others to the Philanthropic Society of Dacca and the Bethune school of Calcutta. This is encouragement towards education of "a thorough and practical kind," and calls for the aid of all who desire to see the advance of Indian female education.

A GLIMPSE AT THE WILDS OF WESTERN CHINA.*

Leaving the village of Wo-Shilo-Wo, or the "Den of the Sleeping Lion," so-called from a famous cave in its midst, glittering with stalactites in the shape of "lilies, bells, and umbrellas," the Mission encamped at a village called P'u-p'iao, situated in a small circular valley amid fields of rice and poppy.

General Thunder came in the evening with an anxious countenance to announce the fact that the rebel Li-ch'ao was encamped on the hillside a few miles beyond. Li-ch'ao had played a conspicuous part in the Muhammadan rebellion, but, on its suppression, had tendered his submission. While living quietly on his farm he had been sued for a debt equivalent to about £65; this he paid, but shortly afterwards was again sued for the same debt, the authorities affirming that he had not paid it. When he protested against this extortionate tyranny he was refused a hearing as being a notorious rebel. He once more paid the money, but when an attempt was made to obtain a third exaction by the same tactics, he was driven to a fit of desperation, such as not seldom seize the Chinese. He proceeded to murder his mother, wife, and children, burned his house, then took to the hills with a band of followers, many of whom, like himself, had been persecuted to desperation, and swore death to all officials on whom he could lay hands.

"We had personally, in all probability," says Mr. Baber, "no cause to apprehend the animosity of this desperado; moreover, there is reason to think that the authorities contrived to make some arrangement with him or with his followers, not to molest us."

"So we comforted Thunder by assuring him that not having the honour to be Chinese officials we felt perfectly secure; at the same time we earnestly pressed him to take the greatest care of his own safety."

Resuming their route, the travellers at length arrived at the Salwen river, to the native mind teeming with portent and mystery, and invariably spoken of with a certain awe. Malarious exhalations, red, yellow and blue, the first mentioned being the most deadly, shroud its banks after sunrise, and woe to the luckless traveller who loiters on its shores; while if he attempts to cross its waters a fiendish monster, resembling in shape a huge blanket, issues from the depths, and wrapping the boat in his fetid folds sinks back into his native abyss.

These dreadful stories (says Mr. Baber) so excited our curiosity that we resolved to cross the valley of death at mid-day, and tiffin on the very verge of Styx. On the next day, April 29, Thunder was up and away long before daylight. We started about seven o'clock down a steep gorge through dense woods, and soon discovered the valley of the Salwen far below us. Seven miles of continuous descent, alongside a stream which in some places selected the road as its bed, brought us to the mysterious river, crossed by a chain-bridge 140 yards long and of two spans. One span of eighty yards clears the water, and the other bridges a shingle-bed, which is covered in the summer months. A massive rock-based pier on the edge of the bed supports the chains, but, curiously enough, the chains of one span are not continuous with those of the other; the ends of one set terminate in the pier, and the other set takes a fresh departure several feet to one side; so that on arriving at the pier the passenger has to turn at right angles to his course to attain the second span. The structure is, in fact, two suspension bridges. It is in a very dangerous state of dilapidation, and we hurried over it, not unmindful of the blanket fiend lurking below. The floor of this valley lies at the surprisingly low level of 2,670 feet above the sea. The river is some 240 feet lower, running between steep banks of a regular slope, much resembling a huge railway cutting. It sweeps down a short rapid under the bridge; but farther down it was evidently of considerable depth, by no means swift, with a breadth of ninety yards or more, and invitingly navigable for boats of a large size, say, the boats of the Upper Yangtze, but not a shallop or punt was to be seen. The shingle-bed under the bridge was strewn with granite boulders glittering with unusually brilliant mica-flakes. Just beyond the bridge was a small village, created no doubt by the slender traffic, where under a magnificent banyan we spread our frugal table. But even before leaving the bridge we met evidence of the plague which desolates this valley; for, sitting in the gateway was a young man whose corpse-like aspect at once drew our attention; his face was a greyish-black, and what should have been the white of his eyes was literally and actually green. As we approached he slowly turned those horrible orbs upon us, with a dazed and other-world motion that was most ghastly. He was evidently in a severe stage of some form of fever. We administered a dose of quinine, which he swallowed without hesitation and without interest. There were six other cases of the same sort in the village. Many of the houses were merely skeletons of pole-work, of course unoccupied. We were told that in a few days the whole village would be dismantled, and the people would withdraw to the mountains. We then discovered the strange fact that this valley is uninhabitable during the summer months on account of the malaria, the natives retiring as soon as the fields are planted, and returning to reap them in the autumn. "But what becomes of travellers?"—"Very few pass in the hot season, and those hurry through before sunrise." There may be some exaggeration in this, but the main fact is unquestionable. The air of the place was curiously hot; the thermometer, well shaded, stood at 96 degs., but irregular blasts were wafted from the south-east, which scorched like the breath of a furnace. Walled in by precipitous mountains, and wooded with clumps of exceptionally fine trees, the unhappy valley is picturesque in the highest degree. Small rounded hills are dotted about its floor; the rice fields cover a great space, but very few, probably not a tenth part, are now under cultivation. It is by far the lowest depression in Western Yunnan, and runs nearly due north and south as far as the eye can reach, with an average breadth of about two miles. Looking up that lone avenue of precipices, between which the deserted river threads its silent way, one cannot suppress a certain sentiment of solemnity.

Another strange disease which haunts this and some other of the valleys of Yunnan bears, in some respects, a resemblance to the plague of London described by Defoe. Its approach is indicated by the eruption of one or more minute red pustules, generally in the arm-pits, but occasionally in other glandular region. If several pustules appear the disease is not considered so hopeless as when they are few. The sufferer is soon seized with extreme weakness, followed in a few hours by agonising aches in every part of the body; delirium shortly ensues, and in nine cases out of ten the result is fatal. It often happens that the patient suddenly, to all appearance, recovers, leaves his bed, and affirms that, beyond a slight sensation of weakness, he feels thoroughly convalescent. This is invariably a fatal sign; in about two hours the aches return, and the sufferer dies. True recovery is always very gradual. This is the account given us by a French missionary, who has spent half a lifetime in Yunnan; the native version includes all the above facts, but involves them in a cloud of superstitious accessories; for instance, all parts of the sick-room are occupied by devils, even the tables and mattresses writhe about and utter voices, and offer intelligible replies to anyone who questions them; but few, however, venture into the chamber. The patient is, in most cases, deserted like a leper, for fear of contagion. If an elder member of the family is attacked the best attention he receives is to be placed in a solitary room, with a vessel of water by his side. The door is secured, and a pole laid near it, with which twice a day the anxious relatives, cautiously peering in, poke and prod the sick person to discover if he retains any symptoms of life. Not only human beings, but domestic animals, and even rats, are attacked by the pestilence. Its approach may often be known from the extraordinary movements of the rats, who leave their holes and crevices, and issue on to the floors without a trace of their accustomed timidity, springing continually upwards from their hind legs as if they were trying to jump out of something. The rats fall dead, and then comes the turn of the poultry; after the poultry have succumbed pigs, goats, ponies, and oxen successively die off. The plague is not improbably really a pestilential emanation slowly rising in an equable stratum from the ground, and as it increases in depth, all animals are as it were drowned in its poisonous flood; the smaller creatures being first engulfed, and man, the tallest of Yunnan animals, suffering last. The Christian converts suffer less than their pagan countrymen, from the superior cleanliness which, as we were informed, their faith inculcates.

Its effects are often attributed to the influence of demons, and a story is told of a certain magnate of South Western China, the head quarters of whose division during the Mahomedan rebellion were situated in a plague-stricken town; when the infection began to attack his troops, T'sen (such was his name) had all the gates closed, except that in the southern wall, and then sent in his soldiers with orders to slash and pierce the air in every corner that could possibly harbour a demon. After this preliminary slaughter the men were formed in line against the inside of the north wall, and gradually advanced upon the south gate, hemming in the invisible fiends, and ultimately driving them with a final rush through the gate, which was immediately closed, and a strong guard placed outside. But somehow or other the goblins contrived to regain the interior of the city; by what means has not been ascertained, but it is surmised that they climbed over the wall. Despite the danger of this plague-stricken hollow, the walled town of Teng-Yueh (Momein) was reached in safety.

Bidding adieu to our travellers in this sleepy city, where all is listless and dull, it may not be out of place to summarise Mr. Baber's remarks in regard to two important topics, interesting possibly rather to specialists than to the general reader, viz, opium cultivation and the trade route from Yunnan to Momein:—

We were astounded at the extent of the poppy cultivation both in Sen-ch'uan and Yunnan. We first heard of it on the boundary line between Hu-pei and Sen-ch'uan in a cottage which appears in an illustration given in the work of Captain Blakiston, the highest cottage on the right of the sketch. A few miles south of this spot the most valuable variety of native opium is produced. In ascending the river wherever cultivation existed we found numerous fields of poppy. Even the sandy banks were often planted with it down to the water's edge; but it was not until we began our land journey in Yunnan that we fairly realised the enormous extent of its production. With some fear of being discredited, but at the same time with a consciousness that I am under-estimating the proportion, I estimate that the poppy fields constitute a third of the whole cultivation of Yunnan. We saw the gradual process of its growth from the appearance of the young spikelets above ground in January, or earlier, to the full luxuriance of the red, white, and purple flowers which were already falling in May. In that month the farmers were trying the juice, but we did not see the harvest gathered. We walked some hundreds of miles through poppies; we breakfasted among poppies; we shot wild ducks in the poppies. Even wretched little hovels in the mountains were generally attended by a poppy patch. The ducks, called locally opium ducks, which frequently supplied us with a meal, do really appear, as affirmed by the natives, to stupefy themselves by feeding on the narcotic vegetable. We could walk openly up to within twenty yards of them, and even then they rose very languidly. We are not, however, compelled to believe with the natives that the flesh of these birds is so impregnated with laudanum as to exercise a soporific influence on the consumer. I am not concerned here with the projects or prospects of the Society for the Abolition of Opium; if, however, they desire to give the strongest impetus to its growth in Yunnan, let them by all means discourage its production in India.

The trade route from Yunnan-fu to Teng-Yueh is the worst possible route with the least conceivable trade. It is actually dangerous to a cautious pedestrian, not on account of the steep ascents and descents which constantly confront him—time, patience, and a proper conservation of breath suffice to overcome these—nor from the precipices which await the unwary, but from the condition of the path itself. This is paved throughout the whole distance, except on some of the high downs and ridges; a proof, if any were wanting, of the former importance of the route. The paving is of the usual Chinese pattern; rough boulders and blocks of stone laid somewhat loosely together on the surface of the ground; "good for ten years and bad for ten thousand," as the Chinese proverb admits. On the level plains of China, in places where the population is sufficiently affluent to subscribe for occasional repairs, this system has much practical value. But in the Yunnan mountains the roads are never repaired; so far from it, the indigent natives extract the most convenient blocks to stop the holes in their hovel walls or to build a fence on the windward side of their poppy patches. The rain soon undermines the pavement, especially where it is laid on a steep incline; whole sections of it topple down the slope, leaving chasms a yard or more in depth; and isolated fragments balance themselves here and there with the notorious purpose of breaking a leg or spraining an ankle. The track often exhibits very much the appearance of a London road when "the streets are up," and one almost looks for the familiar gas-pipes. It is a joyous moment for the traveller when he reaches a sandy unpaved down, and can use his eyes for other purposes than that of selecting the stone which is least likely to break his neck. In some parts, however, of the unpaved route the ground splits vertically, and huge flakes of earth, carrying the path with them, peel away into a gully or precipice. This would probably not be dangerous to a pedestrian, if he were moderately cautious, and he would soon be rendered so by the sight of the body or bones of some unlucky mule which has accompanied the landslip.

By an improved system of paving and a better selection of gradients, the route might be made convenient enough for carriages by mules and coolies; but it seems hopeless to think of making it practicable for wheel carriages. The valleys, or rather abysses, of the Salween and Mekong must long remain insuperable difficulties, not to mention many other obstacles. I do not mean that it would be absolutely impossible to construct a railway. A high authority has informed me that if shareholders will provide money they will always find an engineer to spend it. By piercing half a dozen Mont Cenis tunnels and erecting a few Menai bridges the road from Burma to Yunnan-fu could, doubtless, be much improved.

It seems to have been assumed by the members of Colonel Sladen's mission that when Teng-yueh is reached, the obstacles to a highway into Yunnan have been surmounted. The fact is that the difficulties begin at Teng-yueh. A practicable road might be constructed without much difficulty, through the Kakhyen hills to Manwyne. From that village to Teng-yueh the route is direct and easy; but Teng-yueh draws whatever prosperity it possesses from the Ta-peng valley; the trader is still separated by many steep miles from Yung-ch'ang, and when he arrives at that city he will fail to find a market. He must struggle on to Tali; in the quarterly fair he may meet with a certain demand for peddlery, but for little else. It is not to be supposed that however energetic the British merchant is, or ought to be, he will attempt the wild route of Yunnan-fu; but in the event of his attaining that capital, he will suddenly be aware that foreign manufactures can be conveyed thither with ease and rapidity from Canton, and his intel-lignance will at last open to the fact that Yunnan-fu is only 400 miles distant from the sea.

Loath as most Englishmen are to admit it, the simple and evident approach to Eastern Yunnan is from the Gulf of Tonquin. But it by no means follows that the same holds true of the western part of the province. The object should be to attain some town of importance south of Yung-ch'ang and Tali-fu, such as Shun-ning, from which both those cities could be reached by ascending the valleys instead of crossing all the mountain ranges, as must be done if the T'eng-yueh route is selected.

THE NATIVE ARMY.

We think the Government was right in deprecating debate upon the constitution of the Indian Army, though it is to be hoped that silence on the subject may not be made the plea of its military excellence. The fact is that the Indian Army is in need of certain reforms, chiefly of detail—and a number of persons, more or less interested in change, desire to see that army reorganised, not amended. They want to make corps de theatre where only little measures are requisite, and some of them would abolish such a huge institution as the Staff Corps, in order to produce an extra wing subaltern for the one-hundredth Regiment of Native Infantry. There is a great deal of loose writing on the subject. The whole organisation of the Native Army is condemned, for instance, because there are too many field officers in a regiment, but it is not the organisation which ought to be blamed for that fact; it is the manner in which the organisation is worked. The organisation in itself is good. It is greatly to be doubted if any better could be devised for the Native Army. It is very superior in many respects to the old. It affords the intelligent native whose idiosyncracies lead him to adopt the sword rather than the pen, a fair chance of honourable and lucrative employment under the State, and it gives him as good a social status in the army as in the Civil Service. The native officers of the Native Army are, we believe, a very excellent body of men, despite all that has been written in their disfavour. True, they have had many disadvantages to encounter. Under the old organisation they had no authority, and no respect from their men. They were studiously kept in the back-ground. Their European officers contemned them, and they had no self-respect. They were worthless—intriguing. They fell into disfavour. But in common justice, it was the military system of those days which should have been condemned, not the native officers, because it is evident that a man cannot be held responsible, when all responsibility is taken from him. A better system prevails at present and it will improve as time passes, for it is only recently that system has obtained official recognition. The native officer is now the native captain. He has the centurion's authority. He is beginning to respect himself, and his sepoy is beginning to respect the man they formerly despised. His intelligence is being developed by the exigencies of command, and we have no doubt that the wretched absurdity so long prominent in the Madras Army of carrying out the Regimental economy on the British regimental model, with four or five European officers, mostly colonels, is steadily repudiated, the native officer will speedily fall into his proper place of company commander, and fulfil the duties of that post to every one's satisfaction. The real litch in native army organisation is the superfluity of field officers embraced by the service. Even the Duke of Cambridge, well disposed as he was to make the best of all he saw at Malta, was astonished at the spectacle of a Madras regiment with six field officers on its strength or parade state. That is preposterous. But it does not prove the organisation bad. It is simply a question of promotion and retirement with which organisation has nothing to do, and Government could easily regulate what certainly appears a scandal, by introducing better promotion and retirement rules for the Indian Army. It would seem, from all the information we can obtain on the subject, that Government is content to apply the pension and retiring rules of the year 1796 to the Native army of the present date, and of course so long as that continues officers cannot afford to leave the service.

The Duke of Cambridge only echoes the opinion of hundreds of officers of Indian experience in saying that the Native Army is in a very fairly efficient state, but it is none the less a fact beyond dispute that it would be very much the better for certain reforms that must be apparent to every one who sees it. These reforms of dress, promotion, retirement, leave, pension, &c., &c., have been so often discussed that we will not weary our readers by repeating them; it is sufficient to say that one and all would very easily be brought about without affecting the present organisation of the army, or the constitution of the staff corps in the smallest degree. To change the organisation of the Native army now, and when it is just beginning to be apprehended by the somewhat dull intelligence of the sepoys, would be a fatal mistake. No wonder if men such as Lords Napier of Magdala and Northbrook deprecate any such design. But a Parliamentary Commission, were one appointed, might find plenty of data on which to act with a view to the general amelioration of the service. There are many details it would be advisable to bring under the notice of such committee, and there are many abuses it would be well to abolish. Were all this done, the Native army could not be complained of on account of organisation, and the world would be relieved the tedium of further discussion on the subject.

Some of the abuses—as the number of field officers—are so patent that it is impossible they can escape public attention much longer. Even if by common consent the discussion of a delicate question is refused in Parliament, the abuse must remain until it is remedied. It is not improbable that though the Cabinet is indisposed to admit a debate on the subject, it will take the opportunity at a more convenient season to enter earnestly on the problem of Indian officers' retirements. That is the great scandal: Lord Cranbrook, the author of the Royal Warrant for the British army, can hardly fail to perceive the absurdity of the Indian practice of retirement and promotion, directly opposite as it is to his own, and we may expect from the Secretary of State before long such an adoption of the rules of his own Warrant to the Indian service as will relieve it of the extraordinary spectacle of six field officers to a regiment, the full complement of which is only eight. No army can well support such an extraordinary load of field officers as circumstances have saddled on the Indian army, but fortunately the burden is easily moved—a Warrant for the Indian service is all that is wanted.—Madras Athenæum.

STATION TALK.

RAWUL PINDEE, Aug. 1.—For some weeks past the river Indus had been steadily rising, and on the 27th and 28th ultimo the flood culminated; on the latter date the river at Attock was fifty-five-and-a-half feet above low water level—a height which, if not unprecedented, has certainly not been attained within the last ten years. Apprehensions of serious loss to life and property from the inundation of the surrounding country were entertained, which, however, according to the police reports received up to the present time, have not, happily, been fully realised. In the Peshawur district some property has been destroyed, the exact value of which cannot be exactly estimated just now; a few decrepid old people also lost their lives; luckily this is all. The confluence of the rivers Indus and Kabul is just above Attock, and had the Indus risen four feet higher we should have witnessed the strange phenomenon of the waters of a large river virtually dammed up and forced backwards, since the level of the Kabul would in that case have been lower than that of the Indus. Many years ago a disaster of this kind occurred, and the cantonments and city of Nowshera, as well as many smaller places along the banks of the Kabul, were submerged, and the loss of life and property is said to have been tremendous. On the 28th ultimo the Grand Trunk Road was under water for miles, and the good folk in Nowshera grew so greatly alarmed that they commenced turning out their worldly goods and chattels, intending to fly to the Cherat Hills if the water did not subside by evening; happily, for them, ere the glorious orb of day disappeared from their anxious view the flood had subsided. It is a pity that the rules of the public service do not more efficiently admit of retributive justice overtaking officers who develop wild projects, in the carrying out of which immense sums from the revenues of the country are wasted, for if such were the case, the man who devised the tunnel under the river Indus at Attock would have a terribly heavy score to pay, for the scheme proved a perfect failure, owing to the leakage from the bed of the river, which it was found impossible to stop; but even had this difficulty been got over, the tunnel would have proved much too short for use during the summer, for during the flood the other day the tunnel house on the opposite bank was entirely under water, the river extending fully 150 feet beyond it. Had the tunnel been in use when the flood came on, it is just probable that some terrible disaster would have occurred, and although it is sad to reflect that some fifteen lacs of rupees have been wasted through the work proving a failure, I think we have much reason to feel devoutly thankful that it did prove so. There are some large iron tubes and other pieces of machinery, &c., the remnants of the material got up for the tunnel, still lying at Attock, and most carefully preserved by the D.P.W., which it is to be hoped Government will be able to utilise whenever the P.N.S.R. is brought up as far as Attock.—Having referred to Attock just reminds me that there is one other matter in connection with this out-of-the-way place that might be profitably noticed, and that is, the utter uselessness of the fortifications here, which consist of a straggling wall with a few bastions running along the top of an irregularly shaped hill, and encompassing the barracks occupied by the troops. The wall is just sufficiently high to keep out the little fresh breeze which sometimes blows during the sultry, killing months of June, July and August. There certainly is a battery of guns, which commands the river and bridge of boats, but then the fort itself would be quite at the mercy of an enemy's batteries on the opposite bank, where there is a high hill which overlooks the fort! An eminent engineer officer once remarked to me that as the fortifications were simply useless, the best thing that could be done would be to level the walls and use up the material in building a bridge across the river, and I don't think he was far wrong.

There has recently been very heavy falls of rain at Kohat and Peshawur, which has saved the khareef crops in those districts. Agricultural prospects in this and the southern districts continue excellent. There is a good deal of small-pox and fever still prevalent here.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

CHITPORE HYDRAULIC-PRESSING COMPANY.—At the ordinary general meeting of this company, held in Calcutta on August 3rd, a dividend at the rate of 4 per cent. for the half-year, ending June 30, 1878, equal to 8 per cent. per annum, was declared, and the report and accounts were duly passed.

RAILWAY EXTENSION.—We understand that the Secretary of State has approved of the sanction given by the Government of India to the extension of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway from its present terminus in the cantonment at Benares to the bank of the Ganges at Rajghat, a distance of about three miles. The work is estimated to cost Rs. 293,993. A portion of the Grand Trunk-road is to be occupied by the extension.

THE HON. L. DAMPIER, C.S.—Owing to the failing health of the Honourable Henry E. Dampier, C.S., and a domestic affliction in his family, it is reported that on the expiration of his five months and twenty days' leave of absence he will apply to retire from the service, and Lord H. Ulick Brown, at present Officiating Senior Member of the Board of Revenue, will most likely be confirmed in the appointment.

COLONEL WYNDHAM.—The Political Agent at Mandalay has been authorised to remonstrate with the King of Burma on behalf of Colonel Wyndham, who is imprisoned for an assault on Mr. Andreino. Though an American by birth, Colonel Wyndham has been saved by the remonstrance of Mr. Shaw from undergoing the punishment of being paraded through the streets and beaten at every cross street, or in other words, to death.

ACCIDENT ON THE INDUS VALLEY STATE RAILWAY.—We regret to hear of a serious accident on the Indus Valley State Railway, which occurred near Nowshera, in the Bhawalpore State. The train ran off the line in consequence of part of the roadway having sunk from the effects of the late unusually heavy rains. Two native passengers were killed and eight or ten injured. The Traffic Superintendent has reduced the speed of the trains, as in many places the line has been shaken by the floods.—Times of India.

DR. LEITNER, of the Punjab Educational Department, is, we believe, about to proceed to Florence. The case stands thus:—The President of the International Congress of Orientalists, to be held in that city during next month, invited Dr. Leitner to be present. The invitation was forwarded through the Government of India, who have consented to allow him special leave of absence to enable him to avail himself of it, if so disposed; but on the understanding that Dr. Leitner is not in any way deputed as the delegate of any Government, in fact, that he simply represents himself.—Times of India.

THE LATE CONFERENCE AT DARJEELING.—As one result of the late conference at Darjeeling between the Chief Commissioner of Assam and the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, a proposition has been sent up to the Government of India for improved communications in the province first-named. A railway is recommended from Rungpore to Teesta and Dhubree, about sixty-four miles, and a bi-weekly despatch steamer from Dhubree to Dibrugarh. Bengal offers considerable help in guaranteeing interest on expenditure, if India will find the capital. The matter is now before the Financial Department.

FAMINE DUTY.—The following are the names of the officers from Bengal whose services have been placed at the disposal of the Government of Madras for employment on famine relief duty:—Mr. H. A. D. Phillips, Officiating Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector; Mr. J. Kennedy, Officiating Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector; Mr. J. T. Babonau, Officiating Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector; Mr. R. W. Blair, Assistant Sub-Deputy Opium Agent; Mr. G. M. Gregory, Assistant Sub-Deputy Opium Agent; Mr. J. S. R. Innes, Assistant Sub-Deputy Opium Agent; Mr. S. Wintle, Officiating Assistant Superintendent of Police; and Mr. H. S. Schurr, Officiating Assistant Superintendent of Police.

AN ADULTERY AND DIVORCE CASE.—We hear that Col. Marshall has been committed to the Court of Session at Tounghoo, on a charge of adultery with the wife of Mr. W. W. Robertson, Sub-Engineer in the Department of Public Works, whose avocations called him out into the districts for about three-fourths of every month. We do not know the result of the trial, but it is possible that the gallant Colonel may be committed to the Recorder's Court, under section 76 of the Criminal Procedure Code. We understand that Mr. Advocate Porter has been instructed by Mr. Robertson to institute proceedings for divorce in the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon, making Colonel Marshall co-respondent, and to claim Rs. 10,000 as damages.—Rangoon Times.

HIGH PRICES IN BENGAL.—The East is raising a famine cry for Eastern Bengal. It says that the prices of food have risen abnormally high; as a matter of fact, higher than they were in 1866 and 1874, years of acknowledged scarcity. The East gives the following as a typical example:—We may on the average take a household consisting of five members—husband and wife and three children. In such a family two seers and a half of rice are daily consumed. Taking rice at five pice per seer, the price of the quantity of rice daily consumed comes to three annas half a pice. The husband earns on an average three annas a day, and from this it will at once be manifest that the daily earnings of a labourer does not even suffice to cover the price of the rice he and his family consume daily. These are hard times, but a very different thing from famine, and would certainly not justify the authorities in applying the balance of the Behar famine relief fund to allay such distress.—Indian Daily News.

HEALTH OF CALCUTTA.—According to the Municipal Report of the past year, the mortuary statistics of Calcutta yield a death-rate of only 22·2 per 1,000 among Europeans, though the rate is unfavourably affected by the fact of its including the deaths of sailors in the port, due to exposure and reckless excess, rather than to the ordinary effects of climate. While not a single death occurred among this class in the Presidency Jail during the year, the mortality among them in the shipping was at the rate of 51 per 1,000. Excluding the sea-going population, the death-rate obtained for European male residents of Calcutta is only 18 per 1,000. The writer of the report remarks, with reference to the favourable character of this result, that though it is true that the great bulk of the European population is composed of persons at the middle periods of life, and that from this it is sometimes argued that a favourable death-rate is to be expected, yet it is forgotten that the period between ten and twenty years, when the death-rate in England is lowest, is very little represented. As an illustration of the healthiness of young European children, the truly remarkable fact is stated that in the European Female Orphan Asylum, where the mean daily number maintained is sixty, there have been only three fatal cases of illness in nine years.—Englishman.

THE "MADRAS ATHENÆUM."

The issue of this paper of August 1 calls attention to the fact that from that date is the commencement of a new series. The old Athenæum, the oldest journal in the Presidency, has again changed hands, and proceeds to say:—"It is hardly necessary, perhaps, to make a profession of our political faith, but, as will appear upon occasion, we do not share the convictions which have prompted the recent attacks in this journal upon the present Premier. Like many, if not most, Englishmen nowadays, we find no party to which we are prepared to give a blind allegiance, but as a rule we shall be found to take a Conservative rather than a Liberal tone. Upon matters relating to religion we shall take what we believe to be the attitude of loyal sons of the Church of England, which, however, will not, we trust, be found to prevent our taking a liberal, intelligent, and sympathetic view of the position of those who do not agree with us. In what may be termed "local politics" we shall, as far as is consistent with the expression of our own independent opinions, endeavour to support the Government. We believe that it is one of the duties of the Press in this country to come between the Government and the people in two ways: on the one hand, to prevent the people from suffering from any remediable burden; and on the other, to do its best to prevent the measures and acts of the Government from being misunderstood. The former of these duties has, we believe, too often so engrossingly possessed the conductors of Anglo-Indian journals, as to cause them to lose sight of the second, and, as we think, the higher duty. We seek the co-operation of all our readers in every way, and shall be glad to receive suggestions by which we may be assisted to meet the wants of the public as fully as possible."

Miscellaneous.

Owing to the improved reports from all parts of Madras, the Government will most probably remain at Ootacamund till October.

CHANGE OF COSTUME.—According to the Cochin paper the Zamorin of Calicut has made up his mind to appear in future before the public in European costume.

TRUSTEES OF FORT ST. GEORGE CATHEDRAL.—Surgeon Major Henry King, A.M., M.B., Leslie Charles Probyn (the Accountant General, Madras), and Colonel John Wood Rideout, have been appointed trustees of St. George's Cathedral.

IRRIGATION.—A committee, consisting of Major Scott Moncrieff, C.S.I., a Madras Civil Servant, and an Irrigation Engineer, has been appointed to report fully as to how irrigation can be made more useful in the Madras Presidency, and how the affairs of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company can be put on a better basis. The committee will extend its inquiries to and visit Orissa.

MAJOR JOPP, in charge of the Bellary-Hubli State Railway, reports the death at Bellary, on the 20th ultimo, from cholera, of Mr. G. Percy Rae, of the Bengal Police, who was attached to the Railway as a Famine Officer. Mr. Rae had come to Bellary in seemingly perfect health the day before to obtain money for the payment of coolies; was attacked at 1-30 on the morning of the 20th, and died about noon the same day. Major Jopp had already reported the death of Mr. Coombes, whose duties Mr. Rae took upon the 23rd May. The Railway has thus lost in less than a month two officers by death.

COCHIN.—The Administration Report of Cochin for 1876-77 states that there were 399 prisoners in the jails, showing a decrease in comparison with the year previous. The land revenue favourably rose, which was owing to waste land having been brought into cultivation and the rice crops grown in the Trichoor lake having been favourable. The customs and salt revenues also show a larger amount to have been realised than in the foregoing year. The sum of Rs. 302,243-10-4 was expended in Public Works; sixty-nine vessels entered the ports of Mallipooram and Narrakal, of an aggregate tonnage of 53,118-4; and the amount of port dues collected was Rs. 5,396-10-0. The total revenue of the year under review shows an increase as compared with the previous year of Rs. 8,825-12-5.

COFFEE PLANTATIONS.—The Reports on Tea and Coffee Planting in the Madras Presidency give the exact weight of coffee yielded by the various districts, apportioned as follows:—Madura, 988,036 lbs.; cost of cultivation, Rs. 105 per acre. In Tinnevely the cost is Rs. 31 per acre, against Rs. 130 to 150 in the Shevaroyis, where the crop of coffee is 1,716,000 lbs. Malabar, inclusive of Palghat, Walluvanaad, Kottayam, and certain parts of Wynnaad, yields 5,579,350 lbs. of coffee at a cost of cultivation of Rs. 246. In and about Coimbatore, however, many small coffee plantations cost only Rs. 60 per acre. The entire coffee crops of the Nilgiris is set down in weight at 3,281,824 lbs., giving a sum total of 12,512,546 lbs. for the Presidency of Madras. The number of plantations is set down at 15,947. The sum total of acres under coffee is 95,109½, against 107,247½ acres in 1876-77, giving an average crop of 13,225,329 lbs. As regards tea, the Nilgiris yielded 235,769 lbs. in 1876-77, against 220,070 lbs. in 1875-76.

GRATUITOUS MEDICINE.—An application from the Lady Superior of the Nazareth Convent, Ootacamund, to be allowed a gratuitous supply of medicines, as already sanctioned to several Orphan Asylums, has called forth a Government Resolution on the whole subject, as submitted by the Surgeon-General. On consideration of the papers his Grace the Governor in Council agrees with the Surgeon-General in considering that the practice of issuing a gratuitous supply of medicines to charitable institutions should no longer be continued; and further approves his proposal that medicines be issued only to authorised institutions annually (on indents passed by him) at cost price, the managers of the institutions arranging for the reception and carriage of the medicines. The Commissioner of the Nilgiris will communicate the purport of this decision to the Lady Superior of the Nazareth Convent, Ootacamund. The Surg.-General will also communicate the purport of the decision to the managers of the institutions named above, informing them that, after the current year the gratuitous supply of medicines will be discontinued, but that indents for medicines on payment of cost price will be passed by him.—Madras Times.

RAJAH OF CALICUT.—The Madras Athenæum inform us that the second Rajah of Calicut has had one of his family physicians trained at his cost for two years at the Manjeri Civil dispensary, and that the latter has now acquired a sufficient knowledge of medicine to be able to treat all cases of an ordinary nature on the European method. The Rajah proposed to establish a dispensary at Kottakel, a place half way between Malapuram and the railway station of Tirur, and expressed his willingness to bear the expense of finding the necessary accommodation and the up keep of the establishment, provided Government would, on its part, furnish the institution with the requisite stock of medicines. His Grace the Governor in Council gladly acknowledging the public spirit which dictated the offer made by the second Rajah of Calicut, has informed him that the Government will, on receiving a certificate of fitness of the "family physician" from the surgeon who trained him, supply the requisite medicines, &c., for the dispensary proposed to be established at Kottakel, for one year, when the Deputy Surgeon-General of the Division will visit the dispensary, and further arrangements in connection therewith will be then considered.

THE G.I.P. RAILWAY COMPANY AND THEIR SERVANTS.

The following memorial to the directors of the G.I.P. Railway, signed by about 140 European servants of the Company employed in the locomotive department, was sent to England by the last mail :—

Bombay, August, 1878.

To the Board of Directors, Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company, No. 3, New Broad-street, London, E.C.

GENTLEMEN,—We the undersigned servants of the Company, in the Locomotive Department, stationed as above and elsewhere, beg leave most respectfully to bring to your notice the unjust and oppressive conduct of the Locomotive Superintendent, Mr. Jackson. We beg to state that if you will cause inquiry to be made, you will find that a great number of old and very useful servants of the Company have been discharged for little or no cause, and on appealing to Mr. Jackson, insult is added to injury; there being no appeal against his arbitrary decisions. At the last half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of the Company, your Chairman stated that the servants that had worked the hardest would be "marked out for promotion" in place of which they are marked out for discharge by Mr. Jackson, who has caused such dissatisfaction among the men in the Locomotive Department, unequalled since the line has been open. As a proof of this, a large number of covenanted men have absconded and left the country, utterly disgusted with the treatment they have received at Mr. Jackson's hands, the shareholders and the Government being losers thereby. All covenanted men who were dissatisfied were invited by Mr. Jackson to attend his office and state their grievances, and on one man stating his plainly he was reverted to fireman, and the covenant under which these men came out to India stigmatised by Mr. Jackson as waste paper. This is one of the many instances of the highhanded manner in which things are carried on. A reference to the fine sheets will show for what frivolous things men are fined on the recommendation of foremen recently made, and who, during the time they were drivers, were found guilty of very serious offences, such as allowing native firemen to shunt their engine, and carrying on a liquor sale at outstations, thereby throwing temptations in the way of their fellow workmen. Gentlemen, you would confer a blessing on the whole of the Company's servants in the Locomotive Department of this line if you would remove Mr. Jackson and send a gentleman in his place, and cause an inquiry to be made into the working of the line by a thoroughly practical and scientific gentleman, and have the line thoroughly weeded, the same as it was in 1868. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

(Signed by) GEORGE BAYLEY, and one hundred and forty other European employes.

A similar memorial was sent by several hundred native fitters and other employes of the company.

Miscellaneous.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF GOA.—His Grace the Archbishop of Goa, who at present is acting as Portuguese Viceroy, has been raised to the Cardinalate and given a Red Hat by the Pope. Upon the arrival of the new Governor-General of Goa, the Cardinal proceeds to France and to Rome. The Roman Catholics of Bombay intend presenting him with a pastoral cross, studded with precious stones and valued at Rs. 5,000.

CHOLERA AT INDOR.—A correspondent of the Times of India reports that cholera of a virulent type has been carrying off hundreds daily in the city of Indor. A gutni in the service of H.H. the Maharajah Holkar endeavoured to combat the disease by affixing Kubuj, a paper with Cimbri incantations written on it, to every door. The Maharajah had issued an order that unless the disease abated the whole population would have to migrate to the suburban gardens.

WATER SUPPLY.—All anxiety regarding the safety of the Bombay water-supply, owing to the accident at Toolsee, is at an end. Mr. Walton, the Executive Engineer of the Bombay Municipality, attended the meeting of the Town Council, and stated that the works were proceeding as favourably as could be expected with the incessant rainfall which still continued at Toolsee, and he considered that all danger was now past. Unless something extraordinary should happen there will be no delay in the delivery of the Toolsee water to Bombay.

THE GRAIN TRADE.—The large granaries of Chutteesghur, in the Central Provinces, will soon have a ready outlet, and afford a healthy impetus to the grain trade of this presidency. A light railway, connecting Raepoor with Nagpore is to be prosecuted vigorously this year, and, if possible, completed by next January. Sir R. Temple, when Chief Commissioner fifteen years ago, strongly advocated this important line, which has since been repeatedly pressed on the Government of India by Mr. Morris, but it is only now that the work has been sanctioned by the Supreme Government.—Times of India.

THE COCOANUT FESTIVAL.—On Monday, the 12th August, the Hindoo Cocanot festival, or to give its proper name, the Shravani or Narali Purnima, was celebrated in Bombay, and the customary offerings of cocoanuts to the sea took place, the ceremony being followed by a fair on the Esplanade. We read in the local Calendar that "on this day the stormy part of the season is considered to be at an end"—every one will wish that this may be true of the present unusually severe monsoon—"and cocoanuts are offered to the sea to gain its favour towards those who now trust themselves to its mercy." The religious ceremony and the subsequent fair, passed off without any disorder.

THE VEHAR LAKE.—The Vihar Lake, the threatened destruction of which caused so much apprehension in Bombay, is thus described by a correspondent of the Times of India. It covers an area of about 1,400 acres of ground, and, exclusive of this space, has a gathering ground of about 2,550 acres. The water is secured by three dams, known as Nos. I., II., and III. The level of the top of the waste weir is 262.50 on Town Hall datum, and the water can be drawn off to a depth of fifty-nine feet or 203.50 on the same datum, and the quantity of water contained between these two points is estimated at 10,650,000,000 gallons, which on short allowance should last the tower three years. The three dams are made of earth, and have an exterior slope of 2½ to 1 and an interior slope of 3 to 1, the surfaces on the two sides and the top being "pitched" with stone. The Vihar Lake was commenced in 1856, but the water was not available till March, 1860. The works were estimated at twenty-five lakhs of rupees, but the total cost amounted to sixty-five lakhs.

THE QUEEN'S MILITARY WIDOWS' FUND.—The accounts of the Queen's Military Widows' Fund for the year 1877 have just been published in the General Orders by the Commander-in-Chief. The receipts amounted to Rs. 121,144, of which 39,231 were received as subscriptions. The amounts disbursed to widows and families for their maintenance and journey home amounted to Rs. 39,608. The actual balance credit invested in Government securities amounts to Rs. 300,000. To this the investment of Rs. 10,000 more has been sanctioned by the committee at the late meeting. In addition to this there is a cash balance amounting to about Rs. 40,000. In the report made by the honorary secretary to the meeting he mentioned that opinions have been expressed that the cash balances kept in hand are too large, but pointed out that heavy awards may come in at any time, and that frequent buying and selling of securities would be likely to lead to more loss than gain. In answer to a suggestion that the awards should in all cases be proportionate to the amount of subscription, it was remarked that the fund was not altogether an insurance office, but was originally to a large extent a charity, on which grounds the Government grant is given and many bachelor officers subscribe. To give help to the widow and orphan at the moment when most urgently needed is a great consideration with the committee, and the recommendations of the local committees are at once accepted so far as they are consistent with the rules of the fund without further question, and assistance is sent with the least possible delay. In cases where money has to be remitted to England to widows who have proceeded home at once and at their own expense, the honorary secretary recommended, and the committee confirmed the decision, that all awards are payable in rupees, on the ground that the fund contemplates payment in rupees only. In 1877 the number of officers subscribing to the fund was 590. If a fair proportion of officers in each regiment and battery subscribed there would not then be the necessity for raising regimental subscriptions for charity in these cases. Such subscriptions also are generally late, and cannot but be humiliating to the recipient.

RELIEF WORKS IN THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES AND OUDH.

Resolution by the Government of India, Public Works Department (Famine), No. 1,381, dated July 22, 1878.

In August, 1877, the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh reported that, by reason of the shortness of the early rains, the autumn crops had failed over nearly all the territories subject to his control. During the month of September, 1877, local relief works were opened in several districts; and it was arranged that, in case the later rains should also fail, a sufficient number of useful works in all parts of the provinces should be prepared for execution by relief labourers under engineering supervision. In October a scheme of such works was submitted to the Government of India. But happily a bountiful rainfall at the end of the rainy season secured a good spring crop all over the country; the cheap autumn grains, which form the staple food of the poorer classes, were, indeed, dear and scarce; but the cheap spring grains were obtainable at prices ranging from 16 to 22 seers a rupee; and the scarcity and distress did not deepen into famine. From time to time, local relief works were opened in several districts; and, in some places, relief works have been kept open throughout the past nine months.

2. The pressure caused by the loss of the autumn crop of 1877 had severely tried the people of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. The grain stocks of the country, greatly depleted by the demand for South India during 1876 and 1877, had not been replenished during the season of 1877-78; and it was felt that, if the autumn crop of 1878 should unhappily fail, prices might become very high, distress be wide-spread, and relief operations needed on a large scale. With a view to being prepared for any emergency, the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh appointed a Committee of Engineer officers, whose duty was to prepare, under the general supervision of the Chief Engineer, Colonel A. Fraser, C.B., a complete scheme of useful relief works for the whole of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. This Committee finished their work by the end of June; their programme has been accepted by the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor; Colonel Fraser and Mr. W. Furnivall, the President of the Committee, have visited the headquarters of the Government of India, and have laid their scheme of relief works in all its details before the Governor-General in Council. The scheme has been examined in the Public Works Department, and also in the Financial Department, and has now been considered by his Excellency the Governor-General in Council.

3. The problem before the local Government was to provide, in each locality, a sufficient number of useful works, for which complete plans and estimates were ready, or could shortly be prepared. The population of the provinces exceeds 42 millions. The Committee considered that the maximum time for which relief-works need be contemplated was about 200 days; for, although, in case of serious failure of the rains, it might be necessary to continue relief operations beyond seven months, yet the number of relief-labourers, at the beginning and at the end of the period, would be comparatively small. The Committee estimated that, when sufficient allowance is made for extra establishments, inefficient gangs, hospitals and gratuitous relief to infirm and infant members of families, and for the miscellaneous requirements of a large relief system, the work done by relief-labourers may cost as much as three times the estimated cost of such work in ordinary times. On this basis they have prepared four schedules of relief-works for varying degrees of intensity of distress.

4. The first, or lightest schedule, provides work for 1,770,795 people on road-works, railway-works, irrigation and drainage-works, costing at ordinary rates, Rs. 92,34,084, and at famine rates, Rs. 2,77,02,253. 4·21 per cent. of the total population could be employed on these works for 200 days; the percentage of the population for which work is thus provided ranges from 1·68 in the Benares division to 7·53 in the Agra, 8·22 in the Seetapore, and 17·49 in the Jhansi division.

Detailed plans and estimates for all the works in this schedule have been prepared, and have, save in the case of the Sarda Canal and the railway projects, been sanctioned by competent authority. The Sarda Canal stands for 2½ lakhs out of the 43 lakhs of estimated irrigation works. The railway projects comprise the Cawnpore and Furrukabad, Muttra and Achneyra, Banda and Manikpore, Cawnpore and Mowrampore, Dildarnugger branch, Lucknow and Rai Bareilly, and Bareilly and Philibet lines, or from 400 to 450 miles in all. The estimated cost of the work available for famine labour on these lines, at ordinary rates, is about 17 lakhs. The cost of these narrow-gauge lines, according to the (as yet unsanctioned) estimates, would under ordinary circumstances, be from Rs. 35,000 to Rs. 40,000 per mile, inclusive of rolling-stock. The local Government is to be responsible for finding the interest on the normal cost of these lines from provincial resources.

5. The second schedule comprises, in addition to the works shown in the first schedule, an estimated expenditure on the Sarda Canal of Rs. 70,13,107; on the Eastern Kallee Nuddee drainage project of Rs. 13,95,664; and on minor projects, Rs. 73,751; or, at famine rates of expenditure, Rs. 2,54,47,566. The works in the first and second schedules will, it is estimated, employ at one time 2,388,939 persons, or 5·77 of the total population. The proportion of the population that can be employed at one time does not rise in proportion to the cost of the works, because on such a work as the Sarda Canal a limited number of people only can be usefully employed at one time; and, therefore, the whole of the work shown in this schedule could not be completed in 200 days. Plans and estimates for works in the schedule are prepared, but have not been sanctioned.

6. The third schedule comprises, in addition to the works in the two previously mentioned schedules, the Cawnpore and Allahabad Navigation Canal, the Ken Canal, the Betwa Canal, and minor irrigation and drainage works, at an estimated cost of Rs. 28,26,642, or, at famine rates, Rs. 84,79,926. The works in the three schedules will employ at one time 2,761,667 people, or 6·57 of the total population. Plans and estimates for these works are mostly ready, but have not been sanctioned.

7. The fourth schedule comprises the following additional works, namely:—The Sarda Canal, the Banbassa Canal, the Philibet Canal, the West Ramganga Canal, the Deepening Jheels and minor projects at an estimated expenditure of Rs. 1,19,42,170, or, at famine rates Rs. 3,58,26,510. The totals of all four schedules provide for an estimated expenditure at ordinary rates of Rs. 3,24,85,418, or 3½ millions sterling; an estimated expenditure at famine rates of Rs. 9,74,56,254, or 9½; employing for 200 days not less than 3,879,741 people, or 9·23 per cent. of the total population. The percentage of the population for whom work is provided in the different divisions ranges from 1·92 in Kumaon and 2·65 in Benares to 13·55 in Agra, 22·12 in Seetapore, and 26·77 in Jhansi.

8. His Excellency the Governor-General in Council considers that the whole scheme has been prepared with much judgment and foresight, and that it has been worked out with a completeness and skill which do the greatest credit to the local Government, and to its officers, Colonel Fraser and Mr. Furnivall.

If wide-spread famine should unhappily occur in the North-Western Provinces, a beginning might properly be made on some such scheme of works. The method suggested for arranging the distribution of relief-works, and for keeping them in check, seems very judicious; and the Government of India confidently hope that, with such arrangements and supervision, the expenditure on relief-works would, under any circumstances, be kept far within the Committee's estimate of thrice the ordinary cost. At present, however, the Governor-General in Council does not anticipate the necessity for any such expenditure as even the first, or lightest schedule, would involve. Up to the middle of July the prospects of the autumn crop were reported to be "good" all over the North-Western Provinces and Oudh; and a brief cessation of the rains was required by the farmers. That cessation has come; and the numbers on the relief-works, 146,000 at the highest, have already considerably diminished. Unless rain is withheld during the remainder of July and during the first half of August, there can be little risk of a general failure of the autumn crops; and in any case the Government would have some weeks of warning before great crowds come to the relief-works.

9. It will be understood that, if famine should come, the works in the first, or lightest schedule, are those to be first taken up. But large works, which, under ordinary circumstances, require the sanction of the Government of India or of her Majesty's Secretary of State, should not be begun without such sanction. It can hardly be possible that any such sudden emergency could arise as to render it necessary to begin works of these classes without previous sanction; and, in the event of continued and increasing pressure, needful attention should be given to the preliminary steps for obtaining it.

It will manifestly be desirable to take up the relief-works as much as possible in the order of their probable utility, subject to their giving the needful occupation to the population of the tracts where distress might actually arise.

LEAVE ON MEDICAL CERTIFICATE TO OFFICERS OF THE BRITISH ARMY.

Adjutant-General's Office, Head Quarters, Simla, 22nd July.—The following rules, detailing the procedure to be adopted, when a change of climate is deemed necessary for an officer of the British Army (not in staff employment), having received the sanction of Government (Military Department, letter 299a, dated 8th July, 1878), are promulgated for guidance in supersession of all previous orders on the same subject, and will be inserted between pages 212 and 213, Bengal Army Regulations:—

1. Medical boards on officers of the British service, not employed on the staff of the army, will, when practicable, be composed of officers of the Army Medical Department.

2. At the principal military stations (headquarters of divisions and districts), where the administrative medical officer of the circle, or in his absence the senior medical officer of the station, can sit as president, a standing medical board, composed of three medical officers, will be formed, and assemble, as occasions may require under the orders of the president. If it can be avoided, the medical attendant on a case should not be a member of the board which considers it, and under no circumstances can he sit as president. He should, however, be required to attend the board to furnish any information whenever his presence is considered necessary.

3. The ordering of other and special medical board rests with general officers commanding divisions and districts, on the recommendation of the administrative medical officer of the circle.

4. The proceedings of a medical board ordered to assemble, with a view to recommend an officer leave of medical certificate, will, except in the case of British officers employed on the staff of the army, invariably be prepared on Army Medical Department Form No. 27, and disposed of direct by the president in the following manner:—

For Surgeon-General's office, British Forces, to be forwarded through the administrative medical officer of the circle, British Forces	1 copy
To be given to the officer to attach to his application for leave	1 copy
For officer's own use	1 copy

5. Under no circumstances will an officer be permitted to apply for leave on medical certificate, in or out of India until such time as the recommendation of the medical board has received the approval—by telegram if necessary—which should be stated in the proceedings of the administrative medical officer of the circle.

6. Whenever a medical officer considers an officer of the British service under his charge to be in such a state of health as to render a change of climate necessary he will, with the cognisance of the commanding officer, report the fact to the administrative medical officer of the circle, who will take the necessary steps to convene the standing, or special, medical board, at such time and place as the circumstance of the case may warrant.

7. Whenever an officer of the British service at an out-station is in such a state of health as to necessitate an immediate change, and time will not admit of reference to the divisional or district military and medical authorities, the officer commanding the station is empowered, on the recommendation of the senior medical officer of the station, to convene a special medical board, with a view to enable the sick officer to proceed on leave. A report, however, together with a copy of the proceedings, should be forwarded for the information of the administrative medical officer of the circle.

8. The board, after a careful examination of the officer, and consideration of the medical attendant's statement of the case, will state in the proceedings their opinion, and add such recommendation as to change of climate and (in India,) as to the period of absence as they may consider necessary for the recovery of the officer's health.

9. In urgent cases when leave in India is desirable, the medical board may recommend, in addition, that permission be granted for the sick officer to proceed at once, in anticipation of sanction in general orders. But the concurrence of the administrative medical officer of the circle is necessary in every such recommendation.

10. Medical boards, when they find it requisite to express an opinion as to the necessity of a change of climate beyond Indian limits, will not specify the period of leave, but recommend for permission to proceed to Europe to appear before the medical board in London.

11. In the case of an officer of the British service recommended for sick leave to Europe, the medical board will, when necessary, specify the particular route by which, in their opinion the sick officer should travel, due regard being given to the seasons of the year, the interests of the service and the health of an officer. The board will also state in their proceedings whether the officer is fit, or otherwise, to do duty with troops during the homeward journey and voyage.

12. All officers of the British service requiring sick leave to Europe, who are entitled to travel at the public expense, should be invalidated during the trooping season, unless, in cases of such urgent necessity that the chief military and medical authorities of the division or district can approve of a deviation from the rule.

13. When an officer of the British Service is recommended by a medical board during the trooping season to proceed to Europe with a view to obtaining sick leave, a report to that effect will be made by the local military authorities to the Quartermaster-general at Bombay.

14. The case of an insane officer of the British service recommended to be sent to Europe, or to an asylum in India, will be specially considered by the medical officer drawing up to the medical history, and by the medical board, with a view to distinct recommendations being inserted by both as to the necessity for a soldier, servant, or other escort, or any special accommodation being provided for him en-route.

15. When an officer of the British service, on account of mental derangement, is sent to Bombay or Calcutta for embarkation to Europe, the officer commanding the station will forward a timely report of his departure, together with one copy of the proceedings of the medical board, to which will be attached a copy of the case [Army Medical Department Form No. 41 A.] to the deputy assistant adjutant general at Bombay or Calcutta.

16. Medical Boards in recommending sick officers of the British service for leave to proceed to Kashmir, for the recovery of their health, will also recommend some alternative place to which the officer should proceed if he fails to obtain a pass to visit Kashmir.

17. The medical officer who draws up the report of the case of a sick officer, and the medical board in their proceedings, will invariably state whether the disability has been or has not been, or how far it has been, the result of climate and caused in and by the service.

18. When it is not practicable to assemble a board at an out station, provisional leave of absence may be granted in an emergency to a sick officer on the certificate of the regimental medical officer; but on arrival of the sick officer at a station where a medical board can be formed he will at once report the circumstances to the station staff officer, with a view to appearing before a board without delay.

19. In such cases the decision of the medical board will be forwarded, after receiving the approval of the administrative medical officer of the circle, to the general officer commanding the division or district, who is empowered to require officers to alter their routes should the board consider the destination assigned by the regimental medical officer objectionable; or to remand them to their corps, if it appears that leave has been granted on insufficient grounds. A report of the course adopted in the latter case will be made to army headquarters, accompanied by a copy of the proceedings of the board.

20. A medical officer who may be called upon to grant a certificate to an officer when absent from his corps or appointment, will—except in cases of emergency—require the officer to obtain a statement of his previous medical history from the officer in medical charge of his corps. When, under similar circumstances, an extension of sick leave is required, the medical officer in attendance will request the sick officers to procure a copy of the medical statement on which the original leave was granted.

21. A medical certificate recommending leave to an officer of the British service will be invalid, unless the officer to whom it is granted avails himself of it at once; consequently an officer cannot proceed on privilege leave with the intention of obtaining an extension under a medical certificate granted to him before he left his post.

22. Medical officers on leave at hill stations are available as members of boards at such stations, and will attend to any requisition to that effect.

23. Medical officers on leave at hill stations are prohibited from granting certificates, to officers of the British service residing there, to enable them to appear before a medical board. Such certificates will only be granted by the regularly appointed local medical officers.

24. Under these rules the final medical boards at the port of embarkation are abolished, so far as officers of the British service are concerned.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE, AGRICULTURE, AND COMMERCE

Simla, July 31.—In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 11 of "the Salt Act, 1877," and in supersession of Notification No. 254, dated the 28th December, 1877, the Governor-General in Council directs that, on and from the first day of August, 1878, the duty to be paid on salt manufactured in the Division of Orissa by persons licensed under Bengal Act VII. of 1864, Section 7, shall be as follows for each maund of 82 2-7 lbs. avoirdupois weight:—When such salt is manufactured—(a) At any place in the Pooree or Cuttack districts, Rs. 2-8; (b) At any place between the Northern boundary of the Cuttack district and the Kanabans river, Rs. 2-10; (c) At any place between the Kanabans river and the Northern boundary of the Balasore district Rs. 2-12.

In exercise of the powers conferred by, "the Inland Customs Act, 1875," the Governor-General in Council directs that, on and from the first day of August, 1878, the following modifications shall be made in the rules published in Notification No. 156, dated the 30th June, 1876, as amended by Notifications No. 255, dated the 28th December, 1877, and No. 21, dated the 17th January, 1878, that is to say:—

(a) For the first paragraph of Rule 4, the following shall be substituted: "On all salt imported, a duty of Rs. 2-8 per maund of 3,200 tolas, that is, of 82 2-7 lbs. avoirdupois, shall be levied."

(c) In Rules 50, 54 and 74, and in Schedules C, E, and F, for the words "twelve annas" the words "eight annas" shall be substituted.

(d) In Schedule C the words "eight annas" shall be omitted.

In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 23 of "the Sea Customs Act, 1878," the Governor-General in Council directs that, on and after the first day of August, 1878, the duty on salt imported into Bengal, fixed by Schedule A, No. 49 of "the Indian Tariff Act, 1875," at Rs. 3-4, and reduced by Notification No. 172, dated the 28th of December, 1877, to Rs. 3-2, shall be further reduced to Rs. 2-14 per maund of 82 2-7 lbs. avoirdupois.

OBSERVATIONS.

For many years past the Government of India have been anxious to equalise the burthen of salt taxation throughout the country. The rate of duty on salt has always been higher, and, until the beginning of this year, very much higher in the Bengal Presidency than in the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay. In April, 1861 the duty in the Lower Provinces of Bengal stood at Rs. 3-4 per maund, and in the Upper Provinces at Rs. 3 per maund, while in the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay it was only Rs. 1-4 per maund.

2. In the Northern Provinces of India, moreover, the cost of salt was further relatively enhanced by the greater distances from the sources of supply, and the prices of the article to the consumer were consequently, on the whole, much higher than elsewhere.

3. The financial exigencies of the State did not admit of the loss of any part of the revenue derived from the salt-duties; and it became obvious that the only practicable way of reducing the excessive prices in Northern India was to equalise the duties throughout the whole country, for the great differences of which in the several Provinces there was no justification in principle.

4. In the five years ending 1877-78 the average annual quantity of salt taxed in British India was about 240 lakhs of maunds, and the average annual duty was about six crores of rupees, giving an average rate of Rs. 2-8 per maund. As the object of the Government was not to increase the total revenue from the salt-duty, but only to maintain the amount which had been previously realised, a rate of Rs. 2-8 per maund was taken for general adoption.

5. The duties in Madras and Bombay have accordingly been gradually raised, until, in December last, they were fixed at Rs. 2-8 per maund. At the same time, the duty in Bengal was reduced in the Lower Provinces to Rs. 3-2, and in the Upper Provinces to Rs. 2-12 per maund.

6. As announced in the Financial Statement of the present year, the Government of India has been in negotiation with the Native States of Rajputana and Central India, with a view to the adoption of measures which should admit of the abolition of the Inland Customs Line, the maintenance of which had been necessary to prevent the salt produced in those States from passing untaxed into Northern India, and to secure the full rate of duty on the importation of the less highly-taxed salt of the South, as well as the export duty on British sugar.

7. These negotiations have now been brought to a close, and the arrangements which will ensue will permit of the early removal of the Customs Line. The sugar-duties have already been abrogated, and the Government now finds itself in a position in which another important step may be taken towards the fulfilment of its policy of equalising the duties, by making a further reduction of 4 annas per maund in the Presidency. Thus, throughout the greater part of British India a uniform duty of Rs. 2-8 per maund has now been arrived at.

8. The Government of India is sensible that the changes in the rates of duty which have been necessary in carrying out its policy could not be made without causing some disturbance in the salt-trade; and it takes the occasion of the present reduction of duty to announce that, so far as those provinces are concerned in which the duty has now been fixed at Rs. 2-8 per maund, the measure of equalisation may be regarded as complete and final, and that no further alteration is contemplated; the financial position of British India not admitting of the hope of a lower general rate than Rs. 2-8 per maund being adopted within any period that can now be foreseen.

9. The Governor-General in Council thinks that this statement is desirable in the interests of the salt-trade, so that any uncertainty as to the future rate of duty on salt may be removed.

10. The North-West Famine Code, which has been approved by the Government of India, shows that the Hon. the Lieutenant-Governor is fully alive to the paramount necessity of limiting relief operations to the bare wants of the people; and that he appreciates the need for applying such tests as the exaction of full work, the location of works at a sufficient distance from centres of population, and the restriction of the relief wages to an average subsistence rate.

Home.

ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY, SANDHURST.—Preliminary examinations for admission to the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, will be held in London, Edinburgh, and Dublin on the 25th and 26th inst., and on the 16th and 17th of October.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday for £350,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted were—To Calcutta, £326,900, and to Bombay, £23,100. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 7 11-16d. will receive about 19 per cent., above in full. These terms are fully  $\frac{1}{2}$  lower than last week. The Council, however, propose to draw next week £350,000, of which not more than £100,000 will be on Bombay.

ON THE PARISH.—In the case of Major-General S. C. Milford, whose wife has become chargeable to the West Ham Union, and is receiving out-door relief, the Stratford bench on Wednesday made an order directing that one moiety of the next payment of a pension of £300 a year to which the major-general is entitled from the Bombay Staff Corps shall be paid by the Paymaster-General to the guardians of the union, in order that they may indemnify themselves for the relief they have advanced.

CAPTAIN FITZROY MACPHERSON, of the 93rd Highlanders, adjutant of the 1st Administrative Battalion Inverness Rifle Volunteers, died on Monday last, at Inverness, after a short illness. He had completed over twenty-three years' service in the 93rd Highlanders, with which he took part in the Indian mutiny campaign, including the relief of Lucknow, battle of Bareilly, defeat of the Gwalior contingent, and siege and capture of Lucknow. He was also adjutant of his regiment in the Umbeyla campaign, and had received two medals and clasps for his services.

DEATH OF THE HON. W. POWELL-RODNEY.—The death is announced, at his residence, Llanvihangel Court, Abergavenny, Monmouthshire, of the Hon. William Powell-Rodney, at the age of eighty-four. The deceased gentleman was the son of George, second Lord Rodney, by Anne, daughter of the Right Hon. Thomas Harley, a son of Edward, the third Earl of Oxford and Mortimer. He was born in 1794, and was educated at Eton. He was formerly in the Bengal Civil Service, and was a Justice of the Peace and Deputy-Lieutenant for the county of Monmouth, (of which county he was High Sheriff in 1860), and a magistrate for the county of Hereford. Mr. Rodney married, in 1824, Eliza Ann, youngest daughter of the late Mr. Thomas Brown, member of the Supreme Council in India, and had, with other issue, an only son, William Powell-Rodney, who was born in 1829, and was a magistrate for the county of Monmouth. He married, in 1856, Diana Hotham, second daughter of the late Sir J. W. Lubbock, Bart., and died in 1868, leaving, with other issue, a son, Harley, born in 1858, who succeeds to the estates of his grandfather.

DEATH OF CAPT. F. K. HAWKINS.—The death is announced of Captain Francis Kellett Hawkins, a son of the late Major-General Hawkins, C.B., of the Bengal Army, at the age of forty-five. The deceased officer, though comparatively so young at the time of his death, has seen much service, having served during the Sonthal campaign of 1855, and also in the Indian Mutiny campaign of 1857-58, being present at Benares on July 7, 1857, in the attack on Dhobys; he also served with the column under Havelock; commanded a detachment at Sydadabad, near Allahabad, on July 19, to protect the Grand Trunk-road, and captured a mud fort held by the rebel Joorie Singh on August 18. Captain Hawkins was also present at the defence of Cawnpore, under General Wyndham, in November, and at the defeat there of the Gwalior contingent on December 6, 1857. Afterwards he took part in the capture of Futteghur, in the action of Shumshabad, in the siege and capture of Lucknow, in the attack on the fort of Rooya, in the action of Allygunge, and in the occupation of Bareilly. During a severe engagement in the City of Lucknow he succeeded to the temporary command of the 4th Punjaub Rifles, which he brought out of action. His services were mentioned in despatches, and he received the Indian Mutiny medal with clasp. His commissions bear date as follows:—Ensign, December 20, 1854, Lieutenant, June 21, 1857, and Captain, December 20, 1866.

VENTILATION OF BARRACKS AND HOSPITALS IN INDIA.—A very interesting paper was read by the Hon. R. C. Parsons before the British Association on the above subject. It would appear that, notwithstanding every attempt to supersede the coolies in pulling punkahs over the soldiers in barracks and hospitals in India the human labourer still keeps his post. The cost of these men to the Government every hot season is nearly £50,000 a-year for simply fanning the soldiers! This sounds absurd; but, in fact, no European could live without it, and the difficulty of superseding the human labour lay with the human arm and its action. In pulling the punkah the human arm gives a jerk, and consequently the punkah gives a flap. It is this flap which is so dear to the British soldier, and leads him to roar "kenchaw" (pull) when the unfortunate coolie is overcome with sleep. No only do these coolies go to sleep, but they bring disease into barracks, and, moreover, the women of the bazaars dress up as men, and come at night to pull punkahs. Hence an ever-increasing desire on the part of the authorities to get rid of the punkah coolie; but no machine could imitate the jerk of his arm up to the time that Mr. Parsons and Captain Palliser took it in hand. Their motive power is compressed air, by which punkahs can be worked in any position with a much better effect than that given by coolies, because they can only give a jerk in pulling; but the compressed air gives the jerk in pulling, and also in pushing the back stroke. A beautiful little machine, working a punkah, was exhibited by Mr. Parsons at work, and attracted much attention. Not the least interesting part of the exhibition was a perfectly new ventilator, or air pump, designed by the Hon. Chas. Parsons, for pumping foul air out of barrack and hospital rooms. This ventilator is placed in the ceiling of the room, and when the compressed air which works the punkahs is admitted to it the effect is magical, the air of the room is simply pumped out, and yet no draught is created. The authorities in England have strongly recommended these most useful inventions to the Government of India. Not only would there be a great saving in the adoption of these inventions, but the existence of our countrymen in the East would be rendered more tolerable, and the effect of pure air in the barracks and hospitals would prolong life. Let us hear no more of foul air and noisome atmosphere in law courts and other places of public resort. The remedy is simple, cheap, and has now been fully proved before a distinguished and highly scientific audience.—Dublin Daily Express.

THE INDIAN RELIEFS.—The following movements in relief of the British troops in India have been ordered for the season 1871-78, and will be carried out under detailed instructions from the Quartermaster-General:—Besides time-expired men and invalids, the 1st Battalion of the 2nd (Queen's Royal) Regiment, now at Puna, which left England in July, 1866, will return home, as will also the 1st Battalion of the 8th (the King's) Regiment, now at Aden, which left England March 9, 1866. ## THE BANKS OF THE THREE PRESIDENCIES.

The financial year of the Indian Presidency Banks ends on the 30th June, and the accounts of these banks have just been published for the past year, previous to their annual meetings, which shortly take place. The following figures show the results of the working of such banks for the past year, and may be considered very satisfactory:—

STATEMENT OF THE PROFITS OF THE THREE PRESIDENCY BANKS FOR THE YEAR ENDING 30TH JUNE, 1878.

Banks.	Capital. Rs.	Net Profits for the year. Rs.	Dividends Paid. Rate.	Amount. Rs.	Transfer forward to Reserve Fund. Rs.	Carried forward to next year. Rs.
Bengal...	2,00,00,000	19,67,545	9 per cent.	18,00,000	2,50,990	47,318
Bombay...	1,00,00,000	19,51,407	8½ per cent.	8,50,000	1,00,000	29,140
Madras...	50,00,000	6,56,974	10 per cent.	5,00,000	50,000	41,833

The respective capitals of the three Banks convey a fairly accurate idea of the relative importance of the three great divisions of India. The Bank of Bengal, representing the Bengal Presidency, comes first with a capital of two millions. The Bank of Bombay, representing the Bombay Presidency, comes next with half the capital of the Bank of Bengal, and the Bank of Madras, representing the Madras Presidency, comes last, with a capital of fifty lakhs, or a fourth of the capital of the Bank of Bengal. The profits earned by each Bank are pretty much in the same proportion. The total net profits of the Bank of Bengal for the past year were Rs. 20,91,308, more than double those of the Bank of Bombay, which were Rs. 9,79,140. As regards reserve funds, the Bank of Bombay stands highest with Rs. 22,000,000, as against Rs. 20,28,377 for the Bank of Bengal, while the Bank of Madras has a reserve fund of Rs. 6,25,000. It has apparently been the policy of the Bank of Bombay to pay low dividends since it was established, and to make large additions to its reserve funds, and there can be no doubt that this has been a wise course. A study of the above figures would appear to show that Bombay will have to make much further strides in the path of progress before it can lay claim to being considered the capital of the Empire on the score of wealth or commercial importance. The banking figures now given indicate that in these respects Bengal is far ahead of the other Presidencies, and this is further confirmed by the figures of the Paper Currency circulation, which, according to the latest returns, are as follows:—Calcutta Circle, Rs. 7,00,55,775; Bombay, Rs. 3,05,11,510; Madras Rs. 1,61,27,595. Presidency Bank shares, at present prices, yield the investor, according to the average dividends paid for some years, a return of from 6 to 6½ per cent. per annum, and there would appear to be a probability of the shares of all the Banks rising in value as the trade of the country extends.—Statesman.

* After setting aside Rs. 83,377 for depreciation in investments, and Rs. 33,644 for wear and tear of Bank premises and furniture.

† After setting aside Rs. 20,000 in reduction of cost of premises, and Rs. 10,000 as provision for bad debts.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY
CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY
Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physio—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cocker's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

COCKLE'S PILLS will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outline of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with.
It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . .
The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Mu-hammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans, or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, August 23rd; Allahabad and Madras, August 21st; Calcutta, August 20th.

ACCORDING to the correspondent of the Times of the 8th inst., the reports from Madras are good. Prices show a tendency to fall. The total number on the work is 115,590; receiving gratuitous relief, 70,146. The prospects are favourable in the North-West and in Oudh. At Calcutta business is still stagnant; sixty-five ships, carrying 84,012 tons, are unfreighted. The rate of exchange overland on money orders is reduced to 1s. 7½d. per rupee. The actual loss on Secretary of State's bills on India, up to the end of August, in rupees, is 12,995,490, which is 288,819 in excess of the estimated loss.

THE reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending August 13 state that rain has fallen in all districts of Madras; prospects are generally fair, but excessive rains is reported to have done some damage in Kistna and parts of Godavery and Kurnool, while in parts of Tanjore, Coimbatore, and Trichinopoly want of rain is complained of. The total number on relief works is 125,000, and gratuitously relieved 73,456, more by 940 and less by 2,290 than last week. Good rain is reported throughout Mysor; sowings are in progress, and prices falling in some districts; the total number on works for the week ending the 3rd inst. was 32,315, and gratuitously relieved 13,980, more by 1,251 and 1,337 than in the previous week. General heavy rain is reported from all parts of the Bombay Presidency, including In Sindh floods have done considerable damage, and in Guzerat the crops are suffering much from excessive rain; a break is also required in Khandesh, Nasik, Kattywar, and Puna; elsewhere prospects are good. General and copious rain has fallen throughout the Central Provinces, and a break would be beneficial; prospects are generally good. In Berar also a break is desired. In Central India there has been copious rain in Malwa and Bhopal, where a break is now needed; good rain has also fallen in Gwalior and Bundelkhand, and prospects are hopeful. In Rajputana there has been good and general rain, and prospects are good. Rain has fallen throughout Bengal, and prospects are generally favourable; the inundation continues in Dacca; in Jessore and parts of Nuddea the outturn of the early rice is deficient owing to insufficient rain; and in Hazaribagh, Sarun, Gya and the Chittagong Hill tracts transplantation is retarded by want of heavy rain. In Burma good rain is now reported from all districts except those of the Tenasserim Division, from which no report has been received; prospects are favourable. In Assam prospects are good; the damage to the asu or early rice from inundation is said to be about three-eighths. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh good rain has fallen in Benares, Jhansi, Bareilly and Partabgarh; in Meerut, Agra, Lucknow, Sitapur, Fyzabad and Allahabad the fall is reported scanty, but later information announces a fall of 1·79 inch at Agra on the 14th; more rain is generally needed. In the Punjab there has been general rain, except in the Hissar Division; in all other parts of the province prospects are good. The results of the tabulated rainfall for the week ending Aug. 15 state that the only reporting stations which had no rain during the week were Mooltan and Delhi. The rainfall was generally in excess in Western India, the Deccan, Madras, and the Punjab. It varied slightly from the normal amount at the Burma and Southern Bengal stations, in Orissa, Chota Nagpore, and the Central Provinces. The districts where the rainfall was markedly defective were Assam, Northern Bengal, Behar, over which area the rainfall was barely 50 per cent. of its normal amount. Also in the North-Western Provinces, the fall was below the average at all the reporting stations except Benares, Agra, and Aligarh. The monsoon rainfall up to date is very considerably in defect over the whole of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (excepting the Rohilkhand Division), and in Bundelkhand. Telegrams of Aug. 20 however, reported very heavy rainfall in the Central and Western districts of North-Western Provinces. The Pioneer reports that except an occasional sporadic case cholera appears to have ceased everywhere. Such is the satisfactory state of affairs as reported from army head-quarters at Rangoon; however, cholera is still destructive, and H.M.'s 89th Regiment has lost several men. In Dhulia nearly 400 cases, of which 209 were fatal, occurred, during the week. In Ahmednagar 106 deaths, 68 in Sholapur, 88 in Satara; in Kattywar and Baroda cholera continued. In Bengal cholera was prevalent in many districts, but diminishing, and fever was reported from Malda, Burdwan, Sarun, Singbhoon, and about Jessore Sudder station. The cattle disease was very bad in some parts. In the Central Provinces cholera was very prevalent, 246 deaths being reported from Raipur, 110 from Bilaspur, but reported as declining. In Arakan, Prome, and Rangoon cholera still continues, but the railway was reported free. The disease has again appeared in several parts of Central India.

It appears from official reports sent to the Government that about five miles and the girders of eight bridges on the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway have been destroyed by the late floods. In the Ferozepore district the rise of the Sutlej River has again broken down the chief works of the inundation canals. Over 100 square miles are under water. The Simla correspondent of the Times of India telegraphed (Aug. 22nd), that the Punjab rivers are in heavy flood. Dera Ghazee Khan is inundated. The Government offices are closed. The abandonment of the station is probable. Jacobabad is also in danger. The country between Jullunder and Phillour is under water. The Sutlej and Beas bridges are shaky. The Lahor mails are two days late now, being conveyed by a detour to Ferozepore and Ludhiana. Incessant heavy rain here. A break is much wanted. A few landslips have taken place.

THE last recorded visitation of famine in Kashmir dates more than a hundred years ago. It is hoped that the terrible pressure of the present calamity, according to a recent telegram, will soon be somewhat mitigated by the ripening of the maize crop. But it is feared hands will be wanting to reap the rain crop. The beautiful Lolab valley is depopulated, whilst the never well-peopled country between Bandipore, Gurais, and Astor is a desert. Many tourists will remember a pretty little village of some thirty houses, which nestled in a grove at the foot of Galmurg. The skeletons of all its inhabitants have lately been discovered in a gorge above, whither they had retreated in their endeavour to escape the Maharajah's chuprasias, whose business it was to prevent emigration.

THE following circular has been issued, signed by Mr. C. Bernard, Officiating Secretary to the Government of India; "There seems fair ground for anticipating that the famine which has afflicted Southern India during the past two years, and the effects of which have been felt in other provinces, may cease during the coming autumn. In case these anticipations should be fulfilled, I am directed to suggest that attention be invited to the considerable number of prisoners who in some of the more distressed districts have taken to crime, and so have been sent to jail, partly in consequence of the high price of food. His Excellency the Governor-General in Council considers that when prices return nearly to the ordinary level it would be a justifiable act of mercy towards a special class of offenders if the Executive Government were to release, or remit the sentences of, a certain number of prisoners who may have been, in part at least, driven by want to commit crime. Such revisions of sentence or release would be within the discretion of the local Government, as by law (Act X. of 1872, Section 322) provided. But some preliminary inquiry and consultation with the magistrates or judges who passed sentence would be requisite in each case where remission of sentence was proposed. And I am directed to suggest that attention be now given to the matter.

BENGAL is suffering from a true dearth, or extremely high rate of prices for food; according to the Friend of India prices appearing to be at present higher than they were in 1873-74. The cause is alleged to be the export demand acting upon the low value of the rupee. The remedy suggested is a prohibition of the export of rice from Bengal, except for the Coromandel and Malabar coasts. Ceylon, the Mauritius, and the West Indies should be cast upon the Burmah supply. This suspension of the exports is recommended for a period of six months, until the great amun or aghani rice crop comes into the market in January.

THE prevalent belief that the poverty of India is shown by the fact that the cultivators send their wheat to market, and subsist on jowari, or the coarse cheap millets, seems to be hardly borne out by the fact that for weeks past the coarse grains bajra and jowar have been quoted at Agra and Allahabad at from eight to nine and-a-half seers the rupee, while wheat is at thirteen to fourteen seers. This seems to indicate an unconquerable preference for the coarser grains, arising out of custom, such as Walter Scott attributes to his countrymen for the "curney aitmeal." The possibility that the demand for wheat may have caused a disproportionately larger breadth of land to be devoted to wheat is suggested as a topic of inquiry by the Friend of India, which says that the failure of the khurreef cannot account for these comparative prices, if the theory above quoted be true. A correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette quotes an explanation furnished by a native, which seems hardly sufficient, viz., that the people cannot possibly digest wheat without the addition of a little ghee, which they are too poor to purchase.

It has been announced that the Porte intends shortly to dispatch an embassy to the Amir of Kabul, which, if true, seems, says the Daily News, to point to a realisation of the project of uniting the Mohammedan Powers in an alliance against Russia.

THE latest news in reference to the Mission states that Major St. John had gone in advance to Peshawur to make final arrangements for the journey. Sir N. Chamberlain and his staff left Simla on the 8th inst. Peshawur. The Mission will be formed there. Gholam Hussein Khan, the Viceroy's messenger to Kabul, is expected to return about the 17th, and the Mission is to start immediately. He has met with courteous treatment en route. Applications from Indian nobles of high rank, offering their services for the Mission, have been received by the Government. The Viceroy has selected Maharajah Pertaub Sing, of Jodhpore, brother of the Maharajah of Jodhpore, and Sirdar Abdullah Khan, of Tonk, uncle of the present Nawab, as being representatives of Hindu and Mohammedan families of the highest rank, to accompany the Mission. This is a wise act of policy, in so far that it will enlist the sympathies and the interests of the Hindus and Mohammedans in the success of the Mission. The Indian papers agree that the tribes on our North-West Frontier, though naturally manifesting a keen interest in the events attendant upon the arrival of a Russian Embassy at Kabul, are altogether friendly and orderly in their demeanour. To this may be added that the Khyberrees seem indisposed to place any difficulties in the way of the passage of Sir Neville Chamberlain's party through their Pass. The Bombay Gazette remarks that it is to be regretted that a sentimental regard for Shere Ali's feelings has induced the Government of India to delay despatching the Mission, as every day wasted in not representing the Imperial interests of England in Kabul allows a pro-Russian feeling to be consolidated throughout Afghanistan.

THE necessity for active measures to check the Russian advance into Afghanistan is argued by the Times Correspondent on the ground that the Russian-English Frontiers must soon become conterminous. At the beginning of last century the Russian advanced forts were 2,500 miles distant from those of the English. At the close of the century the distance was lessened to 2,000, which during the progress of the present century was gradually reduced to 1,000 miles. Since the end of the Crimean War that distance has been further reduced to 400 miles. Our present frontier line extending over 1,000 miles, and penetrable by numerous passes in the possession of hostile tribes is stated by military authorities to be indefensible. It is necessary to provide for a strong strategic defensive position to guard against eventualities. From this point of view it is indispensable that we should possess a commanding influence over the triangle of territory formed on the map by Kabul, Ghuznee, and Jellalabad, together with power over the Hindu Koosh. This would command the central routes of approach to India, indirectly cover the eastern and western routes, and at the same time enable us to threaten if necessary the whole line of Russian frontier. The strongest frontier line which could be adopted would be along the Hindu Koosh, from Pamir to Bamian, thence to the south by the Helmund, Girishk, and Kandahar to the Arabian Sea. This is to be attained either by diplomatic arrangement with Russia, or a protective alliance with the Amir, whose independence we must preserve subject to specific conditions, which shall guarantee our immunity from future Russian interference.

THERE is little or no doubt that the late Sirdar Sherdi Khan Shagassi, the Afghan Governor of Balkh, fell a victim to poison. He had always been regarded as a staunch friend and trusty servant of the Amir, but that failed to save him, the moment he fell under a shadow of suspicion of intriguing with the Russians. Of course his property was confiscated by the State. Trustworthy accounts represent the Amir as becoming more and more the slave of a savage and ungovernable temper, and liable, whilst under its influence, to sacrifice the lives of his subjects on the faintest pretext.

THE Russian Envoy to Kabul, General Abramoff, is described as an officer of no mean reputation. He fought his way up under Tcherniaeff; first distinguishing himself at the siege of Tashkend. He has already led several expeditions, and as Governor of Samark and is highly spoken of by Schuyler, who writes enthusiastically of the General's dash, bravery, and good government.

Two rumours as to appointments have been telegraphed during the week, which we give, subject to confirmation.

The first is from the Times correspondent, that the Duke of Buckingham succeeds Sir George Bowen as Governor of Victoria. The second, a current report mentioned in a Central News telegram—Should Sir John Strachey's eyesight not permit his returning to Calcutta he will be permanently succeeded on the Council of the Governor-General by his brother, Lieutenant-General R. Strachey, who is now in India engaged on a special mission for the India Office.

THE Act for the assimilation of Powers of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh contains modifications of the Oudh Civil Courts Act. In the Oudh Civil Courts Act, 1871, the Committee had made certain modifications, the effect of which would be to render the powers of the Chief Commissioner as regards the Courts in Oudh as nearly as possible similar to those of the Lieutenant-Governor as regards the Courts in the North-Western Provinces. For instance, the Commissioners, Deputy Commissioners, Civil Judge of Lucknow and Assistant Commissioners would henceforward be appointed by the Chief Commissioner instead of, as hitherto, by the Governor-General in Council. The Judicial Commissioner of Oudh would continue to be appointed by the Government of India.

THE repeated statements as to the annexation of Socotra are, the Pioneer is assured, founded on a misconception; matters remain as they were in 1876, when General Schneider arranged a small annual payment to the Sultan, in return for a promise not to cede the island to any other Power. The reports of annexation have possibly arisen from the annual visit paid by an officer from Aden to maintain this entente cordiale.

THE annual report on the Uncovenanted Civil Service Examinations for 1877-78 shows that during the year two examinations were held—the Special Test Examinations in August, 1877, and the General Test Examinations in February, 1878. At the latter were also examined candidates who had failed in some of the subjects in the General Test on a previous occasion, and Matriculated Students in spelling and handwriting. Besides these, three other examinations were held of candidates for the Subordinate Medical Department. The number of candidates registered for the several Special Test Examinations during 1877 was 4,006, the number examined 3,626, and the number passed 923, or 121 less than in 1876. The percentage of successful candidates shows that in 1877, as compared with 1876, there was an increase under "Judicial, Civil, Higher," "Criminal, Higher," "Civil Lower," and "Translation Test, Lower," and a decrease under "Judicial, Criminal Lower," "Revenue, General, Higher" and "Lower," and "Precis-writing, Higher" and "Lower." In the Pleaders' Test the percentages were the same. The languages in which the candidates passed were, with some exceptions (chiefly in "Translation Lower"), all in English. For the Police Test sixty-seven candidates presented themselves, but only four passed against ten in 1876. For the General Test 4,531 candidates came up. Of these 4,198 were examined, and 567 passed, against 581 in 1876, viz., in the Anglo-Vernacular Branch ninety-six, English Branch 234, Vernacular Branch 237. Of this number twenty-five were Europeans and East Indians, five Mahomedans and 537 Hindus. The number of candidates who came up for the General Test in the subjects they had failed in before was twenty-four. Twenty-three of these were examined, five passed, and four others failed in one subject only. Five hundred and twenty Matriculated Candidates applied to be examined in writing and spelling, 481 presented themselves for examination, and only 213 passed successfully. The attention of the Director of Public Instruction will be drawn to this unsatisfactory result. The receipts from fees realised from all examinations amounted to Rs. 49,315, or Rs. 555 in excess of 1876. The charges amounted to Rs. 41,459, or Rs. 2,696 less than in 1876. The balance was Rs. 7,856, against Rs. 4,605 in 1876.

REFERRING to the announcements which have been made as to a change in the proprietorship, which named the price paid, as well as the purchaser, the Pioneer of 14th ult. contains the following statement:—"It will suffice to assure the readers of the Pioneer that no change has either been made, or is in contemplation, which will be in the very least degree apparent to any one, and that those who have been long connected with the paper—whether as proprietor, editors, managers, or contributors—will continue to devote themselves as earnestly as ever to maintain it in that enviable position among Indian journals which it has always had the good fortune to enjoy."

A RESOLUTION of the Government of India in the Public Works Department has lately been issued, modifying existing rules with reference to the practice of taking security from lower subordinates in the P. W. D., when placed in charge of cash or stores. It appears that this practice has been temporarily dispensed with in the North-West Provinces and Central India as a tentative measure for five years; and the results are reported to be satisfactory in each case. The opinions, however, of the local authorities throughout India seem to be about equally divided as to the expediency of maintaining or permanently discontinuing the practice. The Supreme Government has consequently ordered that in future it shall be left to the discretion of the local authorities to determine in each case whether security shall or shall not be exacted; and, if exacted, whether the amount shall be paid in a lump sum or by deductions from salary.

UNFORTUNATE opposing factions are reported to exist in the Court of the Nizam, as well as among the people of Hyderabad, caused by the serious differences between the Prime Minister, Sir Salar Jung and the Nawab Shams-ool-Oomrah, his co-Regent. It is stated that previous to the appointment of the latter Sir Salar Jung remonstrated on the ground of the utter impossibility of their acting in concert, but was assured that the new co-Regent would not interfere in the internal administration. This pledge the Co-Regent has by no means carried out, and it is alleged that all the opponents of enlightened reforms look to him as their leader and supporter against the Prime Minister. A correspondent of the Statesman declares that it is time for the British Government to declare itself either on the side of the Prime Minister or the co-Regent.

THE reply of the Porte to the representations of the British Government with regard to the execution of reforms in Asia has not yet been given in the form of an official note, but Safvet Pasha has verbally informed Sir A. H. Layard that the Ottoman Government adhere to the scheme of reforms drawn up by the British Ambassador. In making this communication Safvet Pasha pointed out the necessity of obtaining the requisite means for carrying out the reforms, and asked for an advance of £6,000,000 on the surplus revenue accruing to the Porte from Cyprus.

ON the recommendation of the Government of India, and in consideration of the exceptional services rendered by him, and the esteem in which he is held by the Government, the invalid pension of Rs. 5,000 a year, to which Mr. George Kellner is entitled, has been increased by the Secretary of State to Rs. 6,000 a year. Mr. Kellner has also received, in addition to the above pension, a special donation of £3,000.

THE most recent intelligence from Cyprus states that the troops are still suffering from fever, as might be expected at this season. Sir Garnet Wolseley revisiting Larnaca, found the town much improved by the efforts of the Governor, Col. White, with the assistance of Col. Warren, who has been appointed to discharge the functions of Civil Governor of the Island. A contract for the construction of an abattoir has been signed, and plans for a market-place are under consideration. One of the first results of the settlement of Englishmen is the publication of a newspaper; and, accordingly, the first number has appeared of Cyprus, a weekly journal of Agriculture and Commerce, published at Larnaca on the 29th ult. It consists of four pages of four columns each, one half of the paper being in English and the remainder in Romanic, and, notwithstanding its modest dimensions, the price is 5d. per number. The chief contents of Cyprus, which is believed to be the first newspaper ever published in the island, are announcements relating to Sir Garnet Wolseley and the British occupation, and articles on the advantages of the English protection, with several columns of advertisements. Another consequence of our occupation has been the multiplication of grog-shops. A memorial signed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of Gibraltar and many members of the Church of England Temperance Association has been just forwarded to Sir Garnet Wolseley, asking him to place a check on such an increase of inducements to intemperance in the island, which, it is urged, would be a serious blot on the English rule.

THE Messageries Maritimes steamer Anadyr, which arrived in Shanghai on the 12th July, reported that when in the vicinity of Tong-Tong Island the progress of the steamer was suddenly stopped, and the cause was ascertained to be a tremendous ray (flat fish), which doubtless had been surprised in its sleep having been struck by the stem of the steamer. The engines were stopped immediately, and an attempt was made to raise the monster on to the deck. All the materials used in the attempt, however, broke under the weight, and the interesting capture had to be abandoned, to the great regret of all. According to the estimate of some persons on board, the fish weighed from 8,000 to 10,000 pounds.

PROFESSOR GARCIN DE TASSY.

All lovers of the East and its literature will unite with us in sincere regrets for the loss of the venerable Professor of Living Oriental languages in France. M. Garcin de Tassy was a scholar of whom any country might be proud, as he displayed in an eminent degree the quality which of all others is most valuable to a people—that is, painstaking perseverance. The good old Professor laboured with untiring industry and affectionate earnestness at the studies which he had taken up in youth; and he reaped the well-earned reward—a fame as extensive and as illustrious as the subject to which he had given his heart. Wherever Oriental tongues found admirers or a home, there the name of M. Garcin de Tassy was held in honour. There is even a pathos in the love which bound the Professor to his work, remembering that his fellow-workers fifty and odd years old are too young to have witnessed the beginning of his labours.

Professor Garcin de Tassy was born at Marseilles on the 20th of January, 1794, and at the age of twenty-three he went to Paris, to place himself under the care of M. Sylvestre de Sacy, another of the great Orientalists of whom France can boast. The affectionate care of this illustrious Semitic scholar was appreciated by the young pupil, who quickly became master of both the Arabic and Persian languages. He afterwards acquired Hindustani—an uncommon accomplishment for a Frenchman;—and it is upon his mastery of this latter language that his fame chiefly rests. In 1838 he was elected to the Académie des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres, in succession to the famous Talleyrand. M. de Tassy was one of the founders of the Société Asiatique de Paris, of which he afterwards became President; and he was also a member of the Royal Asiatic Society of England, and numerous other learned bodies.

A long list of books contains the result of the labours of this eminent man, of which it is only needful to name a few of the chief. The Mantic Ut-tair or “Language of Birds,” was a translation from the Persian, a language for which the Professor felt a special attachment. His Hindustani works are those, however, which, as said above, form the real basis of his fame. His “Aventures de Kamrup,” “Œuvres de Wali,” and “Christomathie Hindi ou Hindoui,” are of this class; but what may fairly be called the work of his life is his “Histoire de la Littérature Hindoue ou Hindoustanie.” This work is not only remarkable from the research it involved, and from its being the only book on the subject, but it became pre-eminently the work of his life from the fact that he continued it in the shape of annual supplements until his very death. This History of Hindustani literature possesses great merit, as is sufficiently attested by its wide diffusion, and this constant reference made to it. It will be a labour of love to some of the pupils of the departed Professor to carry on the work he has so ably commenced, and to enlarge and correct the History itself so as to make it answer fully the purposes of its venerable writer.

Professor Garcin de Tassy was not a mere book-worm whose love expended itself on the tomes he perused; on the contrary, he was a man of gentle and genial heart, who felt a human interest in the people whose languages he acquired. This kindly interest manifested itself in many ways, and is attested by his “Mémoires sur les Particularités de la Religion Musulmane dans l'Inde,” his dissertation on the “Poesie Philosophique et Religieuse chez les Persans,” his “Description des Monumens de Delhi,” and his numerous articles in the Journal Asiatique; but chiefly by the generous manner in which he opened his house to all his fellow scholars and to all interested in the East, both native and European. The name of Garcin de Tassy is well known to and esteemed by thousands of the natives of India, as well as by Europeans. He was indeed as remarkable for his gentleness and practical goodness as for his learning; and few men have the glory of leaving behind them so many personal friends. On September 2, at the age of eighty-four, Professor Garcin de Tassy breathed his last, dying, as he had always lived, a sincere and pious Christian.

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.

A QUARTER of a century ago one of the ablest statesmen who ever presided over the destinies of India, the Marquis of Dalhousie, when advocating the commencement of a system of railways in that country, expressed himself as follows:—

Great tracts are teeming with produce they cannot dispose of. Others are scantily bearing what they would carry in abundance if only it could be conveyed whither it is needed. Every increase of facilities for trade has been attended, as we have seen, with an increased demand for articles of European produce in the most distant markets of India, and we have yet to learn the extent and value of the interchange which may be established with people beyond our present frontier, and which is yearly and rapidly increasing. Ships from every part of the world crowd our ports in search of produce which we have or could obtain in the interior, but which at present we cannot profitably fetch to them, and new markets are opening to us on this side of the globe under circumstances which defy the foresight of the wisest to estimate their probable value and calculate their future extent.

Five-and-twenty years have elapsed since these words were uttered, a brief period in the history of a nation, yet what results have been achieved during the interval; were the noble Marquis alive to peruse Mr. Juland Danvers's valuable and instructive report for the year 1877-78 how astonished would he be; 7,551 miles of line opened for traffic; £113,344,541 expended in the construction of railways, and 132,040 persons employed. Yet railway enterprise in India is but in its infancy, for not only have the British Government executed works of gigantic magnitude, but several chiefs are endeavouring with commendable activity to develop, by this means, the resources of their territories; and the time will not improbably arrive when all the States within the "Red line" will be riddled with a network of rails. Nor can this result be regarded with indifference. Apart from the strategical importance of railways as a means of rapidly concentrating troops upon any given spot, their value as promoters of civilisation is incalculable; and in a country like India more particularly is this the case, for not only are there thousands of acres of soil comparatively valueless, owing to the want of means of transport, but the land is in places, as, alas! we too well know, desolated by drought and consequent famine. "It is difficult," such are the words of the Government of India Resolution acknowledging the services of the employes on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, who so nobly with "unflagging exertions day and night," lent their aid in bringing food to the famishing people during the recent distress in Southern India, "to measure the value of the railway at such a time as this, or the magnitude of the calamity which, without it must have supervened. If these events had happened before the construction of this railway, the misfortunes of the people, and the responsibilities of Government would have been indefinitely aggravated." If this be the estimate placed by the Viceroy's Government upon the value of railways in India, it must be a source of congratulation, that in a pecuniary point of view they are even now remunerative investments for capital, and bid fair to become more and more so as years roll on. The average earnings of all the State Railways during the year 1877 were £5. 5s. per cent.; in one case, the East Indian, as much as £9 per cent. was reached, while the Eastern Bengal, "in the latter half of the year, yielded a profit, which, after paying interest on debentures, would have given a dividend on the share capital at the rate of £13 per cent. per annum." Compared with the year 1872 the net average receipts have risen from £3. 2s. 4d. to £5. 5s. per cent. per annum. In consequence of this large increase of revenue, not only have Government not had to pay any guaranteed interest, but they have actually received nearly half a million of money into the public exchequer. Admitting that the results of the year have been influenced to no inconsiderable extent by the receipts on account of the largely increased traffic in grain consequent upon the famine in Southern India, there is still much ground for congratulation with reference to the past, and ample room for sanguine anticipation as regards the future. There is, however, one cause for regret, viz., the paucity of native holders of stock; out of 63,392 proprietors there are but 346 natives; not only does this indicate, apparently, a want of confidence on the part of the latter, but it deprives Government of a very powerful hold on its subjects in the event of disturbances on an alarming scale, such as occurred in 1857-58. Were all the national capital invested in Government securities, or in any undertaking such as guaranteed railways, the interest on which in the event of rebellion could no longer be paid by the State, it would require a considerable amount of persuasion to induce the populace to risk the savings of a life-time, in order to afford an opportunity to plotters and intriguers of enriching themselves by theft and plunder, even though the bait be held out of anarchy and discord, an allurements well nigh irresistible for Asiatics. Rebellion seldom comes where the people have anything considerable to lose; hence it would have been matter of congratulation, had Mr. Danvers' report indicated a commencement on the part of the natives of abandoning the deep-seated habit of hoarding, or laying out in ornaments and jewellery savings which should form a pension for the family.

It has previously been stated that a large number of persons are employed in connection with the railways in India. Although the far greater portion of these are natives, there is still a considerable element of European and Eurasian artificers, who in many instances have married native women; hence springs a large and increasing race of half-caste children, the importance of whose training "in a manner which would give them the best opportunity of becoming good citizens in the land of their adoption" has attracted the attention of the authorities in India. So long ago as 1860, that large-hearted statesman, Lord Canning, pointed out that, if—

Measures for educating these children are not promptly and vigorously encouraged and aided by the Government, we shall soon find ourselves embarrassed in all large towns and stations with a floating population of Indianised-English loosely brought up, and exhibiting most of the worst qualities of both races; whilst the European population, already so numerous that the means of education offered to it are quite inadequate, will increase more rapidly than ever. I can hardly imagine a more profitless, unmanageable community than one so composed. It might be long before it would grow to be what could be called a class dangerous to the State; but a very few years will make it, if neglected, a glaring reproach to the Government, and to the faith which it will, however ignorant and vicious, nominally profess. On the other hand, if cared for betimes, it will become a source of strength to British rule, and of usefulness to India.

No systematic arrangement appears as yet to have been made, but the Directors of the various Companies have expressed real interest in the question, and are taking steps to ascertain the best mode of meeting the object in view. More than this, a start has already been made. The Sindh, Punjab and Delhi Railway Company has commenced with a school at Mussorie, where accommodation is provided for twenty-eight children. A Hill school has also been established at Naini Tal available for children of employes on the East Indian Railway. There is, however, still room for improvement in Southern India, where in some places there is an "utter dearth of the means of education," while in few spots is the provision otherwise than "very imperfect." The great difficulty is that of climate; the moist, depressing, and in many cases malarious, atmosphere of the plains is fatal to the undeveloped frames of children of tender years; hence Mr. Danvers has wisely suggested that as soon as possible after infancy they should be removed to hill stations and there receive the advantage of school instruction and discipline. The matter was warmly taken up by Lord Northbrook during his period of Viceroyalty, and there is little doubt that his successor will use every means in his power to avert a pressing difficulty, and one which, as has been previously stated, will, if neglected, become a "glaring reproach to Government."

THE LATE CAPTAIN FELIX JONES, I.N.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Only a fortnight ago I addressed you a letter regarding the career of an officer of the Indian Army who was denied any recognition for his services. Now I write to you of an officer of my own Service, a man of well-known fame in the East, but who expired on the 3rd inst., at Upper Norwood, without having received any honorary distinction from the Government he had served for fifty years. Captain Felix Jones entered the Indian Navy in 1828, and for the succeeding quarter of a century was uninterruptedly employed in almost every survey of importance on which the officers of his service—admitted by such authorities as Rawlinson, Markham, Murchison, Goldsmid, and others to be unsurpassed—were engaged. Felix Jones was not even second to such men as Moresby, Carless, and Haines, and greater praise we cannot give. Though a mere boy of seventeen when he commenced work in the Red Sea Survey, in the Palinurus, under Commander Moresby, his talents found ample recognition, and the draughting of the northern portion of the Red Sea was intrusted to him, the southern portion being by Capt. Dugald Campbell, who still survives. On the completion of the survey of the Red Sea, which occupied between 1829 and 1834, Felix Jones was engaged in the survey of the Maldive Islands, again under Captain Moresby, and drew the original charts, the execution of which was so beautiful that they were submitted for the inspection of the Queen. In 1837 we find him engaged in the Gulf of Manasar and coast of Ceylon on the same laborious duty, and how laborious and exposed only those can know who have been similarly occupied in open boats under a tropical sun. Lieutenant Jones commanded the steamer Nitocris in the Euphrates Expedition from the 6th of May, 1840, performed the ascent of the Euphrates to Bales, a distance of 1,130 miles, in twenty days, in conjunction with three other steamers, commanded by Lieutenants Campbell, Grounds, and M. Lynch, and crossed the Syrian Desert to Beyrout, where he communicated with the British Fleet, then engaged in operations against Mehemet Ali, and connected the Euphrates and Mediterranean by chronometric measurements for longitude. He then brought the Nitocris down to the Gulf, but remained in Mesopotamia surveying the country under the late Lieutenant Blosse Lynch, I.N., until 1846. In the following year, on his being appointed Surveyor-General of Mesopotamia, he returned thither from Bombay, having completed a map of the countries between the Mediterranean, Kurdistan, Persia, and the Gulf. The list of his labours as a surveyor and scientific explorer between 1847-53 would fill a page, but the journals of the Royal and Bombay Geographical Societies are enriched with many of his memoirs and maps, and others were published by Government. After twenty-five years' continuous service he was compelled to proceed to England on sick leave, and returned by Asia Minor and Constantinople, bringing with him a map, in three sheets, of Babylonia, which was lost in the India-office. Our political relations with Persia assuming a threatening aspect, he returned hastily to Bagdad, and on the 1st of March, 1855, was appointed Officiating Political Agent and Consul-General in Turkish Arabia, and in the following October succeeded Captain (now General Sir Arnold) Kemball as Political Resident at Bushire. In the capacity of Chief Political Officer to the Persian Expedition he received the repeated thanks of Sir James Outram, who recommended him for honours, which, however, he was denied by the Government. Again, during the Indian Mutiny, he rendered service to his country by keeping in check the disposition of Persia and the warlike Arab maritime tribes to intrigue against British supremacy; but, though he received the repeated thanks of the Indian and Home Governments, in February, 1863, when, after a few months' sick leave to England, he returned to Bombay to resume his appointment at Bushire, he found himself superseded.

Captain Felix Jones may be said to have died in harness, as he had recently completed his magnificent map of Assyria. This work, which occupied the declining years of his life, is well-known to geographers for its completeness and accuracy.—Yours faithfully,

C. R. Low.

EXPORT TRADE FROM INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I beg to call your attention to Mr. Juland Danvers's Report on Railways in India, of which a summary is published in the Times of this morning. The advantages gained by abolishing export taxes on Indian produce, supplied to all parts of the world, are shown by the marvellous increase in the quantities of wheat and oil seeds exported. The export duty on wheat was abolished on the 4th of January, 1873; the quantities of wheat exported immediately rose with astonishing rapidity:—In 1875-76, 2,498,185 cwt.; in 1876-77, 5,583,336 cwt.; in 1877-78, 6,340,150 cwt.; what a benefit this has been to the industrious cultivator, to the peasants who plough well the rich black soil, or manure well the poor soils! The valley of the Nerbuddah produces wheat in richest abundance! When I was stationed in 1844 at Jubbulpur, wheat could with difficulty be sold, so imperfect were the means of transporting it to towns for consumption. The road from Jubbulpore to Mirzapore was considered of inestimable importance, because it enabled wheat (as well as cotton) to be transported to the Ganges, instead of rotting on the ground. Now, the Jubbulpur farmer may fancy with truth that the produce of his fields will feed the poor in London, Aberdeen, and Dublin.

And if the wisdom of the Indian Government on the 4th of January, 1873, has effected so much good, may we not hope that a Hardy, a Drummond, and a Yule will on the 4th of January next abolish the export tax on rice, by which measure the cultivation of rice in India will be greatly encouraged, and extended irrigation canals and other works will become very profitable, and Government will be able to sell its bills of exchange on India at much higher rates? All who wish to send home money from India will share in the profit.

In the same summary in the Times of to-day the Editor has shown that the wise abolition of export taxes on oil seeds has been equally beneficial. The exports of linseed during the past year have amounted to 7,198,918 cwts., while in the previous year they were 5,614,617. The exports of rape seed (mustard seed) have risen from 2,080,760 cwts. in 1876-77 to 3,193,488 cwts. in 1877-78.

Mr. C. A. Elliott, a Cambridge Trinity College man, who entered the Bengal Civil Service by competition, is well able to inform Government on the subject of the abolition of export duties. This gentleman is now one of the Famine Commissioners, and is highly esteemed by the Indian Government. In his Report in 1865-66 on the Land Revenue Settlement of the district of Hoshungabad, in the Nerbudda Valley, he wrote

But the feature which will most distinctly be impressed on his memory will be the immense fertility of the valley, and the great plains of wheat, which seem to stretch into immeasurable distance around him. They are often interrupted by jungle and hill, and are never really so unbroken as they seem to be, for a reference to a map will frequently show that much of the land is untilld, though the eye is too much attracted by the wheat to notice the intervening fallows. But in many parts of the district the traveller can stand where, for ten miles in every direction, he sees nothing but one waving illimitable mass of wheat.

ALARMING ADVANCE OF RUSSIAN INTRIGUES IN AFGHANISTAN.

It is evident from the information which has reached the Government of India that Kabul has now become an active centre for Russian intrigues, and the fact may well be viewed with alarm when adequate attention is bestowed upon the territorial acquisitions which the policy of the English Government has permitted Russia to make in Armenia. Russia is determined to lose no time in consolidating her power in Asia, and if she does not secure an ally in Shere Ali of Kabul England may depend upon it that it will not be for the want of Russian diplomacy. Hints of Russian movements in Central Asia seem to have leaked out in England, and the guarded manner in which the Under-Secretary of State has felt it advisable to reply to questions put to him in Parliament upon the subject shows that some new disclosure of Russian aggression will soon have to be made. The information which had reached India about the state of affairs in Kabul is full enough to lead to the belief that Russia has succeeded in making friendly arrangements with Shere Ali. So far back as the 22nd of July General Abramoff, the Governor-General of Samarcand, arrived in Kabul with his mission. There must have been previous negotiations between the Ameer and the Russian agent, because if there had not, the latter would never have been allowed to cross the Afghan frontier. The subsequent proceedings point to the establishment of an entente cordiale which it behoves the Government of India to view, if not with alarm, at least with a serious appreciation of the gravity of the situation. The mission was received in durbar by Shere Ali, who accepted letters from the Czar and the Governor-General of Turkestan. On the 2nd August the Ameer held a grand review in honour of his visitors, troops and representatives being summoned from all parts of Shere Ali's territory to swell the importance of the occasion. The next step in the proceedings is the presentation of written replies by the Ameer to the Russian letters. These letters, we are informed, were at once sent off to Tashkend by a special messenger. The Government of India's speculations on the character of the diplomatic negotiations that were carried on make no mention of any political probabilities. The Russians "are popularly believed to desire some establishments in the north-west of Afghanistan." What does "some establishments" mean? Does the phrase indicate that Russia has acquired, or is about to acquire, a foothold in Shere Ali's territory? The Russians "openly talk of opening up trade between Russia and Afghanistan." Again, the Russians "praise the Kabul manufactures which, they say, might be improved by the admission of Europeans into the country." What Europeans? Russians or Englishmen? Yet again, the Russians "express a desire to visit Herat and the western frontier." This last proposal, if true, is astounding. Perhaps General Abramoff and his Cossacks, who are singular emissaries for a peaceful commercial mission, will next proceed to Kandahar, and thence inspect the best means of passing through Khelat and the Bolan Pass! We trust that the Government of India now perceives the folly of what has been dignified with the name of a frontier policy. It has, upon the serious news which has just reached India from Kabul, decided to send a special mission under Sir Neville Chamberlain to confer with the Ameer; but we are afraid it is now too late for negotiations with Shere Ali to effect any good. That grateful potentate is already in the hands of the Russians, and perhaps it was natural for him to conclude that the Power which crushed Turkey, the greatest Mohammedan Power in the world—which had wrested from the Sultan territory both in Europe and in Asia—and which was striding on through Turkestan towards the borders of his own kingdom, was quite able to perform the feat of stripping him of his sovereignty just as it had despoiled the Ameer of Central Asia, and that, therefore, his wisest plan was to fall in with whatever it asked. What policy has the Government of India to show that could produce the same impression of irresistible power upon the mind of Shere Ali as the policy of successful aggrandisement which Russia has persistently carried out? The power which England displayed unmistakably before the eyes of the Afghans when Generals Pollock and Nott penetrated to Kabul is now forgotten, and there only remains in recollection the "humane" policy of successive Indian Governments which, instead of exciting admiration, has filled the Ameer and his counsellors with contempt for the Government of India and the influence of England. For years past Shere Ali has been petted by the Government of India with valuable presents of arms and money, but the pampered despot grew spoiled and sulky, with the result that partly through spite and partly through the moral influence of Russia's Turkish conquests, he has now thrown himself into the arms of the Power which of all others on earth England has the most reason to dread. Sir Lewis Pelly was sent to Peshawur to confer with an envoy from Kabul. The two talked a great deal; as this was strictly within the lines of the Government of India's policy; and finally the negotiations were brought to an abrupt termination. The Pelly mission, in short, was a complete failure, Shere Ali conceding nothing and not even showing any anxiety whether the Government of India remained on friendly terms with him or not. The Government of India then said it would leave Shere Ali to himself, retiring from the scene with these words—"If his Highness really desires to strengthen the bonds of his relations with us, we shall at all times be ready to reciprocate that desire, and to assist him in promoting the attainment of its object, but if he has no such desire we cannot act on the assumption of a sentiment the evidence of which is not before us. The matter is one which concerns his Highness rather than ourselves, and we cannot accept or acknowledge unreciprocated liabilities." Even this haughty determination to leave Shere Ali to himself produced no satisfactory effect. Shere Ali still remained sulky; the Russians made the most of the opportunity; and now the Government of India is placed in the humiliating position of being the first to sue for a re-establishment of those friendly relations which Lord Lytton was good enough to offer to extend to the Ameer when that gentleman in his hours of repentance might choose to ask for them. The fact is a triumph to Shere Ali, and the contempt which he must feel for the Government of India when he finds he has frightened it into sending a special mission to Kabul after it had professed to wash its hands of him and his affairs, will make him an exceedingly difficult person to persuade that England and, not Russia is the Power which it will be most to his advantage to appease. Lord Lytton's great blunder was committed when he consented to Sir Lewis Pelly's mission to Peshawur without determining at the same time to show Shere Ali that the Government of India was prepared to give material support to the demands of its representative, or at all events those "suggestions" which should have been demands. And now that Russian diplomacy, by its activity and alertness, has scored another victory over English policy, we cannot see how Sir Neville Chamberlain's mission can repair the blunder. Vigorous steps must, however, be taken immediately to secure the Khyber Pass, just as the Bolan Pass has been already occupied. The time has gone by for shuffling, timid, and discreditable political relations with the Amir of Kabul.—Bombay Gazette.

STATION TALK.

RAWUL PINDEE, Aug. 7.—At the present time, when the question of changing the civil titles of medical officers for military titles is attracting some attention, I think a case which occurred here recently will serve to illustrate the folly and incongruity of the system at present in vogue according to which the medical officers and subordinates are neither "fish, flesh, nor good red-herring," as they are employed in the military branch of the service without holding any military status, or themselves being liable to military law, at least so far as punishment goes. An apothecary the other night pronounced a soldier who was brought to hospital drunk, and sent him to the guard-room; the sergeant of the guard sent him back, being of opinion that the man was not drunk; whereupon he was detained in hospital. The following morning he was brought up before the surgeon of the regiment, and on being charged with being drunk on the previous night, he denied the charge. The apothecary was called, and maintained that the man was decidedly drunk when he saw him. This irritated the son of Mars, who, without any further ado, started kicking and punching the apothecary, and this in the presence of the surgeon. Now this sort of thing would never have occurred had both the surgeon and apothecary held bona-fide recognised military positions. A soldier newly arrived in the country, and who has all his life never known an apothecary to be other than a civilian pure and simple, cannot be expected to know intuitively that the Indian genus is a military officer, and so long as he regards the apothecary as a civilian, he of course thinks it a lesser offence to strike an apothecary than it would be to return an insolent answer to a newly-fledged lance corporal. To return to the case under notice. The doctor insists upon having the soldier tried by court-martial, whilst I believe both the colonel of the regiment and the general commanding consider that he should not be tried, and the probabilities are the man will get off scot-free. Leaving aside the question of discipline, involved here, I should think that to be kicked and knocked about in this promiscuous style cannot be over-pleasant to the feelings of the medical men, and it is therefore by no means surprising that they are so anxious to have military titles and recognised army positions conferred on them. I would go a step further, and advocate that both doctors and medical subordinates ought essentially to be soldiers, as far as the rules and regulations of the service go, and in the case of medical subordinates they should be enlisted and be liable to any punishment a court-martial can award, for it is the height of folly—as is the case now—to bring a medical subordinate before a court-martial for trial, when the utmost punishment the court can award him is dismissal from the service, even where the offence committed is carelessness or neglect of duty resulting in loss of life. The military position of warrant officers held by the medical subordinates only serves to ensure to them the privileges allowed to that class in the service as regards pay, leave, &c., and nothing more. I do not see any reason why both doctors and medical subordinates should not also undergo a course of instruction in drill and in the use of the rifle and sword, which knowledge would enable them to defend themselves if attacked whilst on field service.

Miscellaneous.

BAHLOLZAI HOSTAGES.—We hear that, with the permission and sanction of the Supreme Government, the detention of the Sahmon Khel and Bahlolzai hostages in the Punjab is to be continued for another year, i.e., to the end of the official year, 1878-79, at a cost of about Rs. 700 per mensem.

ADVANCES TO CULTIVATORS.—The Government of India is reported to have placed the sum of Rs. 4,00,000 at the disposal of the Government of the North-Western Provinces for expenditure on tuccavee advances, to be made without interest to cultivators, for the purpose of enabling them to purchase bullocks, ploughs, and grain-seed for the khureef season.

SUICIDE OF A SOLDIER.—A private in H.M. 54th Regiment, stationed at Fort William, named Alfred Benton, committed suicide on the 19th ult. by shooting himself. The deceased forfeited his good conduct badge about a month ago, which seems to have preyed upon his mind. —Pioneer.

SUICIDE AT ALMORA.—A Naini Tal correspondent reports the death, by his own hand, of Mr. Strachan, Postmaster of Almora, and late a captain in H.M.'s 47th Regiment. It would appear, says the writer in question, "that during a fit of temporary insanity he loaded a pistol and blew his brains out—from what cause is unknown, but it is surmised financial embarrassment." —Times of India.

RAJAH OF POOREE.—A memorial, signed by the independent chiefs, maharajahs, rajahs, and zemindars, &c., all over India, engrossed on parchment in four different languages, —namely, English, Bengalee, Persian, and Ooryah, is about to be presented to his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for showing mercy to the unfortunate Durponarian Sing, late Rajah of Pooree, who has been transported for life.

A PRINCELY GIFT.—His Highness the Maharajah of Gwalior, G.C.B., whose liberality is proverbial, has sent some lacs of rupees to his agent in Benares to perform some grand Anusthan of Mahadeva. One crore of Mahadevas will be worshipped, and while the worshipping goes on 500 Maharatta Brahmins will be daily fed; besides this a large sabha (meeting) of the Maharatta Brahmins will be held, when rupees will be distributed to them. —Bombay Gazette.

IMPORT OF MERCHANDISE.—The value of merchandise imported into Calcutta during the month of July last, showed Bengal a falling-off of Rs. 23,10,154, and that of bullion and specie a falling off of Rs. 10,10,871, as compared with the same period last year; while in the exports of merchandise there was a decrease of Rs. 1,27,86,615, and in those of bullion and specie of Rs. 2,71,031. The net amount of Customs duties realised showed a decrease of Rs. 8,53,430.

THE CAMP AT MITTRI.—It is contemplated to remove the camp now at Mittri a little more to the north, to a point about half way between the foot of the Bolan and Dera Ghazee Khan, on a line more parallel with our own frontier stations; and Major H. Collett, Officiating Assistant Quartermaster-General at Army Head-Quarters, has been deputed to assist Major Sandeman in selecting a new location. —Pioneer.

DEATH OF MR. J. INGLIS, M.A.—The death is announced of Mr. J. Inglis, M.A., the Head Master of the Fyzabad High School, who succumbed to an attack of cholera on Aug. 3. The deceased was popular in his own circle, and his worth was appreciated in the Educational Department. Mr. Inglis was well-known in Bombay in connection with the Scottish Orphanage and the John Cannon Schools. He was a graduate of Edinburgh University. In private life he was remarkable for his geniality.

CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.—We see from the fifteenth annual report of the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles that there was an increase of ten in the effective strength of the regiment during the past year, as compared with 1876-77. A striking illustration of the shifting condition of Anglo-Indian society is furnished by the fact that during the interval two hundred and seventy, out of a total of six hundred and forty-four, members were struck off the roll from various causes, while a hundred and ninety-four recruits joined, and sixty-seven effective members of former years rejoined. The effective strength at the close of the year was five hundred and ninety, and forty-five only of the total strength were non-effective.

OODEYPUR.—We understand that the native state of Oodeypur is likely to follow the example of Dholpur in subjecting itself to a re-settlement of the land revenue, and that the same course will be followed of transferring a settlement officer from the North-West Provinces, as was pursued in the case of Dholpur, of which the assessment was fixed with so much satisfaction to the authorities by Mr. Smith, late settlement officer of Agra. In this case it is not unlikely that the officer who will be made available for the purpose will be Mr. Wright, late settlement officer of Cawnpore. —Pioneer.

AUSTRALIAN HORSES.—The shipment of horses from Australia to India is going on briskly enough at present, and several of the finest and fleetest iron clippers have been taken up for the conveyance of this description of stock. The Mairi Bhan with 200 and the Cingalee with 120, have already sailed, and the Mistley Hall was to follow with 253 on board. The horses by this ship have been carefully selected by a Mr. Warren, who has an intimate acquaintance with the Indian market. The next ship to leave for India will be the large iron clipper Thessalus. —Bombay Gazette.

THE LATE MR. H. WOODROW.—The late Mr. Woodrow, who occupied the position of Director-General of Public Instruction in Bengal, was educated at Rugby, under Dr. Arnold. Thence he went to Caius College, Cambridge, where he took his degree in 1846 as fifteenth Wrangler. He was subsequently invited to enter the public service as secretary and member of the Council of Education at Calcutta, in 1849; after which he became Senior Inspector of Schools in Bengal. He was next appointed to the important office which he filled at the time of his death, and during the performance of the duties of which he died of heart disease at Darjeeling, on the 11th of October, 1876, deeply and widely lamented. A handsome bust of him in marble has been executed at the request of the natives of Bengal as a token of the esteem in which they hold his memory and their high appreciation of his worth. —Times.

CAMP OF EXERCISE.—The Pioneer gives the following list of the troops detailed to take part in the Camp of Exercise at Hassan Abdal:—Artillery: D. Battery A Brigade, F.A., and I.A. Royal Horse Artillery; C Battery 3rd Brigade; E-3, and G-4 Royal Artillery; 11-9 Garrison Battery; two Mountain Batteries of the Punjab Frontier Force. Cavalry: 9th Lancers and 10th Hussars; 1st, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th and 19th Bengal Cavalry; two Regiments Punjab Cavalry. Infantry: 8th, 9th, 17th, and 25th Foot, 72nd Highlanders, and 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade; 7th, 11th, 14th, 20th, 27th and 29th Native Infantry; 1st and 4th Gurkhas and four regiments of the Panjab Force, to include the 5th Gurkhas; also the 2nd, 3rd, and 7th Companies of Sappers and Miners. To the above very considerable force may perhaps be added the 24th and 28th Native Infantry, and the 4th Company of Sappers and Miners. The regiments and batteries of the Punjab Frontier Force will be selected by Major-General Roberts, its Commandant.

CHOLERA AT AGRA.—The Delhi Gazette is glad to say that the rumours which have been in circulation about cholera among the European troops at Agra have been very much exaggerated. There have been three cases at different times during the past three weeks, the last occurred on the 9th instant. A barrack sergeant living in cantonments was attacked on the 12th instant and died the same day. Some cases broke out in the lines of the 8th N.I. on the 5th instant, and the regiment moved into camp on the Brigade Parade Ground on the 6th. No cases have occurred in the camp. Since writing the above we hear that another case has been reported as having occurred in the Field Battery on the evening of the 14th. The Pioneer supplements this statement by the following:—Agra has been enjoying good and frequent showers, and the health of the station is improving. Mr. J. W. Jones, Assistant Commissioner of Customs, died there of cholera on the morning of the 17th instant.

TOBACCO CULTURE IN INDIA.

We have often pondered over the fact with some surprise, that tobacco culture has not attracted much European planting enterprise in India, in South India scarcely any. We say "with surprise," because there are so many districts in India, in the South in particular, admirably adapted by soil and climate to the successful culture of tobacco. Coconada, Dindigul, Trichinopoly, Salem, Coimbatore, and Mysor, are all districts where tobacco may be cultivated with equal success as in America, particularly in Coconada and Dindigul, where tobacco may be produced of a quality equal to Maryland and Virginia. The Godavery is essentially a tobacco-growing district. The tobacco grown on the Godavery delta at Coconada is the finest in India, and some samples, manufactured into cheroots by Messrs. Roberts and Co. of that town, which the writer smoked some eight years ago, were as choice and delicately flavoured as the best Havannah. The head of the firm retired shortly after with a large fortune. Coconada tobacco is largely exported to Burmah, where it is manufactured by the Burmese into the cigars which are so much appreciated by a large class of smokers in India. In the Godavery district, three-fourths at least of the population, of both sexes, must be smokers. The very children take a pull at the "weed" with as much relish as other youngsters suck a stick of candy. The writer is not exaggerating in the least when he declares that he has seen children of the tender age of four and five years solemnly puffing their "lunkas." Trichinopoly and Dindigul cheroots are as familiar as household words with smokers in Southern India, but a great deal of vile trash is sometimes sold as "Trichies." In Trichinopoly itself a "green-horn" is liable to be taken in. The reason why so large a quantity of bad and indifferent cheroots is exported from Trichinopoly and Dindigul is perhaps not known to many of our readers. The fact is that a great many of the tobacco farmers in the districts we refer to get heavily involved in the books of unscrupulous merchants, to whom they mortgage their crops in advance. The merchants force the farmers to force the process of manufacture, so as to get the tobacco into the market before other competitors. The consequence is that the tobacco is badly cured, and in many cases worthless. Captain Campbell owned several large tobacco plantations in Dindigul, which passed lately into the hands of a company formed at Madras.—Madras Times.

JOINT STOCK COMPANIES.—From the report of the Registrar of Joint-Stock Companies in Madras there are seventy-two registered companies, [involving a capital of Rs. 14,893,674.—Times Telegram.

HIGH COURT.—The Secretary of State has assented to the temporary appointment of a fifth Judge to the High Court of Madras, and has concurred in the recommendation of the Viceroy that a native gentleman should fill the post.

COURT MARTIAL ON MAJOR LANE.—The court-martial on Major Lane, of the Madras Staff Corps, lately assembled at Kamptee, has found him guilty of appropriating certain moneys, the property of the public rooms at that station, and has sentenced him to be cashiered. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has confirmed the sentence.

FLOOD IN THE GODAVERY.—A serious disaster is reported from the delta of the Godavery River. The system of sluices and anicuts, which restrain the river prior to the distribution of its waters over large tracts of country, has proved unequal to its work in consequence of the unusual rain. One of the principal anicuts has given way, and the waters have swept down into the plains, doing enormous damage to the crops.—Times Telegram.

PONDICHERY RAILWAY.—The construction of a railway from Pondicherry to the Gingee, where it will form a junction with a branch from the South Indian system, has been approved of by the French authorities. The railway is expected to be completed in about twelve months, and the South Indian Company are urged to push on the completion of their branch, so that no unnecessary delay will occur in opening up the new system of communication.—Times of India.

KIDNAPPING.—Army recruiters in Madras seem, for the last few months, to have allowed their zeal to outstep all common bounds of prudence. There has been in that Presidency a dearth of Eurasian drummer boys and trumpeters for some of the up-country sepoy regiments, and to obtain these the recruiters have allowed themselves to entice away boys without the slightest intimation to their relatives. The result of these indiscreet proceedings has been, in one case at least, a formal complaint to the Commander-in-Chief by those interested in the child.

THE LATE MR. E. L. PEARCE, C.S.—The Madras Mail of 15th and 17th August announced the death at Negapatam, from hepatic disease, of Mr. Edwin Langford Pearce, Acting Sub-Collector of Tanjor. He arrived at Negapatam a few months ago, and was soon widely esteemed in that part of Tanjor for his geniality, courtesy, and willingness to know and be known. He was a younger son of Dr. Pearce, Principal Inspector-General of Madras (Retired), and a brother of the first wife of Lord Napier of Magdala, as well as of Colonel Pearce, of the Mysor Commission, and Dr. Pearce of the Madras Army.

A PIOUS PHOTOGRAPHER.—A curious case has just occurred in the Madras Court of Small Causes. A native Christian having photographed the Archbishop of Goa and his suite for the sake of making some profit out of the sale of the photographs, presented a few copies to the Archbishop on the platform of the railway station, with a shower of pious blessings and a small bill for Rs. 66-8. The matter not being settled to his satisfaction, the pious photographer brought the affair into Court, and has had rather the worst of it.—Civil and Military Gazette.

A NATIVE CORONER.—Coming upon the innovation of a native on the High Court Bench is the appointment of a native barrister the Acting Coronership in place of Mr. P. D. Shaw, who has obtained an appointment as a judge in the Travancore Chief Court. There were several applicants for the post now given away to a native, both among members of the Bar and of the Medical profession, and so the appointment will cause disappointment; but there is no reason why Mr. Subbramanier, the native gentleman in question, ought not to hold the office to which it has pleased the Government to appoint him.—Madras Times.

BELLARY AND MARMAGAO RAILWAY.—The proposal for a railway from Bellary to Marmagao, according to the Pall Mall Gazette, is likely to assume a new shape. In addition to the objection that the terminus will be in Portuguese territory, it is now found that Marmagao is not suitable for harbour purposes. Further, the India Office is not disposed to give any official encouragement to the Marmagao scheme, although they have granted a concession to its promoters. It is not improbable that Carwar will be chosen as the seaport to which the enormous traffic of South Central India will be conducted, and, as Carwar is in British territory, it is not open to the objections which may be urged on political grounds against Marmagao.

OIL SEEDS.—It is in contemplation to start a new company in Madras under the auspices of some of the leading merchants for the sole purpose of extracting oils from the nuts and oil-seeds so abundantly produced in Southern India. When the company is fairly launched there will be an opportunity afforded of testing the quality of the ground-nut, cocoa-nut, gingelly, castor and linseed oils, as manufactured from the rude, primitive, native mills worked by bulls, and those manufactured by the imported European machinery. It is an ascertained fact that the refuse obtained from the native mills contains more nourishment for plants than that obtained from European machinery at Colombo and elsewhere. Consequently a very great and an incessant demand exists for a certain preparation from the refuse of the native mills, resembling cakes.

commonly known among the natives and mercantile community as poonack. The reason for this preference is owing to the poonack retaining a good quantity of oil from insufficient pressure, whereas the refuse obtained from the process of crushing the nuts and seeds by the European method perhaps does not possess much or an equal quantity of nourishing matter in it for the plants.—Madras Times.

CONVEYANCE OF GOVERNMENT SALT.—Mr. Bliss, the Special Salt Commissioner, has entered into a contract with one of the local firms, Messrs. Wilson and Co., for the conveyance of Government salt from Negatam and other southern ports to Vizagapatam and any other port in the Northern Circars, where salt may be required; Messrs. Wilson and Co. being allowed to arrange for the chartering of sailing or steam vessels according to the exigencies of the demand and service. The cost of putting the salt on board at the port of shipment, and of landing it at the port of destination, is to be borne by Government. This would amount to rs. two per ton, and a like amount will have to be paid for landing it at the port of destination. Taking at the rate of thirteen bags to a ton, the item of gunney bags, at say five annas per bag, would amount to rupees two and annas thirteen, and the cooly hire from the salt-pan to the boat at port of shipment, and from the boat to the place of stowage at the port of destination, at one anna per bag, would cost an additional thirteen annas per ton, so that the entire cost of transport from any one of the southern ports to any other port in the north is about rupees twelve and annas ten per ton. Dissatisfaction, however, exists in certain quarters, owing to the terms of the contract having been settled privately and no notification, inviting tenders, having been published.—Madras Times.

PROTEST AGAINST THE BOMBAY LICENCE TAX.

The following petition has been drawn up by the Bombay Trades Association, and a circular drawing attention to it has been widely circulated in English, Guzerati and Marathi:—

To his Excellency Sir Richard Temple, Bart., K.C.S.I., &c, &c., &c., Governor of Bombay in Council.

The Humble Petition of the undersigned Inhabitants of the City of Bombay, engaged in Trades, Dealings, and Industries.

SHOWETH,—That an Act, entitled The Bombay Licence Act of 1878, otherwise Bombay Act III. of 1878, passed by the Bombay Legislative Council, received your Excellency's assent on the 13th February, 1878, and that of his Excellency the Governor-General on the 11th of March, 1878, and was published by your Excellency on the 19th March, 1878. That the said Act was enacted "to provide means for defraying the public expenditure from time to time or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine." That incurred your petitioners fully recognise the necessity which exists of providing the Government of India with resources to meet such expenditure, and are quite prepared to bear their due share of same.

tion for the purpose in common with the rest of the community. That in the opinion of your petitioners the Act above recited is calculated in a great measure to defeat the objects with a view to which it was enacted; to produce an insufficient amount; to press unduly on certain classes of the community whilst exempting others entirely from any share in the public burdens; and, as an instance of purely class legislation, to arouse a spirit of discontent and dissatisfaction generally. That this Act imposes taxation only on those classes who, next to the agricultural class, are the greatest sufferers in times of dearth and famine. That at such periods trade is depressed and diverted from its ordinary channels, and the profits of all concerned in trades, dealings, and industries are seriously curtailed. That the circumstance that a few grain monopolists realise large profits on such occasions is no ground on which to base a course of penal legislation for the industrial classes at large. That members of Her Majesty's civil and military services, professional men, and all persons in receipt of fixed incomes, are exempted from the operation of the Act, whilst the income of such persons suffers no diminution from famines—the only inconvenience to which they are subjected at such times being the rise in the price of provisions, which tells equally, or with even greater severity, on the industrial classes. That the assessment of individuals is by the Act committed solely to the discretion of the Collector, without any provision being made for the collection of such information as could alone enable him to arrive at a just conclusion. That the Act provides that there shall be no appeal whatever from the orders which the Collector may think fit to issue on the subject, and your petitioners are thus deprived of any possibility of redress should the Collector for the time being be disposed to work the Act in an oppressive manner. That small shopkeepers, whose profits amount only to a bare subsistence for their families, are placed in the same category with large establishments such as the Bank of Bombay and others, each of which affords large incomes to a great number of persons whose individual capacity to contribute to the public burdens is much greater than that of traders generally. That the words "dealings" and "industries" are not defined, and purely arbitrary lines of distinction are thus rendered necessary. As instances of this, your petitioners may point out that dentists are taxed, whilst medical men, who only make dentistry one branch of their practice, are exempted, and that notaries public not being solicitors, are taxed, whilst those who are also solicitors escape. That for a series of years the classes engaged in "trades, dealings, and industries" have suffered so much from the depression of trade consequent on the depreciation of silver, the recurrence of famines, and other causes, that the imposition of exceptional taxation on them whilst their more fortunate official, professional, and property-holding fellow-citizens are exempted is felt to be burdensome, oppressive, and cruelly unjust. Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray that your Excellency in Council will take measures to procure the repeal of the said Act III. of 1878, and the enactment in substitution thereof of a new Licence Act, which shall distribute the burden of taxation over all non-agricultural sections of the community (military men not in civil employ alone excepted) in accordance with the capacity of the taxpayer to contribute thereto. That the said new License Act shall make provision for the appointment of a committee of revision with power to adjudicate in all cases of alleged unfairness of assessment. Such a measure your petitioners feel assured would be cheerfully accepted by all classes of Her Majesty's loyal subjects, and would produce better financial results. Or, failing the enactment of this suggested new License Act, your petitioners humbly pray for the re-imposition of the Income Tax recently existing, and the substitution of the same for Act III. of 1878. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will every pray, &c., &c.

STATION TALK.

AHMEDABAD, Aug. 9.—News comes from Neriad of another murder there. The case is creating much sensation as the person who is charged with the crime is no less a personage than the foudzar of the place. The facts as reported are these:—A short time ago a large quantity of valuable ornaments was stolen from the house of a wealthy bunia. The police set to work, and have succeeded in recovering a large amount of the stolen property. It is alleged that the police freely used torture as a means of discovery. The deceased was one of the persons who were submitted to this revelation-process and died under it, having been beaten to death. It is said the man was so hardly dealt with that it was found, when too late, that he could not survive the treatment he received. The foudzar became alarmed, and in order to avert consequences thrust some poison down the man's throat to make it appear that he had committed suicide. The post mortem examination was, singularly enough, performed at Kaira, about thirteen miles from Neriad. From the consequent delay and exposure during the transit, the body had become so swollen that the result of the post mortem examination is anything but satisfactory. The reason for making this examination away from Neriad is that the local medical man, a native, is an enemy of the foudzar's. If this really is the reason it is far from being satisfactory. The relations of the dead man are clamorous for justice. Though to all outward appearance poor, they say they are prepared to spend Rs. 10,000 to avenge (what they consider) the murder of their kinsman. They have telegraphed to the Revenue Commissioner and the Kaira Collector, who are both at Puna, to have the fouzdar removed from Neriad, as, it is alleged, his retaining his present office will deter their witnesses from giving evidence against him. The request under the circumstances appears reasonable, and to ensure impartial justice it is to be hoped will be acceded to. These are the facts so far as I have been able to make out from many confused statements. I may just say that charges of torture are by no means uncommon against the mofussil police, and are in many cases falsely got up.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

A DEPUTATION of the stall-keepers of the Crawford Markets, Bombay, consisting of 200 poor men and women, waited recently upon the Municipal Commissioner to protest against the rates at which they were assessed for the new Trades License Tax, and to see if he could soften the heart of the Collector.

GUZERATI HISTORY OF THE LATE WAR.—A history of the late Turko-Russian war, by Mr. E. J. Khory, has been published at the Bombay Samachar Press. It is an acquisition to Guzerati literature, and Parsees and Hindus, we hear, devour its pages greedily. It is such books as this that are calculated to enrich degenerate Guzerati literature. The history of the Franco-Prussian war was written by the same intelligent gentleman.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.—The Royal Artillery stationed at Colaba having completed the arduous duty of re-arming the different forts erected for the defence of Bombay with the heaviest guns yet sent to this country, a Government resolution has been issued thanking the corps for the manner in which the wishes of Government have been carried out during a most trying period.

FEVER AT KARACHI.—A singular kind of fever is prevalent just now among Europeans in Karachi. It comes out as an eruption not very unlike certain eruptive or military fevers, which it differs from, of course, in not being contagious in any degree. Many have suffered, and are suffering from it; but it does not appear to be dangerous particularly.

SALT REGULATIONS IN SINDH.—The Gazette of Aug. 10 contains the rules made by the Governor-General in Council for the regulation of the salt manufacture in Sindh. The districts in which alone the manufacture is permitted are the Karachi, Haiderabad, Shikarpur, and Upper Sindh Frontier districts. The protected areas within which no person shall have salt exceeding twenty seers in weight in his possession, or shall sell salt without a license, are defined as extending ten miles from the boundary of each natural salt deposit on all sides.

FORGED NOTES.—Four instances of forged notes, says the report on the operations of the Currency Department, were brought to notice in the Bombay Circle during the past year. The forgeries were detected and the notes forwarded to the Government of India. In each case the note purported to be of the value of Rs. 100 and of the same series. No doubt they were the work of a single gang, which unfortunately has not been discovered. Warnings have been circulated to receive with great caution notes which bear the characters of the series in question.

DEATH OF REV. MR. SCHWARZ.—The death is announced of the Rev. Mr. Schwarz, Church Missionary Society, Nassick. The Bombay Guardian of 17th ult. says:—The announcement of his death will cause great sorrow to the friends of Missions in this Presidency. Mr. Schwarz arrived in Bombay January, 1855, and was appointed to Jooneer. More than half of his period of missionary service was passed at that place. He has also been stationed at Aurangabad, Bouldana, Bombay and Nassick. For the last three years he has been resident missionary at Sharanpoor, near Nassick, where he was Superintendent of the Native Orphanage, with pastoral charge of the church. Mr. Schwarz was the author of a number of works in the Marathi language. He translated the Heart-Book, also Kurtz's Scripture History, and prepared a History of the Church of Christ during the first three centuries.

CHOLERA AND SUPERSTITIOUS CRUELITIES.—A Rajkote correspondent dwells on the cruelty which the superstitious fears of the people impel them to practise on innocent persons suspected of being somehow in league with the goddess of cholera. The popular fury not long ago vented itself on the sweeper caste, and members of that persuasion were subjected to a pitiless persecution and torture; but lately cases of a similar kind have cropped up in a Kattywar village named Sirdhar, and in Morvee, in which the victims have been selected without discrimination as to age, rank, or sex. Happily, the perpetrators of the crime at Sirdhar are already in the hands of justice, his Highness the Thakore himself taking an active part in bringing them to punishment. The circumstances of the deeds done in Morvee are peculiarly painful. One of the victims, a young girl, was branded all over with red-hot iron, and the other, a youth, was buried alive in the ground up to his neck, and left to die by a slow process of starvation and exposure.

COURT-MARTIAL.—At a general court-martial, held at Kamptee on the 17th July, Captain John Beresford Gahan, 31st Regiment, or Trichinopoly Light Infantry, was arraigned on the following charge:—For conduct unbecoming an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at Raipur, on or about the 24th of May, been in a state of intoxication and incapacitated for the performance of any duty. The Court found the prisoner guilty of the charge, and sentenced him to be severely reprimanded, and to forfeit one year of his Army and Staff Service. In confirming this sentence Sir Neville Chamberlain remarked as follows:—"I am unable to approve the sentence awarded by the Court, because I consider it too lenient to adequately meet the offence committed. The prisoner pleaded 'Not Guilty,' and in his defence has urged in extenuation that he was in his house when he happened to be found in a state of intoxication, that he had attended the usual regimental parades during the week up to the day in question, and that on that day there was no parade. It would be seen from the above line of defence as if Captain Gahan was of opinion that, so long as an officer is not required for duty, it is not unbecoming to his character to be found in his quarters in a state of intoxication. This is most certainly and most properly not the view taken by officers in regard to their men, and any officer who gives himself over to habits of intemperance at home, when off duty, is unworthy to hold the Queen's Commission. The occasion adverted to in the charge is not the only one in which Captain Gahan's habits of intemperance have come to my notice; and I am forced to the conclusion that he has proved himself unfit to be relied upon for the efficient discharge of his duties as Wing Officer with a Native Regiment. Captain Gahan is released from arrest. He will report himself to the Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, Nagpore Force."

THE JOWAKI EXPEDITION.

The report on the military operations undertaken against the Jowakis last year is from General C. T. Keyes, C.B., who commanded the force, dated Abbottabad, March 8:—

The Jowaki Afridis having tendered their submission to Government in open durbar at Peshawar on March 4, 1878, arrangements were immediately made, under instructions personally communicated by the Hon. the Lieut.-Governor, for the withdrawal of the troops which have been in occupation of their valley for the last four months, and I have now the honour to report the complete evacuation yesterday of the Jowaki Valley, and the return to their respective quarters of the troops which have been employed in the recent operations against that tribe.

2. As promised in my letter No. 118FF of Feb. 1, 1878, I now proceed to give a brief résumé of those operations, and to bring to the notice of Government the names of those officers who, in prominent positions, performed important services and distinguished themselves by their zeal and energy.

3. On Nov. 9, 1877, the Paiah Valley was occupied as detailed in my No. 38FF of Nov. 21, and the troops remained in the positions taken up there until the 15th.

4. It appears desirable here to note for future guidance that, under ordinary circumstances, it would be difficult, if not impossible, for a large force to occupy this valley for any length of time, in consequence of the scarcity of water. It is true that there are wells in the principal villages, but these would be only sufficient in dry seasons for a limited number of men; there would be no means of providing for horses or baggage animals. Babri has himself since informed us that the Jowakis themselves are often compelled to go to the Naru for water, and that he fully expected to see us forced to abandon our position from this cause; and he had been comforting himself with the hope of following us up when we retired, and inflicting severe loss on our troops. Indeed, as it was, had it not been for the heavy rain which fell on the 12th, we should have been much inconvenienced, as the pools on which our animals were dependent were beginning to fail.

5. Up to this time the enemy appeared in considerable numbers on the hills to the north of our position; but as they would have retreated to the higher ranges if attacked, only to follow us up when we fell back, I considered that it was at that time undesirable to make such a move, as well as contrary to my instructions, which were to maintain strict blockade, and to watch for an opportunity of inflicting loss on the enemy without unnecessarily exposing the troops.

6. My chief anxiety at Paiah was for the safety of our convoys over a long line of roads open to ambushade, every movement along which could be observed from the hills occupied by the enemy within a distance of two miles. It was a marvel to me that they never attempted to annoy us on this road. At first they were deterred by expecting an attack on themselves, and were ignorant of our intention; but had we remained much longer at this place they would have done so, for they had begun, just before we changed ground, to discuss the best way of interrupting our communication.

7. On November 15 a new position was taken up at Shindeh in front of Jamu, with the object of attacking that place as soon as a favourable opportunity offered. From Shindeh it would have been easy any time to have made an assault on that stronghold; but the enemy would easily have made their escape to the hills beyond, while it was doubtful, then, whether we could have taken a safe position in the valley for occupation. My object was to induce the enemy to suppose that I intended to attack them by the comparatively easy entrance to the valley by Bagh, while I searched for a way to get round them, and cut off their retreat to the hills.

8. Heavy and long continued rain put a stop to all active operations, and it was not until the end of November that I satisfied myself that an entrance could be effected at both ends of the valley, notwithstanding the difficult nature of the ground, and that there was every reason to hope that a well-timed movement in three directions would render the retreat of the enemy most difficult, and expose them to heavy loss, if it did not lead to the capture of some at least of their number. In my letter No. 59FF of 2nd December, 1877, I had the honour of reporting the manner in which the assault was carried out, and the result of the operations.

9. I would here record my opinion that, in the event of it ever being found necessary to again make a hostile entry into Jamu it would be desirable to attack it in a somewhat similar manner to that described in these reports, adding, if available, a fourth column to co-operate by the Basid Khel Kotal.

10. On December 4 Jamu was abandoned, the troops falling back on their former position at Shindeh, and on the 7th Ghariba was attacked.

11. I had for some time heard that Mushki (one of the principal Jowaki leaders) had taken up his residence at Ghariba, and it was my object to capture him and his followers, if possible. The indifference which I had purposely shown towards this place produced the effect that I had wished. I have since ascertained that it was believed that I looked upon it as too insignificant a place to attack, as we had remained at Paiah so long without doing so. The inhabitants were consequently off their guard when the troops entered it on the morning of the 7th. Mushki, unfortunately, and most of his followers, had left it the evening before. My report No. 72FF of Dec. 9, 1877, details the manner in which Ghariba was surrounded, and the result of the operations.

12. On the 31st December the Dargai heights were occupied as reported in my No. 9c of 8th January, 1878.

13. The Honourable the Lieut.-Governor having desired me to place on record my opinion of the best mode of assaulting these heights, I would here remark that, in my opinion, it would not be desirable to attempt to force them in face of any serious opposition. They can be ascended from different spurs, any one of which could be rendered almost impregnable by a few determined men, and I cannot conceive any circumstance arising that would justify such a risk. If it be ever again necessary to overrun the Jowaki lands, or to proceed through them to Torchappar, or other Galli Afridi villages, the proper route would be by Musa Derah. Troops moving by that line would enable columns from the Kohat and Peshawar sides to co-operate with effect.

14. On the 15th January, 1878, the Dargai heights were again occupied, the troops retiring to Turki and Shindeh through the Naru defile on 20th January, 1878, as reported in my No. 118FF of 1st February, 1878.

15. It appears desirable to note for future reference that, had it not been for the unusual and abundant rain that fell during our occupation of the valley, it would have been impossible to have maintained our position at Shindeh for more than a few days. At Turki only could a sufficient supply of water be depended on for a large body of troops.

16. I now desire to bring to the notice of Government the admirable conduct of the troops throughout these operations. At Paiah the men not actually on duty had tolerably fair shelter; but immediately after we had taken up new positions at Shindeh and Turki they were exposed to thirty-six hours' rain with scarcely any shelter, and again not many days afterwards seventy hours' almost continuous rain under similar circumstances. They were without any change of clothes for nearly a month; night duty was exceptionally heavy in consequence of the extended nature of our position, yet the spirits of the men never flagged; their cheerfulness and endurance under the hardships occasioned by the unseasonable and unusually heavy rain was beyond all praise.

17. My hearty thanks and acknowledgments are due to all the officers for their assistance and for the excellent example which they showed to the men by their own bearing throughout these prolonged operations.

18. My special thanks are due to the following officers:—

Colonel D. Mocatta, Commandant, 3rd Sikh Infantry. This officer had much labour and anxiety in command of the Kohat district before active operations commenced. He commanded a column on each occasion in which the troops were engaged, as mentioned in my several despatches at the time, and he has afforded me great assistance at all times; and much credit is due to him for the able manner in which he carried out every duty entrusted to him.

Major G. N. Money, 2nd in command, 3rd Sikh Infantry, who joined his regiment from furlough just before the attack on Jamu, and commanded it with much spirit on that occasion. Subsequently he rendered valuable service by establishing heliographic communication between different posts, the apparatus for which he had purchased and brought from England at his own expense.

The command of the 3rd Sikh Infantry devolved, in the absence of Colonel Mocatta and Major Money, on Captain W. Aislabie, who carried out the duty in the advance on Paiah, Ghariba, the advance on the Dargai heights, and operations at the Naru Khula, to my entire satisfaction, and with much credit to himself.

Major C. J. Griffiths, 3rd Sikh Infantry, who was selected for the responsible duty of the command of the Kohat garrison during the absence of the troops. This officer also led the advanced guard on the 9th November through the Tortang Pass.

Colonel P. F. Gardiner, Commandant, 5th Goorkha Regiment, who had charge of the eastern blockade before the troops took the field, and commanded a column throughout the operations, as already reported. This officer's regiment (the 5th Goorkhas) occupied a bare hill on the Sam Jamu plain at Shindeh, and, during the heavy rain first experienced here, his men had no shelter save that afforded by their blankets, which they stretched across sticks for the purpose. Colonel Gardiner's never-varying cheerfulness under great discomfort was not without its due effect on his men, and was very pleasant to witness.

He commanded his column with skill on every occasion on which it was engaged. The command of the regiment, when Colonel Gardiner was employed in command of a column, devolved on Major W. H. Unwin, officiating 2nd in command, who was specially brought to notice in Colonel Gardiner's reports. I fully concur in the favourable notice made of this officer, who carried out his duty when in command of his regiment with zeal and ability.

Major B. Williams, commandant 5th Punjab Cavalry. This officer at the commencement of the operations was officiating Commandant of the 2nd Punjab Cavalry, and, as senior officer in command at Gumbat, led the column on the attack on Paiah, and subsequently officiated as Assistant Quartermaster-General, and had charge of the convoy road and general line of communication. He commanded his column to my entire satisfaction, and performed all the important duties connected with this charge with much energy and care; and I am further indebted to him for his assistance whilst personally attending me on all occasions on which the troops were engaged.

Colonel J. J. H. Gordon, Commandant, 29th Punjab Native Infantry. I am much indebted to this officer and his regiment for the valuable assistance which they afforded me at all times. When at Khushalgarh, during the heavy flood which swept away the bridge of boats at Attock, the men voluntarily turned out, and by their exertions they were instrumental in saving most of the boats of the Khushalgarh bridge. They took a prominent part in the attack on Jamu and subsequent operations, and distinguished themselves by their spirit and dash. Their excellent conduct during the time they were associated with the force merits my warm thanks.

Major H. C. P. Rice, Commandant, 1st Sikh Infantry who commanded his regiment with much skill and gallantry up to the 16th January, 1878, when he was dangerously wounded whilst personally conducting the retirement of the rear skirmishers of his regiment through the Naru Khula. This officer has always distinguished himself by his zeal and intelligence. I am much indebted to him for a valuable reconnaissance which he made by my desire previous to the attack on Jamu, and other prominent services during the operations.

The command of the regiment after Major Rice was wounded devolved on Major A. G. Ross, who distinguished himself by the skilful manner in which he gained the Zira heights with a party of his men on the 16th January, 1878, as brought to notice by Colonel Mocatta, in his report in my No. 118FF of 1st February.

Major J. W. McQueen, Commandant, 5th Punjab Infantry. This officer held charge of the eastern blockade at Shadipur before active operations commenced, from 19th to 29th October, 1877, until the arrival of Colonel Gardiner, and was most useful in collecting information in that quarter and in placing the exposed villages in a state of defence. It was the good fortune of his regiment to hold the most exposed and important point in the position taken up at Shindeh; and to the excellent arrangements of Major McQueen I am much indebted for the safety of that portion of the camp at Shindeh. Major McQueen held command of the right column of attack on Jamu and in the advance on Ghariba, the assault of the Dargai heights, and the advance on Pastooni. No more important services were performed during the operations than those which fell to the lot of Major McQueen, and I cannot speak in too high terms of the skill, spirit and dash with which these important duties were performed. He merits my warmest acknowledgments for the assistance which he has rendered me throughout.

Major R. B. Campbell, Commanding Corps of Guides (Queen's Own), who commanded his regiment with great intelligence, and led them with skill on several occasions in the rapid movements made to take the enemy by surprise. He commanded a column on the 7th December which advanced over the difficult ground to surprise the village of Ghariba, and performed these duties to my entire satisfaction.

Major S. J. Brown, who commanded the 6th Punjab Infantry during the operations of the 30th August, and subsequently held a portion of the Khushalgarh road, during the blockade, until the advance of the troops on the 9th November, 1877. These harassing and important duties were well performed by this officer. He held command during the active operations until the arrival of Lieutenant-Colonel B. R. Chambers on the 26th December, 1877, and much credit is due to him for the services thus rendered. Lieutenant-Colonel B. R. Chambers, Commandant, 6th Punjab Infantry, commanded his regiment on the 31st December, 1877 and 15th January, 1878, during the first and second occupation of Pastooni, and rendered me valuable assistance on those occasions.

Major A. FitzHugh, who commanded the 4th Punjab Infantry throughout the operations, and afforded me much valuable assistance, and conducted with much skill the important duty of covering the survey party in their movement off the Dargai heights on the 1st January, 1878, and in subsequent operations he led his regiment with much determination, though suffering from the effects of a severe fall in the rocky ground on the advance on the Dargai heights.

Captain J. A. Kelso, R.A., Commanding No. 1 Mountain Battery, is deserving of much credit for the manner in which he took his battery over the very difficult ground traversed by the left attack on Jamu, and for the admirable practice of his battery on that occasion. He was most zealous and energetic throughout the whole of the operations, and rendered valuable aid to the infantry at Paiah, Jamu, Ghariba (on two occasions), and the Naru Khula.

Captain G. Swinley, R.A., Commanding No. 2 Mountain Battery, who performed good service with his battery on the first advance on Paiah and on the occasion of the retirement of the 5th Punjab Infantry under Major Stewart on the 12th November, 1877, and in subsequent operations. I have received valuable assistance from this officer throughout.

Captain E. J. de Lautour, R.A., Commanding No. 4 (Hazara) Mountain Battery, who joined the Field Force with his battery during the movement from Paiah on the 15th November, 1877, and served with it until the 22nd December, 1877, when he proceeded to join the Peshawur force under Brigadier-General Ross, C.B. The practice of his battery during the occupation of Jamu and Ghariba was most excellent.

The gallant actions performed by Major C. E. Stewart, 5th Punjab Infantry, and Lieutenant G. Gaisford, 5th Punjab Infantry, on the 15th November, 1877, and Captain A. J. D. Hawes, 4th Punjab Infantry, on the 1st December, 1877, and Captain A. G. Hammond, Corps of Guides (Queen's Own), on the 17th January, 1878, were described in my reports on the operations of those dates. I desire, however, again to bring them to notice in this place. I cannot speak too highly of these officers, who have distinguished themselves by their zeal and energy on all occasions. I have also to remark that Major C. E. Stewart commanded the 5th Punjab Infantry at the advance on Paiah, Jamu, Ghariba, and throughout the operations on the Dargai heights (on both occasions), when the command of a separate column had devolved on the commandant of the regiment. He fully earned the confidence of all ranks by the coolness and skill which he invariably displayed.

Major Lance, Officiating Commandant, 2nd Punjab Cavalry. Although this officer was unable to take part in the active operations under report, it is but just that I should bring his conduct to notice during the previous blockade, when he received the wound which has incapacitated him from further duty, and deprived the Government temporarily of his valuable services. Major Lance's energy, zeal, and the spirit with which he entered into the duty on which he was employed are deserving of the highest commendation.

Major R. C. Clifford commanded the detachment 2nd Punjab Cavalry with the Field Force up to the end of December, 1877, and was conspicuous for the spirit and enterprise with which he conducted all his duties, more especially those of reconnaissance, whenever opportunity offered.

Captain F. Carr, who commanded a detachment 5th Punjab Cavalry from early in January in relief of the 2nd Punjab Cavalry. This officer volunteered his services to act as orderly officer on my staff for the operations at Jamu and Ghariba, and further made a most valuable traverse sketch of the road from Gandiali to Jamu.

Surgeon-Major G. Farrell, 2nd Punjab Cavalry. On this officer devolved the duty of organising the field hospital at Gumbat, and in attending the greater portion of the sick and wounded, who were sent to the rear. These duties he performed to my entire satisfaction, and displayed much skill and energy in the arrangements which he made with very inadequate means at his disposal.

Surgeon-Major J. W. N. Johnson, 5th Goorkha Regiment, senior medical officer at camp Shindeh. To this officer was entrusted the duty of arranging for the field hospital in the operations at the Dargai heights. I feel much indebted to him for his ever ready cooperation.

Surgeon-Major T. P. Wright, 29th Punjab Native Infantry, and Surgeon-Major A. P. Holmes, 1st Sikh Infantry, senior medical officers at camp Turki and under command of Colonel Mocatta, who expressed himself much pleased with the manner in which they carried out their responsible duties.

Captain Harvey, R.E., Field Engineer, who supervised with much skill the demolition of the towers at Paish, Kuahta, Banda, Jamu, and for the energy with which he conducted the varied duties of Field Engineer throughout the operations.

Captain Harvey was ably assisted by Captain H. Morgan, B.A., who volunteered his ready talents on all occasions when his services could be spared from duty with No. 1 Mountain Battery, which he had voluntarily accompanied under Captain Kelo's orders.

Mr. Gibson, of the Revenue Survey Department, who joined the force on the 24th December, 1877, and spared himself no pains to obtain a survey of the country.

Major G. Stewart, Corps of Guides (Queen's Own), for the skill and care with which he prepared a valuable military survey of the Jowaki country. Major Stewart was assisted by Lieutenant C. M. Smith and Lieutenant O. Radford, 3rd Sikh Infantry, who moreover on several occasions rendered good services in furnishing sketches on the occasion of reconnaissances; Lieutenant H. B. Urmaton, 6th Punjab Infantry, who devoted much labour to the preparation of landscape sketches of the country traversed by the troops, and also furnished a military sketch of the country north of the blockades near Tilkán.

Mr. Nigel Jones and the subordinate officials of the Government Telegraph Department, who rendered good service in connection with the field telegraph line from Gumbat to Shindeh.

Captain J. Davidson, Assistant Adjutant-General, Punjab Frontier Force, who accompanied me throughout the operations. I am much indebted for his ready and valuable aid in all difficulties.

Captain Lord William Beresford, 9th Lancers, Aide-de-Camp to the Viceroy, who volunteered his services on my personal staff, my thanks are also due.

Major W. C. Mackinnon, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General for Muketry, who accompanied me from the commencement of operations up to the 5th December, when he proceeded on his tour of inspection, which demanded his attention.

Major N. R. Burlton, Special Commissariat Officer, Kohat, to whom I am much indebted for the efficient aid rendered in this department. To the excellent arrangements made by Major Burlton I attribute the regularity with which the troops were supplied with all necessities.

Captain A. Gaselee, 4th Punjab Infantry. Much credit is due to this officer for the efficient manner in which he organised the levies and superintended their duties—a task which was performed by him, under many difficulties, to my entire satisfaction. The services performed by this officer were very useful.

19. I cannot close this report without offering my sincere acknowledgments to Brigadier-General Ross, C.B., commanding Peshawur Field Force, for his hearty co-operation and assistance whilst the Peshawur and Kohat Forces were employed together on the occupation of Pastooni.

On the departure of General Ross to Peshawur through the Naru Khula with a portion of his force on the 18th January, Colonel Buchanan (Brigadier of the Peshawur Force) was placed at my disposal, and to Colonel Buchanan I am indebted for the excellent arrangement made by him for the reconnaissance of the 19th January towards Kahui, and for the final retirement through the Naru Khula conducted by him in person, and for the superintendence of the completion of the survey reports (by Mr. Scott, Revenue Survey Department), whilst his brigade remained in occupation of the Jamu valley.

20. I have to acknowledge the great advantage that I derived in all difficulties from the ready advice and assistance which I obtained from Colonel Sir F. R. Pollock, K.C.S.I., Commissioner of Peshawur, whose counsel I have had throughout these operations.

I have also to thank Captain T. C. Plowden, Deputy Commissioner, Kohat, for his hearty co-operation at all times, and for the valuable aid which he afforded me.

The Gazette of India of Aug. 10 publishes the following observations prefixed to the report of General C. T. Keyes, who commanded the Force:—

The Governor-general in Council desires to record the Government of India's high appreciation of the good services of Brigadier-Generals Ross and Keyes, and of the manner in which the operations entrusted to them were conducted and brought to a successful issue.

His Excellency in Council also desires to convey the acknowledgments of the Government of India to officers commanding corps, batteries and detachments; to the several staff officers, and to those of the medical, commissariat, and other departments whose services have been brought to notice, as well as to the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the force, whose admirable behaviour and endurance during a protracted and trying service merit the highest commendation.

The Governor-general in Council will have much pleasure in bringing the services of all concerned to the favourable notice of Her Majesty's Government.

SHILLONG.

On the 16th and 17th July, a national ceremony among these hill people, called "Beh-dinghlam" (i.e., driving disease away with sticks,) took place at Jomai in the Synteng country, forty-four miles by the Government road from Shillong. This ceremony was witnessed by several of the European residents, who marched out to Jomai for that purpose. The following is an account of the ceremony, taken from the late Deputy Commissioner's report:—"The ceremony opens with the males of each house turning out early in the morning and beating the roof here and there with switches, and invoking the demon to leave. This finished, the people later in the day proceed to the stream where the Goddess "Ai-tan" dwells. There poles of great length cut from green trees are brought down and held horizontally, somewhat raised from the water. The people then commence jumping on the pole to break it, and when they succeed in doing so, a shout is given. On all the ordinary-sized poles being broken, a monster pole is taken down to the stream, and thrown across it. The people then divide into two parties, and contend for the possession of the pole. Some three or four hundred men at times contend for possession, and they are almost in a state of nudity. Amongst this seething mass of human beings which resembles a scene in Dante's "Inferno," though the struggle is very fierce, yet no quarrels occur, and injuries rarely take place. Health and prosperity are secured to the people of the village should those on the eastern bank of the stream prove the victors, or the reverse happens, should the western side triumph. The origin of the ceremony is imputed to the god of thunder, and "Ai-tan" the goddess of the stream, who enjoined its performance in the manner here described. In addition to the ceremony, offerings are made to the deity of a pig and a goat. Many innovations have crept into the ceremony. Masquerading is practised, people disguise themselves as giants and wild beasts; they also parade images of serpents, elephants, tigers, and peacocks, and imitate the Mahomedan tazeahs. Dancing is vigorously carried on by the males; but the females, beyond showing themselves in their best attire, laden with jewels, take no part in the ceremony. In fact every man to his fancy, disguises himself, and musicians, who move about with the procession, imitate English music and bugle calls. The ceremony terminates at sundown, when the males before breaking up, play a game of hockey with wooden balls."—Friend of India.

RAILWAY AMBULANCE TRAINS.—The Lahore paper states that, with a view of practically testing various plans of fitting up railway carriages for an ambulance train, an experimental trip was made from Lahore to Umritsur on the 16th ult. "Half a dozen third-class carriages were converted to the difficult purposes required. There were patterns of a cooking carriage, a dining carriage, a stores carriage, a dresser's carriage, a carriage for the medical staff, and others fitted as sleeping carriages, with several different kinds of beds and litters arranged for inspection and trial. The pattern of litter most approved was the new field hospital doolie suspended by ropes from timber fixed in the roof of the carriage. A most ingenious and effective arrangement to make the pallet easier by the introduction of volute springs in the suspending chains, and a side spring attached to the woodwork of the carriage, was considered superfluous, as indeed were many of the clever devices shown. Even the cooking carriage was not considered indispensable, though, looking at certain recent revelations of the discomfort suffered by troops travelling by rail, we are inclined not to think it so."—Pioneer.

HOSPITAL ABUSES.—The Hospitals Committee in Bengal are working in right earnest. They have discovered unconscionable waste and extravagance. The Hindoo Patriot is told that if a patient were admitted into the General Hospital, his or her family and children would get free board and lodging. Sometimes friends of patients were accommodated in this way. A woman in the family way would remain in the hospital with her children for months. Then incurable patients have been maintained for years together. Thus the Hospital has become a sort of charity-house. The other hospitals are also more or less extravagant.—Madras Times.

THE Madras Government paid last year Rs. 18,403 for the destruction of 6,997 wild animals.

The panels, which weigh upwards of three tons, have been cast from the original plaster models, and are as follows:—The first, the reception of the Prince by the native chiefs; the second, a procession of native women bearing offerings in the shape of flowers and fruits; the third, the Royal arms; and the fourth, a huge square panel bearing the following inscription:—“Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, K.G.C., C.S.I. In commemoration of the visit of his Royal Highness to India, 1875-76, Sir Albert Sassoon presented this statue to his fellow-townsmen of the loyal city of Bombay.”

MAJOR-GENERAL SIMPSON, C.B.—Major General John Simpson, C.B., died on Sunday last, at Fyning, near Petersfield. The deceased, who obtained his commission in March, 1835, was one of the officers receiving rewards for “distinguished and meritorious services.” He served with the 34th Regiment in the Crimean campaign from December, 1854, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol, and commanded a party in the assault and capture of the Quarries. He was also present at the assault of the Redan on the 8th of September. He served in the Indian campaigns in 1857-59, and was present in the actions at Cawnpore on the 26th, 27th, and 28th November, 1857, capture of Meerangunge, siege and capture of Lucknow, relief of Azimghur, and commanded a column of Colonel Keily's force at the defeat of the rebels under Bala Rao, near Bootwul, on the Nepaul frontier. For his services in the Crimea he was promoted to brevet lieutenant-colonel, and received the medal with clasp, Sardinian medal, the fifth Class of the Order of the Medjidie and the Turkish medal, and was made a Knight of the Legion of Honour. His name was honourably mentioned in despatches, and in recognition of his gallantry in the field he was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath.

THE “BLUE-BOOK” OF NATAL.—The “Blue-book” of Natal for 1877 shows in that year a population amounting to 325,512, consisting of 157,929 males and 167,583 females. There were 22,654 whites, 290,035 natives and 12,823 coolies. There were 46,577 acres of crops reaped by the white inhabitants, there being in this number 25,500 acres of maize, sugar-cane 9,023 acres, oats 3,712 acres. The yield of sugar is set down at 10,473 tons; of maize at 140,700 muids—not quite six to the acre; of coffee at 222,727lb. The Europeans cultivated at the rate of two acres per head. The natives are said to have reaped 162,741 acres—or say half an acre per head. The proportion, of course, is low, but the aggregate shows that the natives represent a substantial industrial element in the community. The crop of mealies was estimated at 417,116 muids, of Caffre corn at 97,861 muids, and of sweet potatoes at 96,270 muids, while a partial guess is hazarded at an out-turn of 2,926 tons of pumpkins. It must be noted, however, that the number of acres actually cultivated by Europeans was, at the end of December, much in excess of the acreage reaped. It is set down roughly at 69,270, which would give an average of over three acres per head. The Europeans number in their possession 16,320 horses, 765 mules, 145,128 horned cattle, 451,110 sheep, 44,328 Angora goats, 33,002 other goats, 11,213 pigs, 360 donkeys, and 1,489 unwooled sheep. The natives are said to hold 7,874 horses, 254,579 horned cattle, 32,196 sheep, 44,844 goats, and 4,922 pigs, representing a total value, say, of £1,500,000.

ORDNANCE MAJORS' ARREARS OF PAY.—In obedience to the instructions which have been sent out by the Secretary of State for India, the Governor-General has issued a notification dealing with the claims of the ordnance majors, respecting which there has been so much delay, and two Parliamentary inquiries. The notification runs as follows:—All officers of Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers promoted to the rank of major under the Royal Warrants of July 5, 1872, and subsequently, will receive the pay and allowances of that rank as laid down in G.G.O. No. 61 of 1875, with retrospective effect from the date of promotion to March 31, 1875. Majors of Horse Artillery will draw (horse allowance being excluded) the difference between Rs. 503-0-4, which includes command allowance Rs. 30 and Rs. 896-4, which includes command allowance Rs. 50—that is, Rs. 306-6 per mensem. They will also draw horse allowance for a fourth charger on a certificate that four chargers were actually kept up during the period for which the allowance is claimed. Majors commanding field, heavy, garrison, and mountain batteries will draw the difference between Rs. 463-10, their pay and command allowance Rs. 30, and Rs. 759 3, which includes command allowance Rs. 50—that is, Rs. 295-9-0 per mensem. All majors of Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers not included in the above classification will draw the difference between the rate of pay which they drew under G.G.O. No. 841 of 1872, and that laid down in paragraphs 6 and 7 of G.G.O. No. 71 of 1875. The amounts due will be subject to a deduction of Rs. 200 (a), Rs. 220 (b), and Rs. 70 (c), monthly, for officers (a) in receipt of contract allowance, (b) commanding heavy batteries, and (c) commanding garrison batteries; these last with effect from the 1st August, 1872, the date on which they commenced drawing the increased command allowance, Rs. 100 per mensem. The claims, with the exception of officers serving in the Public Works Department, whose arrears of pay will be adjusted under instructions in that department, should be submitted to the pay-examiner of the presidency concerned for pre-audit. The claims of officers now serving out of India will be submitted for check in this country as above, and then be forwarded through the Government of India for payment under instructions by the Secretary of State for India.

Chetah, Jamaica to Calcutta, Aug. 4, 8 S., 29 W.

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

Lloyd's agent at Galle telegraphs that a Court of Inquiry into the abandonment of the Furness Abbey, whilst the vessel was on a voyage from Galle to Rangoon in ballast, has resulted in the suspension of the master's certificate for two years.

Lloyd's agent, in a telegram from Port Said dated Sept. 12, says:—It is reported here that Her Majesty's Indian troopship Bengal had gone ashore at Zafarina, but will probably be got off. Admiral Willoughby, transport officer of Egypt, telegraphs to the Director of Transports, Admiralty:—Sept. 8.—The Bengal is aground on Ras Abodeerage, H.M.'s ship Iron Duke towing her. The Agitator and Prompt, Government tugs, with lighters, have been sent to assist. Sept. 10, 2 A.M.—The Bengal, towing Citadel and lighters, arrived at Suez. The Bengal was towed off by the Iron Duke on Monday afternoon, after being lightened. The Bengal is not making water. Capt. Cleveland concurred, after considering the straining and bumping on the reef, that the vessel should be docked for examination before proceeding to Bombay.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

RIDER'S PATENT HOUSEHOLD PUMPING ENGINE.

SOLE MAKERS

HAYWARD TYLER & CO.,
LONDON.

The cost of running an Engine of half-a-horse power does not exceed 2s. 6d. per week for coke and oil.

An Engine of half-horse power will raise all the water required for a large mansion or public buildings, and one of a third-horse power is sufficient for most gentlemen's houses, whilst its simplicity is such that no skilled labour is requisite,—in fact, a gardener's boy of sixteen years old, of ordinary intelligence, can work it.

The following gentlemen have ordered a second engine for private use:—

Cranston's Nurseries, King's Acre, near Hereford,

Messrs. HAYWARD TYLER and Co.,

Gentlemen,—We have much pleasure in being able to state that the "Rider Hot Air Engine" has given great satisfaction, and has done all we expected of it. Our fear at first was that it would soon lose air by the packing getting worn, but this has not been the case, as we have worked it now for twelve months without its having cost us a penny for repairs. Any of our men can work it, and the consumption of fuel is as small as you state. We should be very sorry to be without it now in the nurseries.—Yours truly,

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay August 30th; Allahabad and Madras, August 28th; Calcutta August 27th.

A CHEERING account of the generally improving prospects is given by the Times telegram of the 15th inst., which says that the latest reports from Madras state that the prospects are favourable. In the Kistna uplands the crops are recovering from the damage done them by the recent excessive rains. The total number on the works is 102,000, those gratuitously relieved being 62,402. Prices are falling in Mysor, and prospects are good. The number on the works is 31,129, those gratuitously relieved being 13,199. In the North-West Provinces and Oudh prospects are good, and prices are falling. In the Punjab prospects are generally good and prices are showing a downward tendency. There is a slight improvement in exports; imports are dull.

SERIOUS floods have occurred up-country, causing great damage. The station of Dehra Ghazee Khan has been almost destroyed, and six girder bridges on the Beas Valley Railway carried away, while the line from Beas to Kurtarpore is badly damaged throughout. The East Beyne Bridge has also been swept away and the line for half a mile on each side ruined. First and second class passengers and their luggage are booked and carried over the Beas and Beyne valley breaks by means of a trolley, elephants, boats, rafts, and dak garry. At Jullunder 1,800 houses, great and small, have fallen. The Bombay Gazette describes the Chenab in the neighbourhood of Multan as in a greater state of flood than has been hitherto recorded. The soundings at Shershar bunder indicate a rise of three feet over the highest recorded flood. Great damage has been caused to life and property in the villages on the Chenab.

THE official report of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending 20th August is as follows:—Rain has fallen in all districts of Madras; in parts of Kistna, Godavery, Ganiam, and Kurnool there is some complaint of excessive rain, and in parts of Trichinopoly and Coimbatore, and in the Wynaad more rain is required; but prospects are generally reported good; prices show a tendency to fall. The total number on works is 115,590, and on gratuitous relief 17,146, less by 4,410 and 3,310 than last week. In Mysor there has been general rain; the prospects of the crops are good, and prices are falling; the total number on works for the week ending the 10th inst. was 31,918, and gratuitously relieved 13,775, less by 397 and 205 than in the previous week. General rainfall is reported from all parts of the Bombay Presidency, including Sindh, where much damage has been done in the Kurrachee districts from floods; a break, which was much wanted, appears now to have set in throughout Guzerat, Kandesh, Nasik, and the Southern Mahratta Country, and prospects are favourable. In the Central Provinces excessive rain continues, and a break is much needed; prices are stationary. In Central India excessive and continuous rain is reported in Malwa; good rain has fallen in Gwalior; some has also fallen in Bundelkhand, but more is required. Heavy rain has fallen in all parts of Rajputana, and prospects are good. General rain is reported throughout Bengal, except in Sarun; prospects are generally favourable, but more rain is still required in the Patna division; inundation continue, with damage to the aus crop in Dacca and Furreedpore. Reports from Assam are favourable. In Burma the rainfall has been good everywhere, except in Prome and Thayetmyo, where much more is still required; in the Tenasserim division continuous rain is also needed. Excellent rain has now fallen throughout the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and prospects are everywhere good. In the Punjab there has been general and heavy rain, with floods; in the districts under the hills agricultural prospects are favourable, but damage has been done in the Peshawar district from inundation.

CALCUTTA telegrams of the 18th and 19th mention a report generally current in the city, announcing the death of the King of Burmah. The approximate total amount of India 5½ per Cent. Rupee Loan tendered for conversion into the new Four per Cent. Transfer Loan of 1879 is 60,900,000 rupees, leaving about 30,000,000 unapplied for. The amount of the Mofussil tenders is not yet completely known. The option to receive stock bearing 7a. per cent. interest has only been exercised to the extent of 168,000 rupees.

A REUTER's telegram, dated Bombay, the 18th inst., announces that Gholam Hussein Khan, the Envoy of the Indian Government, arrived at Kabul on Sept. 10, and has been hospitably received. At a private audience of Shere Ali he delivered to the Amir the letters with which he was intrusted from the Viceroy of India. Mir Akhor, who is believed to be the bearer of despatches from the Amir respecting the Mission, is expected hourly at Alimusjid. The Mission in the meantime remains at Peshawar, awaiting Mir Akhor's communication. A headman of the Khyberees has arrived at Peshawar, in accordance with the arrangements concluded for the safe conduct of the Mission through the Khyber Pass. The latest information states that the number of the Mission will amount to one-thousand, including camp-followers. Every effort is being made to keep the number within reasonable bounds, but it is necessary to carry supplies for the road. The escort will be increased by an Infantry detachment, and possibly by a troop of the 10th Hussars. The Commissioner will accompany the Mission as far as Pakha, on the other side of the Khyber Pass, where a strong body of the Amir's troops is stationed. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times says that Shere Ali is reported to be in favour of the succession of his grandson, Ahmed Ali Jan, son of Mahomed Ali Khan, who was killed in 1865 near Khilat Ghilsa while fighting for his father's throne against Sirdar Azim Khan. Ahmed Ali is described as an intelligent youth of about eighteen, with a pleasing demeanour and fairly well-educated. The mother of Abdulla Jan is said to have another son still living, but incapacitated for rule by being totally deaf and dumb. The report of Yakoub's escape is still unconfirmed.

WE learn from Constantinople that an Envoy from the Ameer of Afghanistan to the Sultan has arrived in that city.

THE Commander-in-Chief in India has, in General Orders, drawn the attention of the forces under his command to the resolution of the Government of India, dated the 26th July, 1878, in which the approbation of the Supreme Government is conveyed to those military officers who take an active part in the recent operations for the relief of famine in the Madras Presidency and Mysor. His Excellency says that he "desires to record, also, his own sense of the unwearied assiduity with which these officers have performed duties always of an arduous nature, and requiring in a high degree the exercise of tact, judgment, and discretion, under conditions which necessitated much bodily fatigue, discomfort, and exposure."

THE statement that a medal was to be granted for the Jowaki expedition is true, to the extent that a recommendation to the effect has been sent home by the Indian Government, and, the Pioneer adds, will in all probability be accepted. Those who took part in the expedition, who do not already possess the ordinary medal for frontier services, will get it, we assume; those who already possess the medal, a clasp.

INTELLIGENCE received from Aden shows that the Esa tribe have been plundering caravans and kafilas to such an extent as to close the traffic between Zeylah and Hurar. The Governor of Zeylah sent his son to inquire the reason; the Esa tribe replied that before the occupation of the country by the Egyptians, they used to be honoured, &c., but that now no honour is accorded to them, and that the Egyptian Government oppress them. A disturbance is reported to have arisen between the Egyptians and Somalis on account of tax collections; troops were sent, and 500 Egyptians are said to have been killed and a large number of Somalis.

THE Pioneer applies the name fanatics to the organs of Russia, either in the home or Indian Press, which compares Lord Lytton with Lord Auckland, and solemnly menaces our Government with a repetition of the blunders of 1839 to 1842. Such people, says the Allahabad Journal, are equally unable or unwilling to understand the entire change in our frontier towards Afghanistan wrought by the annexation of the Punjab. So long as the Ameer's dominions remained isolated on all sides but India we could afford to let him go his own way: but now that his frontier practically marches with that of the Czar as well as our own, it would be madness to allow him to become the vassal of a Power which has the best of reasons—that of thwarted ambition—to dread and detest England. A peaceful embassy to-day may prevent a war six months or a year hence.

OUR occupation of Quettah seems to be contemplated as a permanent establishment. A recent announcement informs us that "the Government of India, in the Foreign Department, have sanctioned the annual payment to the Khan of Khelat of the sum of Rs. 2,516, being the cash equivalent of the revenue hitherto collected by his Highness on the lands taken up for military cantonments at Quettah, and also an outlay of about Rs. 18,000 for securing to the British Government the proprietary and water rights in those lands. The Friend of India thinks that the acquirement of the proprietary and water rights in the lands indicates a sufficiently fixed determination to abide there, and even if this be at variance with the original purpose as limited by Lord Salisbury's instructions, the necessity of this post has been demonstrated by the news from Kabul.

In a despatch from the Secretary of State, commenting on the general report on the Topographical Surveys of India, and on the work of the Surveyor-General's Office for 1876-77, his Lordship thus refers to Colonel Thuillier's connection with the department:—"During a service in the department of more than forty-one years, General Thuillier has devoted himself with energy and perseverance, of which it is difficult to speak too highly to the task of securing an accurate survey of British India, and the results attained under his personal superintendence, amounting as they do to more than half the total area of the entire country, are such as to merit my hearty congratulation."

THE Government of India offer a premium of Rs. 500 for the best English Sanitary Primer, of not more than twenty-four pages. It is notified that the prize work will become the property of the Government, who will be at liberty to cause it to be translated into the Vernacular languages.

WE understand, says the Pioneer, that the Government of India have already informed the Karachi Chamber of Commerce that they are unable to support the petition of the Chamber to the Secretary of State for subsidising of a direct line of mail steamers between Aden and Karachi. A direct line of railway to link Karachi and Bombay is an alternative project not without influential support.

THE native community of Akyab are still, it appears from a recent pamphlet on the state of Arakan, expecting an acknowledgment of their memorial submitted in January last to the Viceroy. Their prayer is for more facilities of communication which might draw the superabundant population from Chittagong and Tipperah to supply the void of Arakan, where in the district of Akyab alone 571,520 acres of cultivable land are unappropriated. The province yielded last year a clear revenue of Rs. 2,00,000, yet from 1869-70 to 1876-77 only 38½ miles of road were constructed, or at the rate of 4½ miles per annum. Without discussing the dream of the Arakan News, viz., a railway from Akyab to Gowhati, it is evident that a great development of the resources of the province would follow on improved communications by means of a good trunk road, connecting Akyab with the populous divisions of Bengal, Chittagong and Dacca, a project which was commenced and abandoned in the proconsulate of Lord Dalhousie.

AT a Durbar held at Cossimbazar on the 14th ult. the Maharani Surnomoye was invested with the insignia of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India. This is a well-deserved recognition of the public spirit and judicious benevolence manifested by this lady. Mr. Peacock, Officiating Commissioner of the Presidency division, in making the presentation, after enumerating the various benefactions to the amount of Rs. 200,000, added "that even this sum is largely exceeded by the small donations to school libraries, dispensaries, and to the relief of the poor and distressed during the same period, which amount to more than three lakhs of rupees. Thus during the years to which I have referred you have contributed five and a quarter lakhs of rupees to works of charity and public utility, which does not fall short of one-eighth of your income." The Ranees of Tanjor, it is reported, is about to receive this distinction from the Duke of Buckingham, who will shortly visit Tanjor. The Madras Athenæum expresses surprise that so few European ladies have received this decoration, which seems almost exclusively confined to the native ladies, a policy which seems to throw contempt on the social position of the undecorated wives of high officials.

THE Government of Bombay have issued a resolution in the report of the G.I.P. Railway Frauds Commission, which recommended the discontinuance of the existing system of a separate railway police, under its own superintendent, which is not acceded to, as "the reports before Government do not establish any necessary connection between the late increase and impunity of crime, and the fact that the G.I.P. Railway police is under a separate superintendent." The proposal of the London Board that there should be a railway police, but entirely under the orders of the railway authorities, is also negatived. But the Government will take the earliest opportunity of appointing a suitable superintendent possessing the peculiar qualifications needed for the post, the occupier of which is bound on the one hand to act in complete independence of the railway officials, and on the other, to render them every reasonable co-operation. The disclosures made by the Commission have called forth a very severe minute from the governor, which contains, among other passages, as quoted by the Times of India, the following rebuke to the officials:—"The Traffic Manager and the Goods Superintendent are unquestionably blameworthy for failing to supervise the Goods Agent—a failure which has proved to be most unfortunate." Referring directly to Messrs. Dewey and Bedford, his Excellency adds:—"I think there was much reason for entertaining the gravest suspicions regarding them. The Commission entertained no doubt as to their guilt upon a large scale. The agent does not intend to retain them in the service." And he thus summarises the state of things revealed by the inquiry:—"For a long time past it has been feared that much fraud, corruption, and malpractice exists in that department of the Railway Company, and that some of the European servants of the Company, even among the upper ranks, are always implicated. I imagine that the evil is quite notorious, and has a bad effect on all those who have business relations with the Railway. It causes a scandal to the English name, and tends to lower our national repute in the eyes of the native public. Corruption in native society has for ages been but too well known, though of late it has been decreasing; but if this evil manifests itself among Europeans the consideration will be graver still, and the Government is thus bound to stretch forth its strong hand for repression.

THE sweeping condemnation of the carpets manufactured in the Indian jails, of which the dyes, to quote Dr. Birdwood, are hideous, and the arrangement of colours harsh and inharmonious, cannot be said to apply to the products of the Agra Jail, from the looms of which comes, according to a contemporary; "an admirable carpet, in which the safflower dyes are not too staring, while the design is certainly excellent;" therefore the Pioneer is not surprised to hear that a great demand for these carpets has sprung up in Paris, and a correspondent who has visited the jail states that the factory has on its looms carpets of all sizes for the Grand Magasin du Louvre. Some are more expensive than others, but we understand that a good carpet can be delivered for from ten to fifteen rupees the square yard, though some run much higher. The fact is the demand is very great. So keen, indeed, is the competition for these carpets that large advances of money are made to secure early attention to commissions. The carpets exhibited in Paris have been rewarded with a medal by the jury, and the North-West Government has apparently a profitable field of labour for its convicts—so long, at least, as it can provide for it such supervision as that of Dr. J. W. Tyler's.

THE prices of food-grains throughout India from 1861-1876 is one of the latest publications of the Financial Department. We will hope the work has been accurately compiled;—if so, its utility is undoubted. The food-grains treated are common rice, wheat, and the great bulrush and common millets. The list might have been extended with advantage so as to include the more frequent classes of the pea tribe. Annual averages of the food tabulated are first given, and they are then compared with those of 1867 as a standard. One glance shows how unusually prosperous the years of 1866 and 1867 were. The provinces of Karailie and Shikarpur in Bombay, and of Moorshedabad and Monghyr in Bengal, show a wonderful prosperity in all food-grains, which with but one or two exceptions never fell below the average. Everywhere else in India the variations are very great. The rest of the book is taken up with fortnightly prices between 1873 and 1876, compared with 1873 as the standard, and with prices at various periods before 1873. From first to last the book is only interesting when one remembers the stern realities in life of which it forms the silent record.

A PRIVATE letter quoted by the Deccan Herald describes the Maharaja of Jaipur as "quite the English gentleman" in his habits and ways. His city boasts broad streets lit with gas, and supplied at intervals with drinking fountains. The Maharaja, however, is clearly not acquainted with the ways of English Bishops. When the Metropolitan of India was at Jaipur, where he consecrated a church on August 6, he paid a visit to his Highness, who received his Lordship with all honours, and entertained him with "Hindoostanee Nautches." A correspondent of the Bombay Gazette remarks on this with unconscious drollery:—"I do not know how far his Lordship-liked the tamasha, but certainly his Highness's Ministers should have shown better taste on this occasion than by entertaining with nautches the first ecclesiastical officer in India."

THE Inspector General of Education in the Central Provinces, in his report for 1877-78, states that in the College Department of the High School there are but two classes, and the staff is too limited to allow of more, while the First Arts students are obliged to finish their course in colleges of other Governments. The scholars of the primary schools are examined half yearly by masters of the middle class schools, who only pass those qualified, inasmuch as they then come under their own tuition. In Sambalpur education is unpopular, and at one period nearly all the schools were closed. School discipline is well attended to, though we are told that the girls are very independent. The master of the girls' school at Seorinarain, when remonstrated with on the noisy behaviour of his flock, naively replied, "What can I do, Sir? Are they not women?" We can fancy the indignant surprise of the Inspector-General when the girls of a school in Nagpore, while under examination, actually rushed out to see a passing marriage procession. The best girls' school is at Sleemanabad, where the village priest collects the scholars and his wife instructs them. The Dumoh School Committee hit on the novel plan of marrying the best boy pupil-teacher to the best girl, and then sending the young couple to the normal school at Jubbulpur to be trained as teachers. In this district gymnasia have been established, and a grand competition for prizes in athletic exercises was held, attended by a thousand young athletes. Next year a challenge shield is to be competed for; but in the meanwhile sundry idlers excuse themselves for deficiencies on the ground of "gymnastics." The Dumoh proposition would seem to have been copied from the example of the Burhampur normal school for women, where out of twenty-eight students fourteen were wives of men studying at the male normal school, and nineteen applicants for admission to the latter asked that their wives might be admitted to the former. There has never yet been so large a field for the selection of female students. The total cost of education in the Central Provinces, including that in school buildings, during the year under report was Rs. 3,37,242; nearly half the expenditure was on primary schools. The number of schools at the close of the year was 1,407, the daily average attendance being 49,695, while the number of students at the Jubbulpur High School was greater than could be accommodated.

THE "moderate measure of law," as the author of the proposed Factory Act for Bombay describes his humane Bill, has been shelved, inasmuch as the Government of Bombay are unable to report to the Government of India that a case has been made out even for such limited legislation. With this conclusion, the statement of objects and reasons appended to the Bill is distinctly at variance. Doubtless there exist no such crying evils as were brought to light by Lord Ashley's Factory Commission; yet we might have expected a less curt contradiction of the statement that "it is desirable and necessary for the health and well-being of our patient labouring population that some limit should be fixed by law regarding their hours of work, and to procure for them by the same means a day of rest once a week. At present the boon of closing our cotton mills on Sundays is granted to the employés at the caprice or according to the interest of the employers; generally these mills are closed one Sunday in a fortnight, but from the necessity of cleaning the machinery, the hands have also to work for a few hours of that day. With this slight exception, and with the exception of about fourteen holidays in the year, the hands are kept constantly at work from sunrise to sunset, resting for from twenty minutes to half an hour in the middle of the day for their meals. The hours of work vary according to seasons of the year, from about eleven hours in the cold season to thirteen hours in the longer days of the hot months." These allegations are made by a member of the Legislative Council of Bombay, and disclose a state of things that imperatively demands inquiry.

At a meeting of the National Mohammedan Association, held at Calcutta on Aug. 4, it was resolved, with a view to the amelioration of those strata of Mohammedan Society which have hitherto been impervious to the civilising influence of modern education, that a Night School and Working Men's Institute should be forthwith established.

THE Russian journal of the Ministry of Roads and Ways has just published a new proposal by M. Chodzko as to a line of railway between Europe and India along a different route from those hitherto proposed. While the project of M. de Lesseps, put forward in 1875, suggested that the line starting from Paris should pass over Warsaw, Orenburg, and Peshawur to Calcutta, comprising in all 9,660 versts, or 1,380 German miles, M. Chodzko contemplates a line from Paris over Warsaw, Tiflis, and Peshawur to Calcutta, comprising 8,940 versts, or 1,277 German miles. He calculates that at the rate of five and three-quarter miles an hour the journey from Paris to Calcutta might be performed in nine days at a cost of £1,990.

JUGGUNATH is in a bad way since his hereditary protector, the Rajah of Pooree, has gone to live in the Andamans. The affairs of the temple have been found to be in a pitiable state, the Rajah having grossly mismanaged the revenues. His mother the Ranees has done all that her ingenuity could suggest, but there are serious arrears in the pay and perquisites of the servants of the temple and family dependents, to pay up which would take a large revenue. Since the conviction of the Dibya Singh Deb the pension to the family has been stopped, and the local feeling is that the Ranees is harshly treated by having the sins of her son visited on her own head. The Commissioner is said to be of the same opinion, but his applications for leave to pay the pension to the Ranees in the proportion she formerly received have been disregarded. A further calamity in the shape of a famine has long been hanging over Pooree, and the late car festival was a miserable affair. There were no large contributions by devotees; the Ranees had to bear all the expenses. At first no timber for the great cars could be got, as the usual agent blankly refused to send an inch of wood; it seemed as if Juggunath would have to dispense with his customary airing. However, the Ranees was indefatigable; in spite of the lack of devotion on the part of her Ooryahs she faithfully did the work of her worthless son. There has been some talk, according to the Patriot, of putting the estate in the Court of Wards; anyhow, it will be a good thing if Fate takes the opportunity to let Juggunath's temple fall to ruins, and his festival die out of men's memories.

VISITORS to the Taj at Agra, says the Pioneer, may be curious to know what has become of the garden that was there. A flight of locusts passed over the station, and did not leave till they had eaten up the garden.

THE Rangoon Chamber of Commerce have taken in hand the subject of a reduction in the telegraph rates in Burmah with India, and intend representing the same to the Chief Commissioner, with the view of having it finally laid before the Government of India.

GREAT progress is being made with the Scindiah State Railway. It affords employment to hundreds of poor starving natives. Two railway stations are being erected in the Fort near Gwalior—one alongside the Morar-road, about midway from the Fort, and the other near his Highness's magnificent bagh, about a mile distant from the former.

CYPRUS.

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT.]

NICOSIA, Sept. 4.

The activity that has shown itself at Larnaca ever since our occupation of Cyprus continues without abatement, and has steadily increased within the last three weeks. The exodus of the Indian troops has had no sensible effect. Indeed, those pessimists who declared that with their departure business would be at an end have proved signally false prophets. Shipments arrive daily, and coasting vessels continue to touch in increasing numbers. The beach presents an animated scene from early morning until sunset. Unfortunately the Customs are presided over by a young and inexperienced man, whose conduct is without precedent, and causes great delay and annoyance. It is one thing to be particular about goods consigned to persons who are indifferent about defrauding the Government; but when such well-known firms as Henry S. King and Co. are treated in the same way there is legitimate cause for complaint. The other day that firm had to pass a case of twelve dozen soda-water. Each bottle was taken out and examined to see if it contained gin! A morning is easily wasted by such delays, and it is to be hoped that some one with more discretion will soon be appointed. I have heard numerous complaints on all sides in this matter from officers and business men.

Of the many schemes on foot those most in favour are for the water supply of the towns—of Larnaca and Limasol in particular. It seems quite settled now that a harbour will be constructed at Famagusta, and that the site of the future capital will not be far off. Lapathos is favourably mentioned, it being well-wooded and watered, and very healthy. The Government is not likely to interest itself materially in any schemes for the present, unless it be the harbour question, beyond opening up the country by means of roads, of which it is sadly in need. Their hands are more than full already. The land question is being rapidly pushed on towards settlement, and until that is done no transfer will have any force. The mapping out of the island into districts has been accomplished, but the details of the work of the commissioners are still engaging the close attention of the authorities. Reports, too, are rapidly coming in from different parts, and greatly tax the working capacity of the Government.

Perhaps the most crying want of this island is a thorough system of irrigation applied to the land; and here a legitimate field offers itself to capitalists. The soil is everywhere rich and productive, but the burning heat of summer and the frequent droughts would paralyse all agricultural efforts conducted on a large scale. The torrents that rush down from the mountains and flow through the plains in all directions should be utilised by means of reservoirs, and with the introduction of coolie labour—another absolute necessity for the proper development of the island—a certain and profitable return would be ensured to agriculturists.

The cultivation of the vine will surely be another branch of industry second to none in the island. It is no exaggeration to say that the black grapes one buys at three half-pence a pound are not inferior in appearance or quality to the best English hothouse grapes. I have found this to be the case everywhere. And yet, owing to their rude system of making wine and to their putting it, when made, into tarred barrels, the wine of the country, generally speaking, is not fit to drink. Hill slopes can be hired at excessively cheap rates, and such immigrants as come with viticulture in view have a fine field before them. Cotton-growing, again, has proved a remarkable success even in native hands, and may take rank as of almost equal importance with the vine. Many people have been disheartened and some disgusted by the desolate appearance of the island, and by the prevalence of fever. With regard to the second count it should be remembered that August is the fever month, and the only fever month of the year. The fever, too, is local—in the high grounds they never have it. It is a lowering but by no means a dangerous one, lasting about four days. With proper precautions as regards exposure to the sun during the great heat of the day and as regards the eating of fruit it is easily avoided.

And now as to the desolate look of the island. The charge is only too true. I made a tour from Nicosia over the Machera Pass to Limasol, and thence to Larnaca last week, and with the exception of the mountain slopes, and the country around Páno Léfkara, where the olives and karoub trees are very fine, I did not see a patch of green. All was rock and desert. But this will all change into a rich landscape with the advent of the rains in October and the arrival of spring; and what is more, it would never exist at all to the extent that it does if we once had a proper system of irrigation. Mile upon mile of land, too, is now knee deep in thistles, which should be in process of clearing, if not already cleared, for next year's crops. But where is the labour to be found? Land investors, whether agriculturists, viticulturists or cotton growers, should look at the potentiality of the soil, not its appearance.

A few words in conclusion as regards the expense of living. With the exception of house property it is far cheaper here than in England. Houses vary from £300 to £400 a-year. As regards travelling, the only means is by mule, the cost varying from 3s. to 5s. a day. For an extended tour a moderate bargain can generally be made.

NEW FACTS FROM CYPRUS.

It is natural when a project, suddenly disclosed, but not necessarily unpremeditated, takes the public by surprise, that opinions should be much divided as to its prudence or its probable consequences. The English people were no more consulted about the acquisition of Cyprus than the people would have been in Russia. We by no means hold that occasions may not occur when the Executive is driven, even in countries of the greatest constitutional liberty, to act on its own responsibility; we duly affirm that transactions so carried out have little chance of impartial consideration. Cyprus was born a party question; its acquisition, from the one view, a splendid stroke of masterly policy, by which England assumed her proper position towards the Levant, and commenced a noble career of reformation and improvement; from the other, a rash step, involving almost impossible risks, and leading to ruinous expense. Putting both of these views aside, we propose to offer a slight sketch of the situation in Cyprus as at present existing, founded upon information on which the greatest reliance may be placed.

It is well known that thoroughly trustworthy and efficient as our military authorities prove themselves to be in the long run, they are not very good at a pinch; have no peculiar gifts for hasty organisation, and are sadly at a loss for ready resources. When, therefore, the troops, which, whether for political reasons, or, as some allege, for a theatrical effect, were sent away suddenly, landed at Cyprus, they landed under great disadvantages; they had no huts, no proper shelter provided for them, it was the hot season, it was the time of fruits, and the exigence of occupying the large towns introduced them to low Greeks and hybrids, whose capacity for various kinds of vice it is difficult, even with London before us, to exaggerate. Cyprus has always had a bad name for fever; but it was argued that the Indian troops, at least, had been accustomed to such diseases in their own land. That phase of the question has passed, the Indian troops have gone, and we need not discuss it; but, as a general argument, it may be doubted whether those who have suffered from malaria bear up best against it. The sickness has undoubtedly been great; but at the same time it must be admitted that the soldiers have done many things which it would have been prudent to avoid. Exposure to the sun by day, exposure to the night air and dews, consumption of the coarser kinds of fruit, the drinking of water from suspected wells, and of the cheap noxious drams Greek ingenuity can so easily provide—all these things are calculated to produce an unhealthiness which is perhaps attributed too hastily to the climate.

Certain at any rate it is that some who, taught by Indian experience the necessity of care in diet and avoidance of exposure, either to the sun or to the night air, have submitted themselves to suitable restrictions, have been able to retain their health, and, in point of temperature, have not even missed the punkah at night. The reader must call up for himself the condition of these eastern towns; the streets mere assemblages of dirty huts and tumble-down houses, with mangy dogs for scavengers—who sleep in the dust and snarl at the passer by; the houses of the richer sort enclosed in walled gardens, the cyprus and the palm appearing above the mouldering brick-work; here a mosque, and there a church, or a shrine of the Panagia; in the environs, cactus, and undergrowths of shrubs, obstructing the ventilation; in some places a swamp surrounding the site unfortunately chosen for human habitation, and even the supply of water, through want of drainage, itself a source of miasma; the maimed and diseased laid out by the way-side,—and beyond the gate, the leper! All romance must be dismissed; nature, of course, is beautiful, but landscapes cannot supply the want of the necessities, the comforts, the amusements of life, and it may be safely affirmed that the dullest and worst-provided station in India can make the passage of time more tolerable than it is at present for our compatriots in Cyprus. In the current month, September, there is generally a cessation of sea-breezes, and for a time the tidings of even greater discomforts may be anticipated; but in October the rains which prevail through the winter will commence, and the atmospheric conditions will at any rate be entirely changed.

The claim of the Government against the land in Cyprus is very different from the land-tax, or rent in India. Theoretically, the agricultural peasant has only to pay a tithe or tenth of the produce in kind, but as the claim is always farmed out by the Turkish Government, the publicans in reality take far more; perhaps, sometimes, one-half of the produce. Before our arrival the tithes for the current year had been sold, and had been collected by the tithe-farmers from the cultivators in the months of May, June and July, when the harvest is reaped. There can be little doubt that the tenth, at any rate, was gathered in; but it is possible that the peasant, who, like his Egyptian compeers, only requires a little encouragement to hold out, hearing of coming changes refused to be squeezed. It is now time for the tithe-farmers to pay up; but they declare that the cultivators are still in arrears; and, more than this,—partially penetrated with the spirit of civilisation, they are importing lawyers to plead that bonds to the Turkish Government are not valid for the enforcement of the English claim. And so some difficulty has arisen about the most important feature of the revenue; such a hitch, however, is in its nature temporary, nor would it be likely to occur again.

In the island, as in all Mohammedan countries, there are certain lands which are called Wakf, or appropriated, and were originally intended by some pious founder to support Mosques or charitable institutions: the revenues, however, are in most cases no longer devoted to such purposes, but are divided amongst the managers of the Wakf at Constantinople and a few local families. This is an abuse which must be grappled with in due course, as it involves an alienation of the just claims of the Government, whilst the misappropriation of devoted property is in contravention of the law of the Prophet. It seems to be allowed on all hands that Article 4 of the Convention admitted a stipulation which was far too favourable to the Turks, viz., the reservation of the Crown lands to the former Government. Only about a third of the total area is under cultivation; in a large proportion of the holdings a paper title is wanting, nor does any registration exist such as we have in India. And as lands uncultivated for a period of three years lapse to the Crown, not only is landed property very precariously held, but the door is opened to considerable chicanery; and very recent claims on the part of the Ottoman Government, to a large extent of lapsed lands, is one of those uncomfortable incidents which raise the fear that the trammels of morality place a Western Power at some disadvantage in dealing with an Eastern one.

It is, perhaps, doubtful whether, if a tithe only of the produce were taken from the peasant, all inducement to improve his holding might not cease. With the certainty that the stipulated amount should not be exceeded, he might well give a considerably larger portion. These questions will all have to be considered in time; the first thing certainly will be, to restrict the exactions of the publican, who is a far more sombre figure than even the Indian money-lender. These gentry, however, will doubtless give trouble, for they are often members of Council, or magnates possessed of large and real influence, and are backed up by the police and the administrative subordinates. Other taxes prevail of a more or less anomalous description, but almost all marked with one unvarying feature, one extraordinary amount of arrears. A tax exists, for instance, upon male subjects, non-Mohammedan, for exemptions from military service. This is small in amount, not exceeding a sum for each person per annum about equivalent to three shillings and sixpence of our money, and yet the arrear claims go back for fifteen years! These arrears are considered assets by the Turkish Government, and we are expected to look upon them as such; but their history is wrapt in obscurity. Has the tax-payers shirked paying the claim, or has the collectors embezzled it? Acting in the dark on this point we are exposed to the dangers on one side of committing an injustice, and on the other of prejudicing the rights of our own administration. The same difficulty crops up, too, which has often met us before in parallel circumstances—the untrustworthiness of Eastern agency. Military colonels, heads of police, superintendents of departments, receive with avidity our satisfactory sovereigns, but when they come to pay out to their subordinates or in the market, the gold has disappeared, and Turkish paper money has taken its place. These “fimsies,” as they are called, give a great deal of trouble, and add to the confusion already existing in the currency of Turkish gold, silver, and copper coins alongside our own money.

Without entering in any way into the discussion as to the general character of the Convention with Turkey, we may consider with calmness the future of Cyprus. Whatever turn politics may take, it is exceedingly unlikely that the island will be again given up; but on the other hand, sooner or later, serious and perhaps heated discussion will probably arise about the expense. In our avoidance of party questions we need not pronounce for or against the larger projects of an Imperial policy; but on one point there can be no question; if England is to take the lead in the Levant, and to play the part of an Eastern Power in the Mediterranean as well as in the Indian Ocean, she must be prepared to pay for it. The details already given will show that our present relations with Cyprus are scarcely of a remunerative character, and it would not be surprising if a proposal for the purchase of the island should be one amongst forthcoming schemes. Ready money has always a peculiar charm with embarrassed exchequers, and this serious expenditure once over, the zeal for improvements would be greatly increased by reasonable prospects of ultimate profit. An island with a sub-tropical climate, which will grow cotton and sugar-cane, is only one-third cultivated, and possesses, as is believed, considerable mineral wealth, is an acquisition which in the hands of the patient, industrious and inventive Anglo-Saxon should surely have a future. All is yet to seek,—roads, drainage, sanitary arrangements, extended cultivation, a harbour; but these things are in no way impracticable.

As to insalubrity, we believe that in a great measure to be a bugbear. It is certain that this year was exceptionally unhealthy; the English arrived at the hottest season of the year; they were exposed both by day and by night; they were imprudent. Cultivation and drainage alone will altogether modify the conditions under which life is carried on, and habits must be accommodated to the circumstances in which they have to be exercised. Dullness has a great deal to do with sickness, and useful occupations and reasonable pleasure induce a state of body far less susceptible of disease than when people mope and languish. Our experiences as yet have been mostly confined to two or three towns; but the mountain ranges crowned by the Cyprian Olympus must not be forgotten,—on moderate heights of which sanatoria will doubtless in the end be established, where the English soldier will be as safe from pestilential air as at Landour or Kussowlie.

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF “ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.”

SIR,—I have read with much interest, in your last number, your suggestive remarks on railways in India. It is indeed gratifying to learn from Mr. Juland Danvers's report for the year 1877-78 that, apart from the important services which railways rendered during the famine and the encouragement they afforded to commerce and agriculture, as evidenced by the great increase noticed by Mr. Danvers, in the exports of produce from India, they earned £6,232,888, or about 5½ per cent. on their capital outlay of £113,344,541. You are in error, however, in stating that “the average earnings of the State railways in 1877 were £5. 5s. per cent.” that class of railways having hitherto scarcely earned anything in excess of working expenses, and presenting a very unfavourable contrast with the Guaranteed lines. The figures stated by Mr. Danvers give the following results:—

Railways.	Capital Outlay.	Earnings. Amount.	Percentage on Capital.
Guaranteed	£95,482,941	£6,091,532	6·37
State	17,862,559	141,356	0·79

Thus, while the Guaranteed lines earned 1½ per cent. more than the interest which the Government undertook to make good, the State railways scarcely earned any portion of the interest payable on the capital borrowed for their construction, whereby a burden is cast on the already insufficient revenues of the country. The cause of this great difference is twofold; less traffic and heavier working expenses. The State Railways have been undertaken, in some instances, upon strategic grounds, without regard to financial results, and, in others, upon a misapprehension of the wants of the country, as in the case of the Calcutta and South-Eastern; which accounts for the indifferent amount of traffic they command. As regards the working expenses, it appears from Mr. Danvers's Report that, of the twelve State Railways, the expenses of ten absorbed more than 70 per cent. of their gross earnings, and that two were worked at an actual loss of £2,005. The expenses of the Guaranteed lines, on the other hand, amounted to rates averaging only 46 per cent. of their gross earnings.

The profits of the Guaranteed lines, by covering the losses occasioned by the State railways, have helped to conceal the financial character of the latter, and to create the impression that our railway undertakings in India have all been more or less successful; whence a danger has arisen of new schemes being entertained and sanctioned without a strict scrutiny of the chances of success which they offer. The Mutlah Railway subserved private interests when it was inaugurated, but has proved a dead loss to the Indian Exchequer; and the rejection in 1872 of the Carwar Railway scheme was believed to have saved India from another bad speculation. The same scheme, however, has recently again been recommended by the authorities in India, and it would be well if the papers containing the objections which were entertained in 1871 and 1872, and the grounds on which the Duke of Argyll refused to sanction the scheme, were called for when Parliament assembles.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

J. DACOSTA.

THE MISSION TO AFGHANISTAN.

Once more the regions of the Amir of Afghanistan are to occupy a prominent place in Anglo-Indian politics. Scarcely has the din of arms in Europe ceased, hardly has a Russian regiment turned its face homewards, when the old ghost of Central Asian affairs rises to vex the soul and worry the minds of administrators. Sir Neville Chamberlain, once again in the bracing climate of the higher hill-regions of the North West, will find his old vigour return, and all that can be done to ensure the success of the special mission he has accepted will, we may be certain, be done. It does not appear from the information we have received what the particular object is which Sir Neville is expected to achieve, but it would not be hard guessing. Lord Lytton is ambitious of leaving his mark on Indian foreign politics, partly, perhaps, to justify the wisdom which sent a diplomatist to be Vice-Emperor of Hindostan. Masterly inactivity has no place in the Viceroy's mind, indeed, there are few to say "God bless it" to what was the sheet anchor of Lord Lawrence's policy as Governor-General, but was even by him discarded ere his reign was over. The appointment made to meet Shere Ali in durbar marks the throwing overboard by the old Punjab "Political" of a policy which the trying days of the Mutiny doubtless impressed strongly upon his mind. If Lord Lytton has no liking for masterly inactivity he has as little for mischievous activity. He knows, apparently, how to wait and to possess his soul in patience. There can be no doubt that Sir Lewis Pelly's proposals of last year were not accepted. What these proposals actually were no one outside Government circles positively knows, but there can be little doubt, we think, that the chief article in Sir Lewis's instructions was to persuade the Amir to agree to the appointment of a British Embassy at Kabul. This, it is not unreasonable to suppose, is really what the Viceroy is driving at, and respecting which he will not be satisfied until his object is accomplished. The selection of the Envoy is a compliment to the Amir, and if it be possible to achieve success, no doubt Sir Neville will come back with a treaty in his possession, and friendly relations established with Kabul. Should the project succeed Russia will be checkmated. All that General Abramoff seems to have got as the result of his expensive mission in July and August is a permission to trade. The Russian Envoy appears to have been treated with special magnificence, and all proper honour was paid to him. At least equal consideration is likely to be paid to the British Plenipotentiary, and, skilfully managed, better results ought to be ensured. There is, however, this disadvantage about Sir Neville Chamberlain's mission, that it comes after the Russian embassy, and being one of very great importance the Amir may develop an increasing sense of his own dignity and refuse to treat. We may suppose, however, that Lord Lytton, being in possession of information which we of the outside public know nothing of, is pretty certain of success. It is not likely his Excellency would lay himself open to a rebuff from the Amir, and would not sanction this move unless there were good reasons to believe it would be successful. Like Lord Beaconsfield—when the Premier determined to go to Berlin, and most people were satisfied therefore that peace would be preserved—Lord Lytton would not risk failure. It is not likely in a project which is so much to him, and whereby he will desire his period of rule should chiefly be judged, he will act rashly or unwisely. It is quite possible the Mission will be quite successful, and that early in 1879 an Anglo-Indian embassy may be constituted in Kabul. For all his coquettings with the Russians the Amir knows that his English neighbours in nigh-at-hand India are stronger and far more formidable foes than the Muscovites. If war occurred the advantage is all on the side of British India with its large forces, its depots on the borders of Afghanistan, and its railways able to bring innumerable forces. Recent events, too, are calculated to impress the Amir with an idea of British might and power no less than of Russian force. The Indian Contingent and the protectorate of Asiatic Turkey, and the acquisition of Cyprus will have influenced the mind of the Amir. Indeed, it is very probable that this mission is but a part of the Premier's far-reaching views for the protection of India from Russia. We have heard rumours time and again that, even with the Anglo-Turkish Convention, propounded solely in the interests of India, the whole of the Ministerial policy was not made clear. May it not be that, as in Asia Minor an effectual barrier (as it is supposed) has been raised against Muscovite progress, it is intended that a similar barrier should be raised in Afghanistan and a treaty like unto that which bears the signature of Safvet, K.C.S.I., and A. H. Layard, K.C.B., is to be presented by Sir Neville Chamberlain for the consideration of the Amir? Some forcible arguments might be used to urge the desirableness of such a course, not the least of which would be the fact that the Mohammedan Caliph had set the Central Asian Muslim the example. In spite of all the courtesy that was shown to General Abramoff there can be little love in Afghanistan for the Russians. The attention rendered was extorted by fear, and was a tribute paid to the bravery and force which had overthrown the Sultan's armies. Should our surmise be correct, we are on the eve of quite a new development of foreign policy. With Armenia at one end of the line and Afghanistan at the other, and both under our control, we ought to wait with equanimity anything that the Russians might do. To make our line of defence complete, Persia would need also to be bound over to British interests and sworn to bar Russian aggression. Was it because he received a hint that he would be sounded on such a policy that the Shah changed his plans at Paris, gave up his intention to visit England, and hurried as far away from perfidious Albion as possible? It is not unlikely. But, whilst it would be satisfactory to India to have a complete fence of friendly States from Erzeroum to Peshawar keeping off the Russian foe, Persia is not necessary to English safety. A Russian force advancing upon India in that direction would have to debouch upon the Persian Gulf, and proceed by sea to Indian shores. Their way through Afghanistan and Beluchistan would be completely barred. It would be impossible for any respectable Russian force to embark for India; there are no transports or convoys in the Persian Gulf, and none could get there whilst British naval supremacy remains so great as it is. Both on sea and on land, should such a policy as we have hinted at be consummated, we should be able to cry "Check" to Russia all along the line, and our position in India relieved from the anxieties—often causeless enough—which now periodically occur, to hinder all progress and to distract men's minds from internal reform and advancement. We heartily wish Lord Lytton's policy—if it be such as we have described—the fullest success. Only when we have got these border spectres laid can we hope for such earnest and undivided attention being given to Indian home affairs which they require. Once this question is settled there is nothing on the horizon—except the King of Burma should become really mad—that need occasion the slightest concern, and we might steadfastly set ourselves to the task of ruling thoroughly well the dominions which we have had under our charge nearly two centuries. Until the outer defences are safe we cannot hope the house which is to be protected will be properly set in order.—Madras Times.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, Aug. 14.—No date has, I believe, been yet fixed for the assembly of the troops at Hassan Abdal, but it is in contemplation to hold the camp much earlier in the cold weather than has hitherto been customary. Many who were present will recollect the discomforts of cold, wind, and rain which attended the manoeuvres in the same locality in 1872. December and January are proverbially wet and stormy months in the Northern Punjab, and scarcely suited to military exercises which oblige the soldiers to dwell any length of time under canvas. This was fully recognised during the recent expedition against the Jowakis, when many valuable lives were lost, and good constitutions spoilt by exposure to weather more severe than an inclement February in England. In that particular instance, however, the rain from which individuals suffered contributed materially towards the success of the operations; and General Keyes has put it on record that "had it not been for the unusual and abundant rain that fell during our occupation of the valley it would have been impossible to have maintained our position at Shindeh for more than a few days." November commends itself as a month in which rain seldom falls, free from storms, healthy, and sufficiently cool (so far north as Hassan Abdal) to admit of the men being exercised all day without risk from the sun. Grass in November and early in December is more plentiful than later on—an important consideration in assembling a large body of cavalry and artillery—and supplies generally cheaper and in greater abundance. Then regiments like the 9th Lancers, with a long return march before them, would have an early start for their new quarters, enabling them to settle down comfortably before the hot weather of 1879. Against the argument for an early camp, it is urged that regiments would not be at their best until later in the season, having had no preliminary setting up drill as is usual in the autumn; and that some corps would have to march for the camp while it was yet unpleasantly warm. Another camp is spoken of lower down the frontier, but its details are kept a close secret, and I am not at liberty to mention even the few particulars which have reached me. Our relations with Kabul are, I believe, a shade more favourable than they were, which is after all not saying much. Chetan Shah, the Assistant Surgeon whose services were lent to Sher Ali at the close of 1876, has recently returned to British territory, and, rumour hath it, is the bearer of a friendly message from his surly patient.

It is unlikely that the Hindoo Galen will again thrust his head in the lion's mouth, even on the temptation of such liberal pay and presents as Sher Ali always bestowed upon him; but if he can be induced to return, he may be the means of putting us on better terms with the Amir than have existed between the two countries since Sir Lewis Pelly's breakdown at Peshawur last year. The Adam Kheyl Afridis are reported to have sent a jirga to Kabul selon règle to receive the usual present of lângis and knives in return for nominal allegiance; and some of the Bonairwals, Swatis, and Mohmunds have started on the same errand. But our prestige on the Peshawur border has risen so considerably since the successes of last cold weather that Sher Ali must find it a difficult task to induce any of the independent Pathan tribes to do him homage on any terms. These deputations have a pleasant time of it, feeding free, and receiving small presents on departure. A journey under such conditions is peculiarly acceptable to a Pathan, whose happiness in life (when not fighting) consists in feasting his friends or being feasted by them. The Amir is of course anxious to exhibit his pretended power over our frontier tribes, with the object of forcing us to conciliate him by liberal concessions. But in reality he has no influence whatever with these wild republicans, who acknowledge no superior, not even amongst themselves, and who are so far sufficiently impartial to accept British bread and lângis with as good a grace as Sher Ali's. These tribes fully understand our ability to punish them when they deserve it, and whole kafilas of scarves and daggers from Kabul would scarcely move them to raid on British territory, unsupported by some personal grievance requiring adjustment. Grievances at present they have not. Major Cavagnari's series of jolies surprises during the past few months, combined with the Jowaki collapse, have read a chapter to the border Kheyls which they will not easily forget.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

BEHAR.—A Committee has been appointed to report on the rent laws of Behar, with a view to legislation.—Times Telegram.

THE appointment of Mr. Henry Thoby Priupeer, Bengal Civil Service, to be a Judge of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, is announced in the Gazette of India.—Times of India.

LOSS OF THE "JAMES SERVICE."—The reports as to the loss of this vessel on its voyage from Calcutta to Melbourne are confirmed. The vessel was wrecked on a reef forty miles from Perth, and all on board were lost. Among the passengers were Mr. and Mrs. Cowderoy, Mr. Williams, formerly Dave Casson's principal violinist, and Miss Minnie Williams, well-known upon the Indian Stage, and Messrs. P. Smith, Phillips, and J. Kelly.

BIJNOUR.—Till within the last few days, says the Pioneer of the 28th ult., Bijnour suffered more from drought than perhaps any other district in the North-West. Since the late welcome fall of rain, however, the Collector has reported that, although the relief works already arranged for must be kept open till the next harvest, he can probably dispense with the additional large railway works which were on the eve of being started.

SUSPECTED POISONING OF A JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER.—An Akola correspondent of a contemporary recently mentioned that Colonel Bell, the Judicial Commissioner of Berar, had been attacked by cholera at Omraotee; but the belief is now entertained that an attempt had been made to poison him, and that had it not been for the skill and care of the Civil Surgeon there might have been at this moment an important vacancy to fill up in the Berar Commission.—Pioneer.

CHOLERA AT LUCKNOW.—Among the isolated cases of cholera, the Pioneer of 20th ult. mentions:—In Lucknow there are isolated cases of cholera, although the epidemic form has not yet been reached; whilst the same disease obtains more or less in both the civil station and native city. A lady-teacher at the Martiniere Girls' School, Miss Patten, the daughter of a well-known resident, Mr. J. Patten, was taken ill on Aug. 15, and died the following day. The deceased lady had for some years been connected with the institution, and was held in general esteem both by the managing committee and her colleagues and pupils.

DISTRESS IN THE PUNJAB.—The distress prevalent among the poorer classes in the southern districts of the Punjab, and also in the native States bordering in that direction, is, we understand, such as to call for State notice and relief. The recent rainfall may, to a certain extent, ameliorate the condition of the agricultural classes, but it can bring no relief, even in a prospective sense, to the masses representing the village artisans and menials. Tuccavi advances will help the agricultural classes to purchase seed; but where the mortality among the plough and well-cattle has been great, it is simply impossible to replace these by local purchases. That the mortality has been very great is evidenced by the simple fact that one European firm alone has purchased two hundred thousand hides at Delhi for exportation.—Civil and Military Gazette.

THE PATNA DIVISION.—The report of the Commissioner on the condition of the labouring and cultivating classes in the Patna Division shows that in no district has there been any unusual resort to public works, and that, though in parts the people are pinched by the high prices, the country is in a fair way towards recuperation. In replying to the report, the Local Government observe that the irrigation works which are now in hand will go far to provide labour where it is most wanted, and a line of railway to the Gunduck has already been surveyed and could be put in hand if more work were really required. The district officers must continue to watch carefully the condition of the people in the doubtful tracts.

THE KASHMIR FAMINE.—The following notification has been issued by the Punjab Government:—"The reports received from the territories of his Highness the Maharaja of Kashmir continue to show such extreme distress caused by a scarcity of food grains, amounting in some parts of the country to positive famine, that his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab feels himself compelled to declare all the passes, without exception, into Kashmir, closed to intending visitors during the remainder of this season. The condition of the inhabitants is so deplorable that it not only incapacitates them from rendering the usual and requisite assistance to travellers, but also entirely precludes the possibility of any pleasure resulting to visitors from such tours this year. No exceptions can be made to this prohibition."

THE COAST LINES.—Of late years the Local Government has shown a wise and provident interest in the coast lines of the provinces under its care. It has kept up surveys, opened up long closed rivers, sought out eligible sites for new ports and laid the foundation of a permanent record of changes. As was to be expected, the littoral of Orissa, having been long neglected, has received a large share of attention, and while Chittagong and the debouchure of the united streams of the Megna and Pudma has not been overlooked, the greatest progress has been made on the Western side of the Sandheads. Next cold weather the whole coast from the mouth of the Hooghly will have been buoyed off. The last link in the chain will be furnished by the placing of a large buoy off Lychnapore, midway between the Balasore buoy and that in the North-Eastern extremity of the dreaded Palmyras Reef. The Dhamrah River and False Point Harbour are already well furnished with buoys.—Indian Daily News.

ACROSS THE THIBETAN FRONTIER.—The Kulu Correspondent of the Delhi Gazette states that two gentlemen who recently passed through the valley succeeded in penetrating six marches into Chinese Territory in Chumurti. The Tartars dwelling in tents offered no opposition to their advance, but as soon as they got to the first village, they were of course stopped, but were not uncivilly used, the Chinese officials generously offering them a pony and twelve rupees each, on condition that they turned back at once. From further information furnished to the Englishman, it appears that the travellers in question left Kashmir by the Zojibai Pass, and passed through Dras and Baltistan, by the direct route to Leh. From Leh they went into Rupshu, and, finding all the passes still closed by snow, crossed the Thibetan frontier at the north-east of Rupshu, and were ultimately turned back, as stated by the correspondent of the Delhi Gazette.

SAILORS' COFFEE ROOMS.—On the 15th ult. Sir Ashley Eden and some members of his staff paid a visit to the Sailors' Coffee-rooms in Lall Bazaar, Calcutta. A large number of sailors were present, and also a number of captains. The Lieutenant-Governor was received by the Rev. Mr. Goodwin, and conducted through the rooms, making a minute inquiry into everything connected with the work carried on in the place. His Honour expressed himself as highly pleased, and intimated his purpose to visit the rooms again. To illustrate the manner in which sailors are gathered in from the street by hearing the voice of singing from the brilliantly-lighted rooms, a number of ladies sang one of Jack's favourite hymns, in which the sailors heartily joined. Thus far these rooms seem to have been very successfully managed; since they were opened in April, less than four months ago, more than twenty thousand visits have been made to them, and there has also been a very large sale of coffee and other non-intoxicating beverages. No one can doubt that a large amount of good has thus been done, both in adding to the sailors' comfort and in protecting them from the temptations of the grog-shop. The sailors present were greatly pleased with his Honour's visit, and on leaving gave him three rousing cheers. Later in the evening General Litchfield gave a stirring address, which was received with great satisfaction by the men assembled.—Indian Daily News.

EMIGRATION TO BURMA.—The result of the scheme for introducing labourers in British Burma from the Madras Presidency, under the provisions of the British Burma Labour Law of 1876, has proved altogether disappointing. From the proceedings of the Chief Commissioner on the working of the scheme we gather the following facts:—The labour law was introduced in the belief that there were large employers of labour; but it has now been discovered that such employers exist almost exclusively in the seaport towns. British Burmah is in direct and steam communication with the Madras coast, where hordes of labourers flock over to the Burma rice ports annually for the busy season, returning home with their savings at its close. The absolute freedom with which these men can go and come at their own pleasure, the tempting wages they can command as coolies, and several other circumstances, were against the success of any scheme directly fostered and controlled by Government. The Chief Commissioner at Rangoon has therefore decided on putting a stop, for the present at all events, to all further recruiting under the Act. He has directed the Emigration Agent at Coconada to dismiss his establishment and to dispose of the depot buildings by auction; all allowances to himself and others employed in connection with the depot to cease at the expiration of one month from the date of receipt of orders.—Madras Times.

Madras.

THE LATE REV. W. M. TAYLOR.—The Madras Athenæum records the death at Madras, on Aug. 22, of the Rev. William Munro Taylor, one of the oldest Protestant Missionaries to Madras, and a distinguished Oriental scholar. We must postpone to our next issue a notice of his career.

THE MOULMEIN VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS.—The official acknowledgment of the annual Inspection Report of the Corps states that the Government of India concur with his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in considering that the progress made by the Corps is very creditable, and that the esprit de corps attributed to the Moulmein Volunteers, coupled with the energy and attention evinced by the Commanding Officer, Major M. Furlong, are very satisfactory.

TELEPHONIC COMMUNICATION.—Mr. Saunders, the Agent and Manager of the Madras Railway Company, has it under consideration to establish telephonic communication between the Agent's office at Royapuram, the Central Station, the Perambore Works, and the Loco-Superintendent's office at Perambore. The cost is stated at about Rs. 6,000, but a great deal of time and labour will be economised under the arrangement, and an ultimate saving will be effected in the large establishment now maintained for communication between these stations.

BANGALOR MEDICAL SCHOOL.—The Government of India is said to have approved of the proposal of the Chief Commissioner of Mysor for the establishment of a medical school at Bangalor, for the purpose of educating and training native pupils for the grade of hospital assistants to provide for the requirements of Mysor and Coorg, but to have declined to exempt the medical subordinates in Mysor from being subjected to the regulations for Civil Hospital Assistants laid down in the Government Resolution dated 31st August, 1877.

MYSOR FAMINE RELIEF.—The proceedings of the Mysor Famine Relief Committee have been brought to a close. Since its formation, the Committee has expended £165,390, nearly the whole of which was received from the English fund through the Madras Committee. A small balance still remains in hand, out of which a grant of Rs. 6,000 is to be made for the worst parts of the Dodballapur and Nellamangala talooks; and the surplus will be held at the disposal of Major Moncrieff, the Famine Commissioner, for any special purpose, such as the relief of groups of villages where the famine has struck home, and which are in great need of seed-grain.

RAVAGES OF TIGERS.—The ravages of tigers, says the Ootacamund paper, "in the neighbourhood of Mudumullay continue unabated. A native Shikaree was proceeding along the road at this spot when a tiger appeared, and was in the act of springing upon him just as the man fired. Happily he killed the animal, which was evidently a man-eater, for between its fangs he discovered a lot of human hair, evidently that of a woman. We learn that tigers are still very numerous about Seegoor, and not a day passes but one or two are seen in the most frequented localities. We are glad to find that our remarks on the subject of tigers have attracted attention, and that the Commissioner purposes addressing Government upon the subject of higher rewards for the destruction of these beasts."

AN OFFICER CASHIERED.—At a general court-martial, assembled at Kamptee, on the 9th July, Major David Frederick Moore Lane, Madras Staff Corps, was found guilty of having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having at Kamptee, in the month of February, 1878, fraudulently misappropriated to his own use certain money entrusted to him as Honorary Secretary to the Public Rooms, Kamptee. The sentence of the Court, that the prisoner be cashiered, has been confirmed by the Commander-in-Chief, with the remark, "I can see no point in Major Lane's conduct, as disclosed in these proceedings, which would justify me in giving effect to the Court's recommendation to mercy."

FAMINE RELIEF WORKS.—According to the Mail all famine relief works in and around the town of Madras have been discontinued. The work on the batteries has been brought to a close, and those labourers who have not been absorbed on ordinary work are being provided with work on the Coast Canal, north or south of Madras. The Government have ordered the District Engineer to take measures at once for commencing the South Canal extension to Sadras, and have directed the Collector of Chingleput to obtain possession of the land that is still required for the purpose. The Collector of North Arcot has been directed to arrange for the drafting of labourers from the Palar Channel works to the Coast Canal at Sadras, up to the limit of 3,000 persons, as soon as Colonel O'Connell is ready to receive them. He is also to select one or more officers to collect people from the Polur and Wandewash taluks, and to escort them to the Coast Canal works.—Times of India.

IRRIGATION IN THE GODAVERI DISTRICT.—The irrigation returns for 1877-78 from the Western delta of the Godavery district show that there has been an increase of more than fifteen thousand irrigated acres over any previous year, and that this would have been considerably greater but for the unfavourable character of the season. The total area of land cultivated with wet crops was 298,276, including 12,838 acres of dry crops watered. In the official year 1876-77 the acreage of land watered in the eastern delta of the Godavery district was 131,147, against 124,502 returned in amended returns, and 137,807 in 1877-78. In the central delta the acreage returned in the official year just closed was 96,803. In the western delta, as stated above, a return is given of 298,279 acres, the first wet crop being returned at 285,441, or a grand total of 520,051 acres. Lieutenant Dorward, who prepared the returns of irrigation, took great pains to collect carefully drawn up statistics, so as to give the total quantity of water used, the discharge of water through the sluices, the registered rainfall, &c. The total quantity of water that passed into the Western delta canals from 1st May to 15th December was 57685·3 millions of cubic feet. Supposing that half the rainfall in the irrigated area was utilised for cultivation and half wasted, the amount of water so used was 1381·5 millions of cubic feet. The irrigation season under the Attili canal begins on the 10th May, the Nursapur canal irrigation on the 1st May. Great delay takes place in getting proper information from the village curmums respecting the extent of land supplied with water.—Madras Standard.

ACTING COMMANDER OF THE FORCES.—The Madras Mail of August 21st says :—In last night's Gazette, Lieut.-Gen. Elmhirst, C.B., the senior General Officer on the Staff, is appointed Acting Commander of the forces of Madras. A Provisional Commander-in-Chief is appointed only when the pukka Chief leaves Indian limits, so should Sir Neville Chamberlain proceed to Kabul such an appointment may have to be made. An Acting Commander of the Forces, without a seat in Council, is needed when the Chief leaves his own Presidency, but does not leave India. In both cases, however, the senior General Officer on the Staff, upon whom the chief command devolves, retains command of his division, at the headquarters of which he must remain unless summoned to the seat of the Government by the Governor. It is understood that General Elmhirst has received such a summons to Ootacamund, and that during his absence from Bangalore the Mysor command devolves on Col. Hill Wallace, C.B., R.H.A.

THE SURAT RIOTS.—The trial of the six Surat rioters was still proceeding, and the case for the prosecution had not closed when the mail left.

MUNICIPAL LOAN.—The Municipality of Bombay will not, as had been expected, raise at once the whole sixty lakhs of rupees required to carry out the drainage scheme, but will undertake a portion of the works as an experiment.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—The Government of India, in reply to a communication from the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, urging that the railway from Nagpore to Raepore should be constructed on the broad gauge system, declares that it looks upon this line as one of a purely local character, and that the narrow gauge will therefore do very well for it.

RIGGING THE MARKET.—Great efforts have been made, according to the Times of India, to stimulate the demand for the shares of the various Foreshore Companies. A bold dodge was tried on the 24th ult., when a rumour was circulated in the Fort and the Bazaars that the Viceroy and the Governor of Bombay had arrived incog., and were engaged in inspecting the foreshores with a view to immediate purchase. Hundreds of men went about repeating this tale, which, to use an Americanism, was too "thin."

SHIPPING OFFICE FEES.—With reference to the question of levying extra fees by the officers of the Shipping Master's Department at Bombay, in their official capacities, for engaging and discharging the crews of vessels of the mercantile marine on board such vessels, instead of at the Shipping Office, and of allowing the said fees to the officers concerned, the Government of India is said to have observed that it has no objection to the levy of the fees alluded to; but as these fees form an item of provincial revenue, it will rest with the Government of Bombay to decide whether it will allow the officers of the Shipping Master's Department to receive them, or to credit them to Government.

STATE OF CRIME.—From the annual report on the state of crime in the town and Island of Bombay during 1877, which has been lately submitted by the Bombay Government to the Secretary of State, it would appear that, while the police force has maintained its character for zeal and efficiency, in many classes of serious crime there was an increase, such as criminal breach of trust and embezzlement, possession of stolen property, burglary, offences relative to coin and Government stamps, assaults on police officers, &c. In murder the number of cases was equal to those reported last year; in case of forgery there was a slight decrease, while in refusal of duty on boardship there was a diminution of 145 cases. There was a large increase (506) in the number of persons charged with theft, which is ascribed, with considerable probability, to the presence of the large number of destitute persons who came during the year to Bombay from famine districts in search of food.

SURAT EDITORS.—The prosecution against the editors of the Surat newspapers commenced at Surat on the 19th August, before Mr. Pollen, at the Adawlut. Immense crowds swarmed into the Court and grounds. Mr. Branson, with the Government pleader and Mr. Kallabhoy, appeared for the Crown; Mr. Gill, Mr. Pherozshaw Mehta, Mr. Gunness Wasudew Josey, and Mr. Ruttonsha Erucksha for the defence. The counsel for the defence made a strong appeal for bail both in the interest of the State and of the accused. Very little opposition was made by the Crown to the application. The Judge said that he must go through the papers before giving his decision. Two English-speaking assessors were selected out of ten who were in attendance. Mr. Branson opened the case with an elaborate address. One witness was examined, and the Court then adjourned. The trial was expected to be very lengthy.—Bombay Gazette.

ESTATE OF THE LATE SIR COWASJEE JEHANGIER READYMONEY, C.S.I.—Messrs. Homejee Cursetjee Dady and Cowasjee Maneckjee Limjee, two of the executors of the late Sir Cowasjee Jehangier Readymoney, C.S.I., have applied to the Ecclesiastical Registrar of the High Court for a grant of probate of the will of the deceased, who died at Bombay on the 19th of July last. By his will and codicil the deceased appointed his brother, Mr. Heerjeebboy and the applicants as his executors, and his movable and immovable properties sworn in the application consisted of Government papers, shares in joint-stock companies, the annuity which he purchased from Mr. Ardasheer Hormusjee Wadia for rupees nine lacs, in the name of his adopted son, Mr. Jehangier, a few months before death, and other landed estates, amounting in all to Rs. 12,31,000.—Bombay Gazette.

DEATHS IN GOA.—It is rumoured at Goa that, in consequence of the numerous deaths lately amongst the chief officials, and the almost constant presence in the town of fever of a malarious type, the Portuguese Government has decided to remove the seat of Government to some other town. The accounts from the surrounding districts are also bad. The continuous heavy rains are causing serious anxiety for the paddy crop. On the 3rd ult. a heavy gale passed over the district of Salsette, uprooting many cocoa-nut trees and causing much damage. The Archbishop has personally visited some villages where cholera is raging, and, after providing medical aid, food, and other comforts he reanimated the people, who were leaving from terror.

THE S.S. "BELLONA."—The s.s. Bellona, which left Bombay about a month ago, had been out twenty-eight days with a twenty days' supply of coal without anything having been heard of her at Aden. It is just possible that in case the vessel had made an exceptionally good passage through the monsoon belt, her captain might determine to push on to fetch Suez. His supply of coal might enable him to do that, but only if the voyage were unusually easy and rapid. That it can scarcely have been at this season, so that fears are entertained that the ship has been lost. The Bellona was a good vessel, well found, and, we believe, properly manned. It is hard to believe that a ship so fitted out have been utterly lost between Bombay and Aden so as not to leave a vestige that might be picked up. Yet this was really the fate of the Coromandel, on the same track, three or four years ago, of which vessel not a single spar has ever been found.—Pioneer.

A NATIVE TEACHING ENGLISH.—An amusing story is told of the inability of a native teacher at the Elphinstone College, Bombay, to distinguish between the niceties of poetic license and moral impropriety. A number of students were poring over the intricate lines of "Paradise Lost," which the teacher, a Brahmin "Fellow," vainly tried to make clearer. The latter, after being badgered by many questions, finally thought he would silence the too brisk curiosity of the class, and accordingly asked rather pompously—“Don't you know that Milton was a licentious poet?” This the pupils certainly did not know; and one student bolder than the rest denied that Milton was at all licentious. The tutor maintained the phrase, and rejected with scorn the suggestion that he meant to say Milton indulged in poetic license. The students showed their contempt for his ignorance so openly, that the Brahmin left the class-room, and formally complained to the head-master. Of course authority was vindicated, but the students had very soon a new master, who, it is needless to say, was not a native.

THE FORESHORES.—The subject of the Bombay foreshores is still engaging public attention, and recently Government has made a proposal to form a Trust similar to that which regulates the Mersey Docks. The foreshore properties would under this arrangement be valued, and either by consent of the owners, or, if necessary, by compulsory purchase, merged into a single Trust. The management would be in the hands of a Board of Trustees, a portion of whom would be elected by the bondholders, another portion by Government as representing the general public, and the remainder by the merchants of Bombay. The opinion of the local Chamber of Commerce has been solicited, but they ask for further information on several points before giving a decided answer. In the meantime they object to the proposed constitution of the Board of Trustees, on the ground that it gives Government a preponderating voice in the management of the Trust. It is very desirable, as the Chamber points out, that there should be a speedy settlement of this important question, as the shipping season is fast approaching.—Times of India.

TULSI WATER WORKS.—The Bombay Town Council has had submitted to them by the Executive Engineer, Mr. Walton, a statement showing the progress of the laying of the main which is to bring the Tulsi water into Bombay. From this statement it appears that 51,580 ft. of the main have been laid, jointed, and completed up to the present time, and 17,638 ft. are laid in position ready to be jointed. The remaining length is 31,172 ft., and sufficient pipes for only 17,997 ft. are at present in Bombay, either near the pipe line or stored at the pipe depot, the remaining 13,558 having yet to be received from the contractors in England. Mr. Walton, judging from assurances given by the contractors through Mr. Manning, the gentleman employed by the Corporation to test the pipes in England, and to Messrs. Graham and Co., their agents in Bombay, expects that the last pipe will have been delivered into the hands of the Municipality in Bombay in the early part of October; and he leaves it to be inferred that the work of laying them, after they are received, will not be delayed much longer. The Town Council sanctioned payment of an advance of Rs. 10,000 on account of charges in connection with the recent alarming landslide at Tulsi.—Bombay Gazette.

STRANGE CREDULITY.—A strange instance of credulity and ignorance among the respectable Eurasians and East-Indians of Hyderabad is narrated by the Friend of India, and made a text for recommending missions to the “so-called Christians” of European extraction:—A young officer of the Nizam's Reformed Troops died the other day after an illness of two months. A few days before his death he sent for certain members of his family, and related to them a strange dream, to the effect that he would die very shortly after, and that precisely twelve hours after his body would be consigned to the grave he would revive again, should any of his relatives present themselves at that time and call on him in the name or the Lord to come forth from the grave. Not only did he relate this dream to them, but made them solemnly promise that they would carry out minutely what was required of them in the dream. The fear of being buried alive might perhaps have induced the deceased to make so strange a request; but that a body of Christians should be so blindly credulous as to imagine that the remains of a person after being consigned to the grave would be resuscitated is a fact which, to say the least, does no credit to their intelligence. However, about 7.30 P.M. some thirty to forty ladies and gentlemen assembled in the cemetery, when the grave was opened, and precisely twelve hours after the body had been interred one of the relatives of the deceased stepped down and said, “A. B., I command you in the name of the Lord to come forth.” This was repeated three times, but met with no response; the grave was then filled up, and the people returned to their homes. So sure were some of them of the deceased coming to life again that they had gone to the cemetery provided with a suit of clothes for their departed friend.

EXPORTS FROM CEYLON.

In a review of the exports from the colony during the present year the Ceylon Times points out that the results of the opening of the Suez Canal, as affecting the sailing craft, exceed even what was anticipated. A proof of the altered state of things in regard to the carrying-trade by sea is that whilst during the first six months of last year there were ten sailing ships loaded home direct from Ceylon with coffee, &c., there were but two so loaded direct during the corresponding period of this year. In coffee exports the chief decline has been in the exports to Australia, which have fallen from cwt. 11,602 from 1st October, 1876, to August 1877, to cwt. 9,024, whilst shipments to America have fallen from cwt. 4,221 to cwt. 1,000.

211. Whilst coffee has declined in the aggregate from cwts. 858,593 to cwts. 572,698, cinnamon has risen from 6,598 bales to 9,428 bales in the present year. The largest portion of this increase has gone to the United Kingdom, but foreign countries, and notably America, have shared in it. Cinnamon chips show scarcely any increase, but they now appear to be distributed amongst foreign markets. Under the head of plumbago there is a large falling-off, the figures for the period in question having declined from cwts. 88,712 to cwts. 51,090, the heaviest decline having been on the shipments to the American States, which have decreased from cwts. 74,532 to cwts. 17,895,—the result partly of trade depression, partly of the working of local mines. The trade in ebony has received a serious check by the limitation of felling licenses in Crown forests; the figures are cwts. 14,055, as compared with cwts. 20,221 during the corresponding period of last year; the exports to China and England have chiefly suffered, having fallen from cwts. 17,448 to cwts. 8,297. But the figures which are the most unexpected are those relating to the cocoanut-oil trade. There is every reason for believing that the breadth of the land under the cultivation of the cocoanut has increased rather than diminished; yet the aggregate of shipments has fallen from cwts. 152,644 in 1876, and cwts. 128,455 in 1877, to cwts. 82,987. Of this latter quantity, only cwts. 32,614 went to Great Britain, against cwts. 98,409 in the previous year. On the other hand, we find a marked increase in the exports of this oil to Indian markets, viz., from cwts. 376 last year, to cwts. 29,144 during the present season. The severe drought of last year, which so seriously affected growing crops, had an equally prejudicial influence on the produce of all oil seeds. The price of the ordinary oils of India has therefore advanced in the local markets, and the railway companies, who are large consumers of oils as lubricants and for burning in their carriages and on their premises, have found the cocoanut oil of Ceylon a cheap substitute for the oils hitherto in use by them. Other consumers have probably made the same discovery, and hence a sudden demand for our oil. The cocoanut oil of Cochin would be nearer the Indian centres of demand, but it is worth more in European markets than our oil, hence the preference shown the latter.

Miscellaneous.

THE DOCTOR OF THE S.S. "ELDORADO."—We learn that on the day before the arrival of the Eldorado at Colombo the doctor of the vessel disappeared. He was last seen at two A.M., sitting on the side of the ship, smoking, and it is supposed that his hat blew off; and in trying to save it he overbalanced himself and fell into the sea. There is no reason to suppose that he committed suicide.—Ceylon Observer.

VACANCY IN THE COUNCIL.—At a meeting held on July 31st at Kurnegalan, which was largely attended by the Kandyan Chiefs, it was resolved that in view of the Kandyan people forming a large and important element in the Singhalese community, governed by peculiar laws and usages, their interests should be represented in the Legislative Council by a member of their own, or that at least in the selection of a Singhalese member, the choice should be alternately between the low country and Kandyan Singhalese. It was further resolved that a measure be presented to the Governor praying for the appointment of Mr. J. H. Tennekoon to the vacant seat.

CHOLERA IN SLAVE ISLAND.—We learn that cholera of a virulent type has again made its appearance in the purlieus of Slave Island, and the mortality is considerable—as many as six or seven daily. No doubt the wretched condition of the hovels in that neighbourhood, and the absence of any effectual system of drainage, have much to do with this recurrence of disease; but we suspect a good deal of it may be traced to the common practice of devouring raw jak, cucumbers, &c. The military are forbidden to enter the infected district.—Ceylon Times.

A NEW CATHEDRAL AT COLOMBO.—It is proposed, says the Ceylon Times, to erect a new cathedral at Colombo, on the old Rifle Parade-ground, at a cost of £25,000. It is arranged that the present edifice known as St. Peter's Church, formerly a Dutch official building, shall be taken over by the civil authorities. The amount of the valuation, which is expected to be £8,000, will be paid towards the construction fund of the new cathedral, leaving a balance "of £17,000 required, which," adds the Ceylon Times, "can no doubt be raised here and amongst friends in England."

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.—His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to attach J. G. Edge, Esq., as a writer to the Badulla Kachcheri. The following appointments are also notified, viz.:—J. W. J. Wilkinson, Esq., of Rothschild, to be Justice of the Peace for the District of Pussellawa; J. H. De Caen, Esq., of Helboda, to be Deputy Coroner for the District of Pussellawa. Leave of absence to proceed to England having been granted to Major Tranchell, it is notified that William Murray, Esq., has assumed charge of the superintendence of police of the Central Province, with effect from the 10th ult.—Gazette.

THE COLONIAL BALANCE-SHEET.—The last Gazette contain

parative statement of the revenue of the colony for the half years ending June 1877 and 1878. There was a decrease of Rs. 307,027-97 in Customs; Rs. 7,733-59 in port and harbour dues; Rs. 371,226-51 in land sales; Rs. 15,812-67 in rents (exclusive of land) Rs. 176,033-95½ in licenses; Rs. 792-49 in postage; Rs. 8,714-68½ in fines and forfeitures; Rs. 189,963-49 in pearl fishery; and Rs. 219,153-44 in railway receipts. Altogether, the decrease from different sources amounted to Rs. 1,308,756-92, but there was an increase of Rs. 210,931-12½ in all from land revenue, stamps, taxes, Government vessels, sales of Government property, interest, miscellaneous, special receipts, receipts by Crown agents in London—the latter the magnificent item of Rs. 261-52. The revenue in the first six months of 1877 was Rs. 8,593,109-63½; and in the corresponding period of this year, Rs. 7,495,283-84½, showing a net decrease of Rs. 1,097,825-79½.—Ceylon Times.

COURT-MARTIAL.—MAJOR D. F. M. LANE.—At a General Court-Martial, assembled at Kamptee, on the 9th July, Major D. F. M. Lane, Madras Staff Corps, was arraigned on the following charge:—For having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having at Kamptee, in the month of February, 1878, fraudulently misappropriated to his own use certain money entrusted to him as Honorary Secretary to the Public Rooms, Kamptee, on account of and belonging to the said Public Rooms, in the following instances:—On or about 4th February, Rs. 850, being the amount of a cheque drawn by him on Bunseloll, banker, Kamptee, payable to the librarian, Public Rooms, Kamptee. On or about 12th Feb. Rs. 474-1-2, being the cost of a bill of exchange, for £40, payable to C. O'Halloran, Bath, procured by him, Major D. F. M. Lane, from Bunseloll, banker, Kamptee, on account of the Public Rooms. Finding—The Court find that the prisoner is guilty of the charge in both its instances. Sentence—The Court sentence the prisoner to be cashiered. Approved and confirmed.—I can see no point in Major Lane's conduct, as disclosed in these proceedings, which would justify me in giving effect to the Court's recommendation to mercy.—Fred. P. HAINS, General, Commander-in-Chief in India.

LIBERIAN COFFEE.—In the annual report on Kew Gardens Sir Joseph Hooker thus refers to the experimental plantings in India of Liberian coffee, the seed of which was widely distributed in the preceding year:—"The following extracts from the letters of correspondents, showing that the Liberian coffee is susceptible of becoming established in widely distant countries, will be read with interest. Mr. Gammie writes to me from Darjeeling:—'I have given a few Liberian coffee plants to tea planters in the Sikkim Terai and Bhotan Doars, to see how they will succeed in those parts. If they get through this winter, which is doubtful, there should be good hopes of success. Hitherto they have grown most vigorously. Those in the Doars are described as being four feet in height, and with enormous leaves. The common coffee planted the same time is not a quarter the height. I have also planted a few in our warmest valleys, but have not much hope of their getting through the winter, as the thermometer falls as low as 45 degs. some nights. With us the common coffee grows and fruits splendidly up to about 3,000 feet, but it is quite neglected by tea-planters. If the red spider continues to be the serious pest among the tea bushes it has been this year the planters will probably turn their attention to the cultivation of coffee.' Dr. Thwaites writes to me from Ceylon:—'Our oldest Liberian coffee trees are giving us a little crop of berries for sowing, so we shall be able to distribute plenty in moderate quantity amongst the native cultivators before very long.' Mr. Murton writes to me from Singapore:—'Some plants (about forty) of Liberian coffee that I sent to H.B.M.'s Resident at Laroot, about twelve months since, are giving great satisfaction as far as growth is concerned. No disease has attacked them as yet. Colonel Benson, in a communication to the Agri-Horticultural Society of Madras, sums up the result of the trials of plants supplied to the Government of that Presidency from Kew somewhat adversely:—'A proposition has been made to introduce the Liberian coffee into the Presidency town of Madras, the climate being suitable to the habits of the plants. In my opinion the natural habitation for the plant would be the climate of Burma or the Western Coast. The plant has not made a favourable impression on and in the estates in the neighbourhood of the Neigherry hills. Its general appearance and characteristics are certainly not indicative of its being a heavy fruit bearer, but the contrary, of a strong tendency to run to leaf and foliage. Perhaps its large size and corresponding increased bearing with space, and its larger berries, may more than compensate for a less prolific crop; or perhaps its appearance cannot be taken as a true criterion of its fruit-yielding powers.'—Planters' Gazette.

At the Puna Regatta on the 26th ult., in the first race, the Junior Sculls, Park was the winner. The second race was the Challenge Fours. Puna took the lead, Calcutta next, Bombay last. Calcutta soon went to pieces and finished a bad third. Puna won by one length, Bombay gaining rapidly. Time six minutes ten seconds. Fletcher rowed over in the first heat for the Senior Sculls, Calcutta scratching.

Official Papers.

NEW RAILWAY BILL.—LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following preliminary Report of the Select Committee, together with the Bill as amended by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor-General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 1st August, 1878 :—

1. The members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Railways in India was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill, and the papers.

2. We have saved not only rules, &c., made under the Acts which the Bill proposes to repeal, but also rules made under the enactments which those Acts replaced.

3. We have extended the definition of "Railway" so as to include ferry-boats used for the purpose of, or in connection with, a Railway.

4. It has been held, both in England and in India, that if a Railway Company has no statutory power authorising it to use locomotives, it will be liable for damage caused by sparks, even though all reasonable precautions have been taken to prevent them. Our present Railway Act (XVIII of 1854), unlike the English Railway Clauses Consolidation Act, confers no such power. We have therefore, in accordance with a suggestion of the Secretary of State, expressly declared that locomotives may be used on every Indian Railway. The result will be that the Railway Administration will not be liable for such damage without proof of negligence.

5. When a passenger's luggage is at his request placed in the same carriage in which he is to travel, and is lost or injured, we have declared that the Company is not liable, unless the loss or injury has been caused by the neglect or default of their servants.

6. As the law stands in India, when certain specified articles are contained in parcels delivered to a Railway Company, the Company is not liable for loss of or injury to those articles, whatever may be their value, unless they have been formally declared and insured. One or other of these articles is found in the luggage of most first and second-class passengers, and the result is that many people, as a rule, travel without declaring their property, and run the risk of losing it altogether from accidents to the train, or carelessness and misconduct on the part of the Company's servants. In England the railway companies are relieved from responsibility only when the value of undeclared articles exceeds £10, and we think that in India Rs. 100 would be a reasonable limit. We have therefore assimilated section 6 (now section 7) of the Bill to section 1 of the Carriers' Act, 11 George IV. and 1 Wm. IV., chapter 68. Where any article declared and insured under this section is lost or damaged, the owner will, as a rule, be entitled to recover, in the former case, the value of the article lost, and in the latter, the difference between its value before and after the accident. But where he understates the value, he should be concluded by his statement; and we have therefore provided that the amount so recoverable shall in no case exceed the declared value.

7. We have also amended section 7 (now section 8) so as to express the substance of the English Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, section 7. The Bill now provides that Railway Companies shall, notwithstanding any notice, condition or declaration, be liable for loss or injury to any articles not specially provided for by the preceding section when such loss or injury is occasioned by a railway-officer's neglect or default. But this is not to invalidate special contracts as to receiving, forwarding or delivering such articles, provided such contracts are reasonable, and in writing signed by the parties.

8. In the case of accidents attended with serious personal injury, we have required (section 12) the nearest station-master to give notice to the nearest magistrate and the officer in charge of the police-station in the jurisdiction of which the accident occurred.

9. We have expressly empowered (section 14) the Railway Administration to make rules regulating the maximum number of passengers to be contained in each railway carriage, and the mode in which such number shall be denoted thereon. And we have provided (sections 26, 37) penalties for railway officers compelling passengers to enter carriages already full and for passengers wilfully entering such carriages.

10. We have required (section 16) that the amount of the fare shall be specified on the tickets. In the absence of such a provision, we are informed that Native passengers are constantly cheated either by the issuers of tickets or by touts hanging about the stations.

11. We have declared (section 17) that any passenger to whom a ticket has been furnished and for whom there is no room shall be entitled to have his fare at once refunded.

12. We have provided (section 28) penalties for a person travelling by a train of a class superior to that for which his ticket was issued, using or attempting to use a ticket on a day for which it is not available, or wilfully altering or defacing a ticket so as to render the date, number or other material portion thereof illegible.

13. We have declared (section 34) that the fine for not giving an account of goods, or for giving a false account, shall be in addition to the toll to which such goods may be liable. This is in accordance with 8 and 9 Vic., c. 20, section 99.

14. We have added to the offences for which a person may be arrested without warrant those of evading payment of the proper fare (section 28), being intoxicated or committing nuisance (section 32) and entering rooms or carriages reserved for females (section 33). We have increased the fine for being intoxicated or committing nuisance from Rs. 20 to Rs. 50.

15. We have provided (section 33) a penalty for unlawfully making, showing, hiding or removing signals or lights upon or near railways.

16. The present law (Act XXV. of 1871, section 2) provides a penalty for wilfully driving cattle on a fenced railway, but does not prohibit such driving on unfenced lines. We have, in section 40, made such driving penal whether the line is fenced or unfenced.

17. In some parts of India young native boys are in the habit of throwing stones at trains and placing obstructions on the rails. When they are under seven years of age the law cannot touch them; when they are above seven and under twelve, they are punishable only when proved by the prosecution to have attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of their conduct—a proof which, in most instances, is not easily given. Considering the serious risk to life and property caused by such acts, we think the general law should be modified in this respect; and we have accordingly provided, by section 42, that the convicting magistrate may direct either that such children be punished with whipping, or that their fathers and guardians be punished with fine not exceeding Rs. 20.

18. We have required (section 45) drivers and conductors of omnibuses and other vehicles, while in a station-yard, to obey the reasonable directions of duly authorised railway officers. One of the bye-laws framed by the Board of Trade for regulating travelling by railway in England is to the like effect.

19. We have struck out sections 43 and 44 of the Bill as introduced. The latter section is obsolete, as there are now no Heads of District Police and Amins in the Madras Presidency. The former conflicts with the Code of Criminal Procedure, section 72. We have also omitted the provisions as to tramways contained in section 23 of the Bill as introduced.

20. We have made some changes in wording and arrangement.

21. The publication ordered by the Council has been made; we recommend that the Bill as now amended be re-published, and that its further consideration be stayed till the Council re-assembles in Calcutta.

FLIGHT OF THE SHAH'S BROTHER.

A recent number of the Temps contains some curious particulars of the flight of the Shah's brother, extracted from a Tiflis paper—the Kavkaz. He arrived at midnight on the 3rd of August at Lenkoran, a town on the Caspian, escorted by six horsemen; and on being questioned by the Russian Prefect gave in French the following account of himself:—

"I have no passport. I am Prince Abbas Mirza Nayboul Saltanat, son of the late Shah Mehemet, and brother of the reigning Shah Nasser Ed Din. After my father's death my brother hated me and resolved to put out my eyes. My mother, the head of the Russian Legation, Prince Dolgouroukoff, the English Envoy, Shiel, and the Turkish Envoy saved me. We were taken to Turkey, to Bagdad, where my mother, my family, and I, took up our residence. I lived thus more than twenty years at Bagdad. On my brother the Shah's last visit to Khebellai (Kerbela?) a place of pilgrimage, I presented myself to him at Bagdad. He invited me to re-enter Persia, but I did not accept it, and soon afterwards repaired to Constantinople, where the late Sultan Abdul Aziz gave me a cordial reception and augmented my income. I afterwards returned to Bagdad. The Shah by various intrigues and tricks tried to induce the Sultan to give me up to him, or if not, to fix Ham, in Egypt, as my residence, failing which he threatened war. The Sultan did not accede to these demands, seeing no serious ground for listening to them. I on my part knew that the Shah's words were simply threats, Persia being too weak to declare war against Turkey. When the relations between the Porte and Russia began to get critical the Shah wrote me a letter begging me to forget my resentments and come to Teheran. At the same time the English Resident at Bagdad advised me to satisfy the Shah's wish; but I could not decide on doing so. The English then intervened in such a way that the Turks themselves gave me the choice between returning to Persia and being interned in Egypt, alleging that if I remained at Bagdad Persia would make an alliance with Russia and also declare war against them; whereas if I yielded to the Shah's desire Persia would remain neutral. The English promised me their protection. After some hesitation I resolved on starting for Teheran with my son, leaving my family at Bagdad. On arriving in the capital I was well received by my brother, with all the honours due to my rank. He then appointed me Governor of the province of Zenguan and Khamse, or Hamadan. I immediately repaired to my new residence, the town of Zenguan. On the eve of the Shah's departure for Europe an Infantry corps revolted. The mutineers surrounded the Shah's carriage and called on him to yield to their demands. The same day he executed ten of them. My enemies did not fail to make capital out of this event against me. They mixed up my name with the revolt of the Sarbazes. My brother then told one of his intimates that the same thing might happen to me as to the executed Sarbazes when he returned from his tour. These words were promptly repeated to me at Zenguan to put me on my guard. After the Shah's return to Teheran I received six days ago secret information that my fate was settled and my death decided on. Only one way of escape remained—to flee to Russia, which I had previously thought of, following the example of my uncle, Prince Regmen Mirza. The day after receiving this fatal news I published through the town my intention to leave for a few days, made some hasty preparations, and started. Crossing in the night the bridge over the Sefidroud, I ordered the raising of the camp established there, and at midnight, when all were asleep, I took with me my son and five trusty men, and started by the Ardabil-road for the Russian frontier. It is four days since I fled. I have crossed the mountains without stopping, going at such a pace that four of my horses died from exhaustion. I left Persia to save my life and that of my son. God has heard my prayers. I have come to Russia with the resolute purpose of throwing myself at the feet of the Emperor of all the Russias and asking his aid and protection." The Prince embarked next day in the Russian steamer Prince Bariatinsky for Bakow.

THE EUPHRATES VALLEY ROUTE TO INDIA.—The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says:—Captain Cameron left Portsmouth on Wednesday morning in her Majesty's troopship Orontes for Cyprus, a passage thither having been granted him by Government. The gallant officer, after a short stay in our newly-acquired island will proceed on a mission having for its object to ascertain the practicability of the Euphrates Valley for railway communication with our North Western Provinces of India, and the elucidation of the most desirable line to be taken to the terminus, when the course of the great river must be abandoned on its nearing the Persian Gulf. A glance at the map will show the arduous nature of the undertaking entered upon by Captain Cameron, even if regarded only in a geographical sense. But it is to be feared that the hostility of man may prove far more prejudicial to the explorer than the difficulties of nature. Supposing that he meet with no serious opposition to his designs as far as Bussorah, there is some probability that the entire rest of the route, through Faristan, Carmania, and part of Beloochistan, will be beset with difficulties from the people of each district. The Shah of Persia, I understand, furnished Captain Cameron with authoritative protection and encouragement; but even Imperial mandates when they contravene public prejudices are apt to be disregarded in the distant provinces of the Shah.

CENTRAL ASIA.

It would appear that the Russian traveller Prejevalsky in his last remarkable journey in the heart of Central Asia did not explore Lob-Nor at all, as he claims to have done. Baron Ferdinand von Richthofen, one of the first comparative geographers of the day, has examined the account of the journey, more especially by the light of Chinese literature, and proves, almost incontestably to our thinking, that the true Lob-Nor must lie somewhere north-east of the so-called Kara-Kotchun Lake discovered by Prejevalsky, and that, in all probability, it is fed by an eastern arm of the Tarim river. This, at all events, would account for the remarkable diminution in bulk undergone by the waters of that stream as they proceed southward, which could not but strike an attentive reader of the Russian explorer's narrative. We have not space to reproduce all the arguments which Von Richthofen adduces, but the more important are these:—Prejevalsky's lake was fresh, whereas Lob-Nor has been called the Salt Lake, par excellence, in all ages; Shaw, Forsyth, and other authorities report that the name Lob-Nor was well-known in those regions, whereas Prejevalsky found no such name applied to his lake; the Chinese maps, of the accuracy of which Von Richthofen has had repeated proofs, represent Lob-Nor as lying more to the north-east, and call two lakes, lying nearly in the position of those discovered by Prejevalsky, Khas-omo, Khas being the Mongolian for jade, a famous product of Khotan, of which mediæval traders from China went in quest, passing by these very lakes en route. Another important argument is, as we have mentioned, based on the bulk of water discharged by the Tarim at its mouth. Von Richthofen's theory presupposes that the Tarim river has altered its course, and that the main rush of water is now south-east, instead of due east as formerly. The whole question is well worthy of further investigation, and it is possible that Prejevalsky, whom a recent telegram from St. Petersburg reports as about to return to Central Asia, may be enabled to elucidate it. He will return to Zaissan, the Russian frontier post, and thence endeavour to make his way into Tibet by way of Barkul and Hami. It is, however, certain that he will encounter great, if not insuperable obstruction, for we learn from private advices from India that the ill-advised publication in the Chefoo Convention of the then proposed Mission to Tibet has resulted in the issue of the most stringent orders to the Tibetan officials at all the various routes and passes to allow no European traveller to enter into the country on any pretext whatever.

From Semi-rechensk we learn that two officers have been sent from Fort Naryn to make topographical reconnaissances in the Issyk-kul district. They are to survey a route between Naryn and Kashgar (probably that leading over the Bogashta and Terekli passes), and complete Baron Kaulbar's surveys of 1868 and 1869. The country about Kuldja will not be examined this year, it having been reconnoitred as far east as Manas, and on the Chinese side as far as Karashahr. These surveys have been completed by Capt. Larionof, who has also traversed the Sary-Djas and Muztag ranges east of Lake Issyk-kul, the only route across which is that leading to the Muzart Pass and beyond to Aksu and the Chinese dominions southward. Capt. Larionof has compiled a map and a list of barometric heights.

The Russian troops are said to be dispersed along the frontier to guard against any incursions of the Chinese troops. The latter are very indifferently drilled and armed; each soldier is armed with either a gun or pike, in the proportion of two pikes to every three guns, while the officers are armed with American rifles. Famine is said to be imminent in Dzungaria, and in Kashgaria there is complete anarchy, the different provinces being in a state of chronic rebellion, which the Chinese have enough to do to put down.—Athenæum.

DEATH OF A DISTINGUISHED ORIENTALIST.—Danish science has suffered a loss that will be felt and sympathised with wherever Oriental studies have found votaries. Mr. Niels Ludvig Westergaard, Professor of Oriental Languages at the Copenhagen University, died on the 9th of September, after a protracted and painful illness, that has for a long time prevented him from work. Mr. Westergaard was born at Copenhagen on the 27th of October, 1815. He was the son of a joiner and builder, and at eighteen years of age took his first degrees at the University, passing the next year as M.A. He had from his schooldays felt a deep interest in the Arabian and Persian languages, and soon devoted himself entirely to Indian philology. After studying for several years at Copenhagen, the public libraries of which town are rich in Asiatic manuscripts of high value, brought over from India by the celebrated Rasmus Christian Rask, he went, in 1838, to Bonn, and in the following year visited Paris, London, and Oxford. In the spring of 1841 he went, by way of the Cape, out to India, and here he spent three years deeply immersed in linguistic studies, returning in 1844, via Tiflis, Moscow, and St. Petersburg. On his return he was nominated Professor of Indo-Oriental Philology and Literature at the Copenhagen University, and the valuable contributions to Oriental science which were due to his researches and linguistic talents soon secured to him the highest scientific honours. He became member of the Royal Danish Society of Science, corresponding member of l'Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-lettres, and, on the 5th of April, 1856, honorary member of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland. His first work was entitled "Radices Lingue Sanscritæ," and was written at Bonn, 1841. Four years later he gave out a most remarkable essay upon the deciphering of the second Achaemenian or Median species of arrowheaded writing. Of the Indian Codices belonging to the Royal Library and the University Library of Copenhagen he delivered a complete list and description, under the title, "Codices Bibliothecæ Regiæ Hafniensis enumerati et descriptum indice codicum Indicarum et Iranicarum Bibliothecæ Universitatis Hafniensis." Of smaller papers may be named his treatise upon the connection between Sanscrit and Icelandic, his elucidations of the Gîrnar inscriptions, and some contributions as to Persian mythology and history. But the great work of his life is the careful and trustworthy edition of the Zoroastrian holy book, Zendavesta, or the religious books of the Zoroastrians, edited and interpreted, with a dictionary, grammar, &c.; printed in Copenhagen from 1852-54, 4to., and containing in four parts the Yasna, Vispered and the Yashts, and Vendidad. For many years he was occupied in preparing a Zend Dictionary, and in the Gentleman's Magazine for March, 1856, Professor George Stephens has communicated some interesting details as to this work, but it is not known how far it had proceeded at the time of his death. Besides his scientific labours, Professor Westergaard entered for some years into political life; he was a member of the first Danish Rigsdag that voted the Liberal Charter still forming the fundamental law of the kingdom; but when constitutional liberty had been safely established he gladly retired to his quiet study and to his University duties.—Times.

DUTCH EAST INDIES.—The Budget for 1879 of the Dutch East Indies, was presented by the Colonial Minister on 9th inst. There is a deficit of 10,000,000 florins caused by the expenses of the war in Acheen and the expenditure for the construction of new railways. The Minister proposes to cover the deficit temporarily by advances from the Treasury to the Indian Finance department, and ultimately by a loan. The expense attending the occupation of Acheen is estimated at 9,000,000 florins. The Minister estimates the coffee crop at 820,000 piculs at the price of 48 cents. per half kilogramme.

THE TONGHOO SCANDAL.—In respect to the Tonghoo scandal, we learn that Colonel Ardagh, the Sessions Judge of Tenasserim, to whose Court Colonel Marshall, of Tonghoo, has been committed on a charge of adultery, has addressed the Judicial Commissioner on the subject. He thinks that he, being a military officer, of the same rank as the defendant, it would be preferable, in the ends of justice, if the case was removed to the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon, where the defendant would have the advantage of the Recorder's knowledge of English law and procedure. The local Government have the power, we believe, to send the case to the Recorder for trial, or the Judicial Commissioner can order its transfer to his own court.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

BY THE

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . . The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans, or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

RIDER'S PATENT HOUSEHOLD PUMPING ENGINE.

SOLE MAKERS

HAYWARD TYLER & CO.,
LONDON.

The cost of running an Engine of half-a-horse power does not exceed 2s. 6d. per week for coke and oil.

An Engine of half-horse power will raise all the water required for a large mansion or public buildings, and one of a third-horse power is sufficient for most gentlemen's houses, whilst its simplicity is such that no skilled labour is requisite,—in fact, a gardener's boy of sixteen years old, of ordinary intelligence, can work it.

The following gentlemen have ordered a second engine for private use:—

Cranston's Nurseries, King's Acre, near Hereford,

Messrs. HAYWARD TYLER and Co.,

Gentlemen,—We have much pleasure in being able to state that the "Rider Hot Air Engine" has given great satisfaction, and has done all we expected of it. Our fear at first was that it would soon lose air by the packing getting worn, but this has not been the case, as we have worked it now for twelve months without its having cost us a penny for repairs. Any of our men can work it, and the consumption of fuel is as small as you state. We should be very sorry to be without it now in the nurseries.—Yours truly,

CRANSTON AND CO.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Canber, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J.
COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle mala-there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, September 6th; Madras and Allahabad, September 4th; Calcutta, September 3rd.

THE official reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 27th August, state that in Madras rain is reported from all districts; damage from excessive rain continues to be complained of in parts of Kistna, Godavery and Kurnool; prospects are generally good. The total number on relief works is 109,474, and gratuitously relieved 67,469, a decrease of 6,116 and 2,677 on the figures for last week; 1,289 tons of grain were exported during the week ending 24th ult. Good rain has fallen throughout Mysor, and prospects are very favourable; prices are falling. For the week ending the 17th instant the numbers in receipt of relief were, works 32,635, gratuitous 13,227, more by 717 and less by 548 than in the previous week. Rain has fallen throughout the Bombay Presidency, but the weather has recently been more broken than before; except in Sindh, where much damage has been done by floods, prospects are good. Rain has also been general in the Central Provinces; some damage has been done by excessive falls, but prospects are generally favourable. In Berar the cotton and jowari are said to be suffering from excessive rain. In Central India continuous rain is reported in Malwa, and consequent damage to the crops; in Gwalior and Bundelkhand good rain has fallen at Morar and Nowgong, but more is still needed. Rain has fallen in all districts of Bengal; more is said to be still required in many places in the Patna division, especially in Sarun, but prospects are generally very favourable. In Assam very heavy rain has fallen in the Valley Districts and Sylhet; prospects are good. In Burma want of rain is causing anxiety in many districts, especially in Thonkwa, Thayetmyo, Tharrawaddy, Prome, and Amherst. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh excellent rain has fallen in all districts except Jhansi; prices are generally falling, and prospects are good. Rain has fallen in all districts of the Punjab (including Peshawar, where later information announces 81 inch on the 28th); agricultural prospects are generally favourable, but inundations have done some damage in the districts under the hills.

THE reports from the Provinces for the week ending August 24 give the following results as to general health:—Slight cholera in Gujerat; in Khandesh, 414 cases of cholera, 258 deaths; in Puna, 38 deaths; Ahmednagar, 78 deaths. Fever prevalent in Kanara and Kattywar. In Bengal, health generally good, cholera declining; but in Sarun, Singhbhoom, and Balasor fever prevalent, also in places in Rungpore. Cholera prevalent in parts of Bareilly and in the Central Provinces. Cholera still general, but decreasing; in Numai, however, 229 deaths were reported, and 118 in Wardha; 82 in Seoni. Cholera has disappeared from Arakan, but malarious fever was very prevalent. General health of Rangoon good, and in British Burma; also in Assam. In Rajputana cholera abating, but fever very prevalent in Ulwur.

LIEUT.-COL. BONUS, R.E., having recently inspected the Indus Valley State Railway, has, it is stated, reported that some seventy miles have been more or less injured, and must be reconstructed. It will be therefore some months before the complete restoration of through traffic can be effected, especially if extra water-way is determined. In the Ferozepore district the rise of the Sutlej has once more broken the head-works of the inundation canals, and laid a hundred square miles of land under water. The Times telegram states that it is hoped that the Indus Valley Railway will be opened for through traffic from Multan to Kotree before the end of October. The Government have resolved to complete the Punjab Northern State Railway to Rawul Pindee with the utmost energy. All leave has been stopped, and employes on leave recalled.

No news contained in our overland advices seems of any importance by the side of the intelligence which reached us on Monday, and which has created the utmost excitement, not only in England but in all the capitals of the Continent. On the 21st the advance guard of our Mission left Peshawar, and proceeded as far as Jamrood on our frontier. Major Cavagnari rode forward to Ali Musjid, the frontier Afghan fort, to ask for a safe passage. The commandant of the fort in the presence of the Mir Akhir, or Master of the Horse, a trusty servant of the Amir, not only refused a passage, but declared that personal friendship alone prevented him from shooting Major Cavagnari. Thus for the second time our Mission has been denied access to Kabul, and it is impossible to attribute this insulting denial of amity to any mistake on the part of subordinate officers. The Amir's own representative, recently despatched to Ali Musjid, not only refused to permit the advance, but threatened violence. It seems to have been anticipated that such would be the case, and the Indian Press, in view of such a contingency, have beforehand almost unanimously approved the firm attitude of our Government. We cannot wait to learn whether the reported disavowals of the Russian support to the Amir are true or not. The insult to the Empress of India offered by the Amir of Afghanistan has to be promptly and effectually avenged. Both the Imperial dignity and the military exigencies require an immediate movement. No time must be given for the insolent and ungrateful Afghan to make use of his temporary triumph, as he will deem it, or to allow Candahar, Jelalabad, Ghuzni, and other positions which now lie almost at our mercy, to be strengthened. To delay, moreover, were to allow time for the uncertain frontier tribes, many of whom have been cowed by recent chastisement, to be gained over to support the Amir. The Mission has been dissolved, Sir Neville Chamberlain has started for Madras, and instead of a military pageant, three strong columns are said to be about immediately to march, under the command of General Roberts. The northern column is said to be intended to operate by the Khyber Pass, but there seems to be an uncertainty as to this item of intelligence. The forces of the central column, about 6,000 men, will concentrate at Thull, a small town on the left bank of the Khoorum river, 168 miles from Kabul and 198 from Ghuzni, and separated from the Kabul Valley by the Suffeid Koh. The southern column will concentrate at Quetta, whence 8,000 men will threaten, or it may be expected advance on, Candahar, 150 miles distant. The question as to the advisability of an immediate advance will be most carefully considered; but it cannot be doubted that the sooner the blow needful to bring the Amir to a sense of his position be struck the less will be the difficulty and the duration of the too probable, if not certain, war. It is hardly necessary to repeat that not only all our Indian fellow-subjects, but all the Powers and peoples of Europe and Asia are waiting and watching eagerly the issue of this quarrel between so powerful an Empire and a barbarian chief of some few hundred square miles of mountainous country, tenanted by semi-civilised tribes.

It is not possible for any leading politician, of whatever party, to do otherwise than assert the necessity of punishing the affront offered by the Amir. But as might have been expected, the embroglio is regarded by some as a natural outcome of the Conservative policy. It is all the fault of the Ministry who have chosen to believe that Russia is not the wellwisher of England, and who believe that Russian influences in Central Asia are not conducive to the peace of our Indian Empire. We wonder at whose door lies the blame attaching to the Government which missed in 1869 the opportunity of obtaining from the Amir, not only the reception of a Mission, but the residence of a British Political Agent. When Shere Ali came to the Durbar at Umballa he was ready to concede all that we could ask, and even to refuse the same right to any other Power, the presence of whose Envoy, Resident, or Consul, can only be a focus and centre of intrigue, the effects of which would be continually felt throughout India. We know the spoken opinions of the Duke of Argyll, and his noble views of our Indian rights and duties. Who then inspired the instructions that no requisitions were to be made, no conditions exacted? The Amir, who had come submissive, and expecting to be compelled to admit the controlling influence of England, received all, rupees, arms, artillery, and was asked for nothing. Well might he say, as he halted in Peshawar, "Now, indeed, I feel that I am a king." There would have been no hope for Russian intrigues, whether prompted from St. Petersburg or not, no need for an Afghan expedition, if our policy had been then more Imperial.

THE selection for the command in Afghanistan of Brigadier General F. S. Roberts, who, according to the telegram of yesterday, will leave to-morrow for Khelat with a brigade of all arms, is said to be most judicious. In the prime of life, active, vigorous, and hardy, General Roberts, besides bringing a varied experience, obtained from a twenty years' service in the Quartermaster-General's Department, of which he is the actual head, to bear on his new command, has also the advantage of having served through many campaigns, in all and each of which he has earned distinction. At the siege of Delhi he earned the Victoria Cross for personal gallantry in sabring a standard bearer and capturing his flag. The various operations connected with the Relief of Lucknow and its subsequent siege and capture saw him acting as an Assistant Adjutant-General. For this campaign he received the brevet of major, besides a medal and three clasps, and was frequently mentioned in despatches. At the Umbeila Expedition in 1863 he was also present and again mentioned. He served throughout the Abyssinian war as Quartermaster-General of the Bengal Brigade, and was given a Lieutenant-Colonelcy for his meritorious services. As senior Staff officer he accompanied the Looshae expedition of 1872, for which he received the Companionship of the Bath. General Roberts has been mentioned no less than twenty-three times in despatches, so that his past career and present knowledge of the frontier, derived from long study of the question and personal acquaintance with the ground, fully warrant the assertion that a better selection for a Brigade leader could not have been made.

ACCORDING to the most recent news from Calcutta, it is believed that the annexation of Sindh to the Punjab will be shortly effected. It is stated that some of the heads of departments in the Punjab have already been warned to prepare for taking over the corresponding departments in the territory transferred.

THE text of the two letters sent by the Viceroy to the Amir, is given in full by the correspondent of the Standard. The first, dated Simla, Aug. 14th, contains the following passages:—"The authentic intelligence which I have lately received as to the course of recent events at Kabul and in the countries bordering on Afghanistan, has rendered it necessary that I should communicate fully and without reserve with your Highness upon matters of importance which concern the interests of India and Afghanistan. For this reason I have considered it expedient to depute an especial and confidential envoy of high rank, who is known to your Highness—his Excellency General Sir Neville Bowles Chamberlain. He will visit your Highness immediately, in order that he may converse personally with your Highness regarding these urgent affairs. It appears certain that they can best be arranged for the welfare and tranquillity of both States, and the preservation of friendship between the two Governments, by a full and frank statement of the present position. The second letter was written (Aug. 23) after the death of Abdulla Jan, condoling with the Amir, and announcing a delay of the Mission till the period of mourning should have expired.

ACCORDING to a Bombay telegram of 23rd inst., all the prisoners charged with being concerned in the riots at Surat in April last, on the occasion of the imposition of the licence tax, have been honourably acquitted.

THE report as to the death of the King of Burmah, mentioned last week, was repeated in a telegram, dated Calcutta, the 22nd instant:—"The latest Press news states that the King of Burmah died on the 11th inst., at seven in the evening. He was conscious to the last. His will nominates Myoung Yaw or Thee Baw, his two sons, as alternative successors, preferring the latter. Both princes have left the palace, and taken refuge in the British Embassy. There is, however, no official confirmation of his death. All trade is stopped, but Mandalay is quiet." Another telegram, dated Rangoon, 25th inst., says:—"The report recently current announcing the death of the King of Burmah was unfounded."

WE hear from Rawalpindi (says the Lahor paper) that on the 23rd August the horses of G-3 R.A. were attacked with what was believed to be the ailment known as the Ludhiana disease. By noon of the 24th twenty-two horses had died, and many were still suffering; on the 26th the number of the dead had amounted to thirty-eight, or more than one-third of all the horses in the battery. The animals affected had been promptly removed from the neighbourhood of those which were sound, and the latter removed from the stables into camp. The horses of the Royal Horse Artillery Battery which were close alongside those of G-3 have not suffered at all. This it is supposed may be accounted for by the fact that the horses of G-3 have had as forage lately some green jowar which was not given to the Horse Artillery Battery horses, and hence one veterinary surgeon has formed the opinion that the horses have died not of Ludhiana disease but of poison.

THE Naik of the Guard who murdered Mr. Cooper at Bhamo has been tried, sentenced and executed in British territory.

AT a meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council, held on Sept. 5, Sir A. Arbuthnot introduced a Vernacular Press Bill, the object of which is to repeal that portion of the Act which enables publishers of Vernacular newspapers to withdraw themselves from its restrictive provisions by submitting their proofs to a Government official. The Bill was to be considered on the 26th inst., when Sir A. Arbuthnot purposed to review the discussions on the Bill in India and England.

* THE Army Sanitary Commission, in expressing its opinion on the revised rules framed by the Government of India for adoption on the outbreak of cholera or small-pox in cantonments, remarks that the great gain to the public health of India lies in the practical declaration that quarantines are not to be depended on as safeguards against epidemics, and that in future these must be sought in the application of sanitary measures to towns and villages and fairs, and along the routes followed by pilgrims as proposed by the special committee appointed by the Viceroy to examine the question.

THE Times telegram of the 22nd states that a very strong feeling of dissatisfaction is expressed at the prospects of promotion in the Indian army. Hopes had been entertained that the rules which have recently been laid down for the officers in the new Line regiments with reference to retirement and pensions would have been extended to all officers of the old Company's army still remaining in the service. Unless some such measure is passed to diminish the enormous excess of the field officers in the Indian army it would be difficult to supply fresh officers. At the beginning of the present year there were in the Bengal Staff Corps 509 field officers, as against 175 subalterns; in the Bombay Staff Corps, 249 field officers, as against 79 subalterns; in the Madras Staff Corps, 396 field officers, as against 31 subalterns. Thus in the three Presidencies the field officers are a little more than four times as numerous as the subalterns. This is chiefly caused by the grossly unfair system of pensions, under which voluntary retirement is almost impossible. This is both unjust and impolitic, and unless remedied will render the condition of the native army intolerable for English officers.

We published last week extracts from a minute of the Governor of Bombay on the result of the recent inquiry into the Railway grain robberies, reflecting severely on the conduct of the officials. Our readers will find a strong expression of local opinion adverse to the conclusions therein expressed, especially as regards the officials who were acquitted of the charge of complicity, in another part of our columns. The principal witness against Mr. Dewey has been put on his trial for perjury, and the Times correspondent has telegraphed the result, and the expression of feeling elicited on the occasion as follows:—"A telegram from Bombay states that after a three days' trial of Luckemsee for perjury, arising out of evidence given by the prisoner in the recent prosecution of Dewey for grain robberies, the prisoner was convicted. Sir Richard Temple, after the acquittal of Dewey, had published a minute censuring the railway traffic manager and Dewey, indirectly also reflecting upon the conduct of the High Court in connection with Dewey's acquittal. In the present case the Judge, in summing up, cautioned the jury not to allow anything contained in this movement, whether written or not by the highest official, to influence their verdict. In presenting their verdict the jury considered Dewey had been most harshly and unjustly treated, that the reflections made in Sir Richard Temple's minutes should be withdrawn, and that Dewey ought to receive full compensation for the injustice done him. The Judge awarded Dewey 1,000 rupees compensation."

WHILE rejoicing over the abolition of the expensive and cumbrous annoyance of the Inland Customs Line, the Friend of India remarks that the abolition of the Custom's line is, of course, a hardship to the officers engaged on it, but similar hardships cannot be avoided, when any existing system is abolished. Allowing it undue weight would be the stoppage of reform. The disestablished officers have petitioned Government to relax the pension rules in favour of those officers for whom suitable employment cannot be found in other departments of the service, and certainly the utmost possible consideration is due to them. The Governor-General does not consider himself justified "to relax the Pension Code at his discretion," and "regrets that he cannot find any speciality in the circumstances of these officers such as would justify him in moving the Secretary of State to sanction any departure from the rules in their favour." He does not think it just, however, that officers should be discharged suddenly, and allows, therefore, that they should receive the pay of three months from date of notice, whether or not their services were practically dispensed with much or little within that period. They will also of course receive the pension or gratuity due to them under the present service regulations. We do not see that more could be done, though we can readily sympathise with the discharged officers.

We are glad to learn, says the Madras Mail, that the subject of harbours for India is not being lost sight of by the Government of India. Commander A. D. Taylor, Superintendent Marine Survey Department, Colonel Thomason, R.E., and Captain Baird, R.E., Superintending Tidal Observations, will shortly proceed on a tour round the Indian coasts to further investigate the capabilities of certain ports visited by Colonel Thomason during the last working season. The tour will also be extended to the coast of Burmah and Port Blair; but we understand that the ports to which attention will more particularly be directed at present with a view to future harbours are, False Point, Vizagapatam, the Paumben Channel, Cochin, Beypor, Mangalor, and Carwar. The heavy financial pressure under which this country is now labouring in consequence of the late famine may for a time render the execution of these works a matter of some difficulty, but the lessons of the past will not have been thrown away should they lead to the satisfaction of so crying a want as a sound system of harbours along the coasts of Coromandel and Malabar. Few officers have had more practical experience in harbour engineering than our present Public Works Minister; and should he leave us as a legacy such fruits of his long experience, India will have good reason to be grateful to Sir Andrew Clarke.

In the resolution in the Report of the Bengal Police Department for 1877 Sir Ashley Eden animadverts very strongly on the tendency of the police to "lock up in anticipation all those whom they think likely to give them any trouble." The Inspector General seems to be of a different opinion, but the Lieut. Governor declares that he will "insist on loyal co-operation on his part in substituting a system of sensible control, and prevention of crime by intelligent exertion, for one under which it was possible in the course of one year and a-half to prosecute 2,180 innocent persons for bad character." Referring to the conflict of opinion, and the reluctance expressed by the Inspector General to restrain the police from too zealous prosecution of "bad characters," the resolution avers that "Sir Ashley Eden has in no way declared that the provisions of the law are to be treated as a dead letter; what he did say was that they were intended only for a state of circumstances to which they have not been restricted. They were intended as aids to police administration, and not as substitutes for ordinary preventive and detective action. They were never intended to serve as a cloak for the indulgence of the police in sloth and for the gratification of malice, or as a screen for inefficiency. That they have been so used the record of police administration for the past two years amply proves. It is plainly demonstrated by the figures that the police in their efforts to save themselves trouble, and to swell their lists of convictions, have employed an engine intended for the repression of special crime in harassing all against whom they have been able to get up cases of bad livelihood without regard to their real innocence or guilt."

In a letter to the Times of the 24th inst. Mr. Rogers, an ex-member of the Bombay Council, reminds us of the conclusions arrived at by a Commission of Inquiry into the state of the factory operatives of Bombay during the governorship of Sir Philip Wodehouse. The decision of the Commission was against legislative interference, the main reason for this conclusion apparently being that the medical witnesses reported favourably of the physical condition of the operatives, caused by the fact that their wages enabled them to obtain better food than that of day labourers. We fancy that we hear echoes of the old debates when representatives of the manufacturing interests or of the colliery owners in this country protested that the overworked women and children rather liked the long hours and hard labour under their taskmasters than otherwise. Surely, in the protection of the women and children we need not hesitate to assimilate our dealings with the native operatives to those protective measures, which the present generation find it hard to believe, were ever opposed in the British Parliament. Mr. Rogers says that the natives of India "rejoice in a close muggy atmosphere, and that factory work is to them, in fact, a well-paid enjoyment." Perhaps so; but an enjoyment that cannot be discontinued, save at the will of an overlooker, may become intolerable, and we think that it is the duty of legislators to protect the ignorant and weak from the injurious effects of an excessive indulgence in the enjoyment of prolonged hours of unhealthy labour.

A REMARKABLE discovery of an organised system of kidnapping children has been made by the Madras Police. According to the Athenæum, it has been notorious for years past in Madras that the children of the lower orders when reported as "lost" at police stations are seldom if ever recovered. By a happy accident two children, who had been lost for several years, fell into the hands of the police staff of the F division this week, and informed the police that they had escaped from a veritable "house of bondage" in the back slums of Triplicane. There they had been taught the Hindostanee language and clothed after Mohammedan style, being also given Musalman names. A rigid inquiry having been instituted by the police, five more "long lost children" were discovered, like the two who made their escape, being all under ten years of age. The parents, who have been sorrowing for years, recognised in these quasi-little Mohammedans the urchins who had been "lost or mislaid, stolen or strayed." By all accounts the demand for likely-looking boys and girls is greater than the supply; of course so long as this continues, "kidnapping" will flourish. That such a trade can be carried on right under the noses of the police, and that the chief parties implicated should have escaped detection so long is not a matter of surprise. Its ramifications are widespread, and it is easy to pass children from one part to another amongst the members of the Madras Slave Trade Company (unlimited).

THE British Burmah Gazette, in remarking on the report on Light-houses for 1877-8, mentions the strange disappearance of the Krishna Shoal Light-house in August 1877 from the South coast of Pegu. It was built in 1869, was annually inspected, was thoroughly repaired by the P. W. D. in 1876, was last visited in June, 1877, by the buoy vessel Pharos, and its disappearance was reported by the Ava when it reached Rangoon on 22nd August. The Ava was accordingly at once ordered to return to the Krishna Shoal, taking with her an experienced harbour-master well acquainted with the coast. She reached the spot at night, sailed over it and around it, fired rockets and made other signals to attract notice, but all to no purpose. Next day the search was renewed fruitlessly, the Ava returning to Rangoon with a report that not a vestige of the Light-house could be seen, and that the soundings taken gave a depth of six fathoms all round the spot at low water. The real cause of the calamity will never, probably, be discovered. The light was seen burning brightly on the night of the 6th August; on the night of the 10th a vessel rounding the shoal could see neither Light-house nor light, and the weather had during the whole of the time been exceptionally stormy. The place of the Light-house was shortly after taken up by the light-ship Star, which lies anchored in longitude 95 degrees 34½ minutes E., four miles to the eastward of the position formerly occupied by the Light-house.

ACCORDING to a correspondent of the Statesman, one of the Secretaries in the Military Department of the Government of India has lately issued an order to the effect that the Hindoo Peons, many of whom are of high caste, must not appear at their work with caste marks on their forehead. The Statesman may well say if this information were not well authenticated we should receive it with incredulity, and characterise the order as "senseless," and calculated needlessly to exasperate Hindu feelings.

THE numerous inquirers as to the real condition of Afghanistan will be glad to learn that we are promised a complete compendium of Afghan History, and a review of Afghan politics from 1841 to the present time, from the pen of Col. Malleison, C.S.I. This timely volume is in the press, and will be published by Messrs. Allen and Co. in November next.

THE Indian brewers have achieved a great victory, which it is to be hoped they will use with moderation. The Pioneer informs us, upon the recommendation of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and with the full concurrence of the Military Department, that Indian beer only is to be supplied to all garrisons from Peshawur to Umballa inclusive, as well as to all hill-stations in the Punjab and North-West Provinces; and three-fourths Indian beer and one-fourth English to all other stations as far south as Cawnpore, including Cawnpore and Gwalior. By this arrangement the consumption of Indian brewed liquor will be increased from about 18,000 hogsheads per annum, to something like thirty-six or forty thousand. Then, contracts hereafter are to be given for three years, instead of for one year or two years, and in order to allow the brewers ample time to arm themselves for a long campaign, tenders for 1880, 1881, and 1882 are to be advertised almost immediately and opened in December next, or earlier. Lastly, among other minor reforms in the system of dealing between the Government and the brewer penal bonds are to be substituted for money guarantees for due fulfilment of contract—the rule which required the supplier to deposit a sum equal to 10 per cent. upon the amount of his contract having been found oppressive in practice.

THE projected Asia Minor and Euphrates Railway cannot be now regarded as a distant dream. Seldom has so varied and influential a body of supporters united to forward such an enterprise, as those who form the Stafford House Association for Promoting the Construction of a Railway from the Persian Gulf to Constantinople and the Mediterranean, affording alternate routes to British India, and for developing the resources of Asia Minor. The Duke of Sutherland as President, and the veteran pioneer of the Euphrates Valley Route, Mr. W. P. Andrew, as Chairman, with Lieut.-Gen. Sir Arnold Kemball as Vice-chairman, head a committee numbering some fifty influential names, among which we find Lord Blantyre, Midhat Pasha, Lord Strathnairn, Lord Shaftesbury, Major-Gen. Sir F. Goldsmid, Sir John Macneill, Sir Philip Rose, Sir H. Drummond Wolff, Col. Nassau Lees, Messrs. Thos. Brassey, M.P., R. W. Hanbury, M.P., Sampson Lloyd, M.P., Grattan Geary, and W. J. Wrench (H.M.'s Vice Consul at Constantinople).

ASIA MINOR AND EUPHRATES VALLEY RAILWAY.

Now that the Protectorate of Asia Minor has been undertaken by this country, and that the island of Cyprus has been conditionally ceded to us, in order that we may be enabled the more effectually to carry out such measures as might prove necessary for the successful protection of the vast provinces thus placed under our guardianship, it behoves us by every means in our power to aid in the development of the resources of the country whether commercial or agricultural, and at the same time, in case of need, to render more readily available the military resources of the Turkish Empire.

It must have been apparent to the most casual observer that had railways existed throughout the dominions of the Sultan during the late war the result might have been very different. Many a time the Turkish generals feared to move rapidly, lest reinforcements known to be on their way should not come up in time to support them, or that supplies, munitions and stores should fail when most urgently required; thus more than one opportunity of crushing a foe already well-nigh exhausted was lost, and the enemy, with railway communication in his rear, was allowed sufficient time to bring up corps after corps to strengthen his wasted and demoralised battalions.

More than fifteen years ago, at the request of Musurus Pacha, Mr. W. P. Andrew drew up a scheme by which it was proposed to unite, by means of railways, the most distant provinces of the Sultan's Asiatic dominions with their opposite extremities in Europe. Thus, with one terminus at Bussorah and the other at Belgrade, the most distant parts of Asiatic Turkey would have been brought within fifty hours of the capital; while in Europe Sofia and Widdin might have been reached in one-fourth of that time.

From Belgrade to Vienna a railway already exists, and thence by several alternative routes through Europe direct communication between London and the north-west shores of the Persian Gulf might be attained. The distance from Belgrade to Bussorah is about 2,200 miles, and a section of about 200 miles from Constantinople to Jamboli is already finished, leaving only the gap from that point to Belgrade to complete the European part of the system. The Turkish Empire has now been shorn of its chief European possessions. It will be of small avail to the House of Ottoman to propose schemes by which the Asiatic reinforcements may be brought to reinforce the European outposts. But the establishment of a system of railway communications has become a pressing necessity, not only for the development and protection of the rich and extensive possessions which we have guaranteed, but for the subservience of our own Asiatic interests and Indian Empire. As regards the Asiatic portion of the railway, which would have two termini at the European ends, the one at Alexandretta and the other at Constantinople, the respective lines from which would unite at Diarbekir or Aleppo, or some other convenient point, and thence proceed via Bagdad to Bussorah, it has been urged that we need only concern ourselves with the line connecting the Mediterranean with the Persian Gulf, which would secure to us a safe, easy, and rapid means of access to our Eastern Empire. But this, like all other purely selfish policies when more closely scrutinised, proves to be an error; upon more careful examination it becomes obvious that if we are effectually to safeguard the Turk, our true policy is to make him as strong as possible, by placing at his command such means of communication as would enable him to develop the resources of those fruitful regions over which he dominates, and to avail himself readily of all the military forces of his still widespread Empire. We invite the attention of our readers to two letters appended to this article, one written in 1863 and the other in 1870, which, with great foresight, clearly lay down a plan, the adoption of which has by recent events been rendered more than ever desirable. Whether the line deviates a little to the right or the left is of no great importance; but we feel convinced that the time has now arrived when something ought to be done towards the carrying out of an undertaking involving such vast interests as the efficient protection of Asia Minor and an alternative route to India.

We cannot introduce the letters in question without expressing a hope that the patriotic exertions of the Duke of Sutherland and the noble and distinguished coadjutors associated with him for the construction of the Asia Minor and Euphrates Railway may be crowned with success.

To H.E. the Right Hon. Sir Henry G. Elliot, G.C.B., British Ambassador at Constantinople.

London, Oct. 25, 1870.

Your Excellency,—In consequence of a conversation I have had with Mr. Walpole since his return from Constantinople, I think well to repeat the assurance he made to your Excellency that my ambition and object in the concession I seek is to join in one iron bond India and England, by completing, as our share of the task, the railway from Constantinople to Bussorah. Although for the past fifteen years I have advocated more particularly the construction of a railway from the Mediterranean to the head of the Persian Gulf, it has been with the ultimate view that this great section, although complete in itself, should facilitate the construction of, and eventually merge in, the Grand Railway from Constantinople through Asia Minor and the Valley of the Euphrates to Bussorah, at the head of the Persian Gulf; to be continued hereafter by the seaboard of the Gulf to Kurrachee, the port of the Indus on the Arabian Sea.

At Kurrachee the railway I have indicated would form a junction with the lines and the flotilla of the Scinde, Punjab and Delhi Railway, of which I am Chairman, and would thus be in steam communication with all parts of India.

In 1863, at the request of Musurus Pacha, I drew up and transmitted through his Excellency a plan in detail for the construction of railways in Turkey, advocating, amongst others, a railway from Belgrade to Bussorah.

I should much regret if any misapprehension as to the great scope of the design should have in any degree prevented your Excellency from giving a project, so important in every point of view to both England and Turkey, and so entitled to consideration from the character of the men who support the plan, that furtherance which might fairly be expected from your Excellency's influential and distinguished position.

I trust that the list of members of the Board, which I had the honour to submit in my last letter to your Excellency, is sufficient to show that the enterprise will be exclusively conducted by Englishmen.—I have the honour to be, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

W. P. ANDREW.

Scinde, Punjab and Delhi Railway Companies, Gresham House, Old Broad-street, London, 14th July, 1863.

Your Excellency,—Being well aware, from the friendly relations which it has been my good fortune to maintain with your Excellency for so many years, of your great and enlightened interest in all measures, having for their object the improvement and honour of the great empire you so worthily represent; and having studied and well-considered the plan of your Excellency for the construction of a grand trunk line of railway from Constantinople to Belgrade and Bussorah by means of a loan contracted for in England on account of the Imperial Government, and for the execution of the works by contract with the most eminent contractors in England, engaged in similar undertakings, I have the honour to submit to your Excellency the following suggestions, and to request that you will confer upon me the additional honour of transmitting the same for the favourable consideration of the Sublime Porte.

2. In ancient, as well as in modern times, constructing roads was considered an important element of policy and power. One of the noblest characteristics of the Roman empire, and that which probably contributed beyond all others to the duration of its dominion, as well as to the beneficent influence the great political Colossus exercised over the ulterior destinies of the territories subjected to its sway, was its habit of constructing admirable highways, extending in every direction, from the capital to the most distant provinces; and the far-seeing wisdom of the policy which dictated such an expenditure of labour is universally acknowledged by modern statesmen.

3. The introduction into Turkey of a well-considered and extensive system of improved means of communication would, judging from the results obtained in other countries, tend more powerfully than any other measure that can be devised to promote the prosperity, the power, the social and commercial progress of his Imperial Majesty, the Sultan's dominions.

4. Your Excellency is aware that the special business of my life has been to promote to the utmost of my power improved means of communication in Eastern countries, and that I have arranged with the Government of her Britannic Majesty many contracts for this purpose; that I am, at this moment, as Chairman, conducting with success, in concert with Government, the several railways from Delhi along the route of the Indus to the Arabian Sea, and I do not therefore rashly or unadvisedly venture to bespeak attention on the present occasion.

5. I am also greatly encouraged in bringing forward views, the realisation of which, your Excellency has long had much at heart, by the knowledge of the exalted and benevolent sentiments of his Imperial Majesty, the Sultan, your august Sovereign, for the improvement of the rich and widely-extended dominions subject to his sceptre.

6. The attempts hitherto to introduce British capital and enterprise into Turkey have not been fortu- nate, from causes which are obvious, and may be easily guarded against.

7. Instead of, as heretofore, granting a concession to certain individuals, with a guarantee of a certain per centage from the revenues of the State without efficient control or supervision, either of the construction of the works, or the expenditure of the funds raised on the credit of the State, I would suggest:—

8. That a loan be raised, to be called the "Imperial Ottoman Public Works Loan."

9. That the capital thereby raised be lodged in the Bank of England to the credit of the Imperial Government.

10. That the loan so raised by the Ottoman Government be applied to the construction of a railway, proceeding from Constantinople, as from a common centre from which its western arm would extend 500 miles to Belgrade, while its eastern arm would stretch 1,300 miles to Bussorah, at the head of the Persian Gulf, with such branches and works as may be necessary.

11. The continuous line of railway that would thus be established of 1,800 miles in length, traversing at once the European and Asiatic dominions of the Sultan, and binding together with a band of iron the scattered elements of his power, would bring the frontiers of Servia and the distant shores of the Persian Gulf into close proximity to the seat of Imperial power on the Bosphorus, connecting the whole of Europe with the whole of Asia through Constantinople.

12. This railway would promote the development of the resources of the distant provinces of the empire, awake the dormant energies of secluded nations to a knowledge of the value of time, and to a participation in the innumerable benefits that have been conferred on other peoples, by the judicious application of modern science and skill.

13. While fresh lustre would be added to the reign of the Sultan, by the advance of his people in prosperity and happiness, the foundations of the Ottoman throne would be strengthened by such a display of power and beneficence.

14. Not only would the peaceful pursuits of agriculture, commerce, and general enlightenment be promoted, and the authority of the Sultan be immediately felt in the most remote corner of his magnificent dominions, but the military power and prestige of the Sovereign, whether in Europe or Asia, would be incalculably enhanced, by all the forces of the empire being promptly available on any emergency.

15. The Ottoman dominions would have the same means of advancement and strength as possessed by the leading nations of Europe; and the Sultan would hold in his own hands the ready means for their defence, and secure to Constantinople, the natural seat of empire, the great destiny which awaits her.

16. The railway from Belgrade to Bussorah would enable troops and munitions of war, passengers, and merchandise to be conveyed from Constantinople to Belgrade, and vice versa, in fifteen hours, and from Constantinople to Bussorah in fifty hours.

17. The portion of the line in Turkey-in-Europe runs through a country rich in mineral and agricultural resources, possessing a genial climate, a central and unrivalled position for future greatness, but with a half-developed trade, and a passenger-traffic limited only by the existing imperfect and expensive means of conveyance, and would bring Constantinople in railway connection with Vienna, Paris, and the other capitals of Europe.

18. While that portion of the line in Turkey-in-Asia runs half through rich countries, half through the most fertile valleys of the Euphrates and Tigris, but at this day uncultivated, with the Indian Ocean and the Black Sea at each extremity, and an easy communication with the Mediterranean in the middle, with labour procurable at all its termini, and carrying its own men, materials and iron.

N.B.—This would place Constantinople in regular communication with all the ports in Eastern Asia, steam vessels under subvention by the British Government,—already connecting Bussorah and the Persian Gulf with Kurrachee, Bombay, Calcutta and China.

19. The portals of the East being thus thrown open, the richest countries in the world would be added to the domain of the science and enterprise of the West, while at the same time to England would be given a new route to her Indian and Australian possessions, and an additional bond for identity of interests would be established between Turkey and England, and a fresh guarantee afforded for the peace of Europe.

20. This railway, once constructed, must be the great highway of nations between Europe and Asia, the great channel through which the tide of commerce and civilisation would never cease to flow.

21. That the first section be from Constantinople to Adrianople, which is estimated to be about 150 English miles in length.

22. That the Imperial Government appoint Commissioners, to be resident in London and Constantinople, who shall be responsible, in concert with his Excellency the Ambassador of the Sublime Porte in London, and with his Excellency the Minister of Public Works at Constantinople, for the strict application of the funds raised on account of the loan to the purposes for which they were raised, for the management of the railway and the proper distribution of the receipts, as well as the formation of a sinking fund. The contractors for the loan to have the power of appointing one or more members of the commission.

23. The loan to bear six per cent. interest, payable half-yearly at the Bank of England in sterling money.

24. The loan to be raised in distinct and separate issues for each section of about 150 English miles in length, from time to time as may be required. The Bonds to be drawn by lots every six months, of which due notice will be given, and in the usual manner paid off at par.

25. While the Government will thus construct by loans sections of the Grand Trunk Line from Belgrade to Bussorah, they will, in order to hasten the completion of this great undertaking, have the faculty to cede to companies such of the sections of the said Grand Trunk Line as they may judge expedient, but without the State guaranteeing a rate of interest upon the capital to be expended in the construction of the said sections.

26. The Commissioners of the Government will take every precaution for the secure and profitable working of the railway, making, if necessary, arrangements with competent European contractors, so that in management, economy, and working, it shall be as similar as possible in all respects to those in Europe.

27. The railway so constructed to be the property of Government,—two per cent. being set apart yearly for the formation of a sinking fund for the extinction of the loan; but in the meantime, and until final repayment of the loan, the railway shall constitute a material guarantee, and be held as a pledge by the Commissioners.

28. The excess of the profits of any section of the railway so constructed after payment of the interest and making provision for the sinking fund for that section, is to be applied to the payment of the interest and the formation of sinking funds for the issues of the loan contracted for other sections.

29. After the extinction of the loan for any one section, the revenues of that section to continue to be a guarantee for the payment of the interest and the formation of a sinking fund, for the liquidation of the issues of the loan required for the other sections.

30. After the extinction of the various issues of the loan from time to time the Government to be at liberty to dispose of the railway as they may think fit, as soon as proper provision has been made for a sinking fund, and the payment of interest on any of the issues of the loan for the sections which have not been discharged.

31. I have good reason to believe that should the Imperial Government grant the terms and conditions above suggested, the "Imperial Ottoman Public Works Loan" could be raised at least at the same price as that of 1862, the probability being in favour of a higher price.

32. The Sublime Porte, through the friendly intervention of her Majesty's Government, to appoint an eminent engineer to survey and report upon each section previous to receiving tenders for its construction. This survey would involve an expenditure of about £5,000.

33. The railway to be made gradually, and as many sections to be under construction at the same time as can be arranged for in a satisfactory manner.

34. The contract for the construction of the railway to be made in the name of the Turkish Government, either by a private arrangement or by competition with the most eminent contractors in England or France.

With Messrs. Peto and Betts, and Messrs. Brassey and Co. I have already been in communication on this subject.

35. I believe from my experience of similar works that the entire line from Belgrade to Bussorah may be constructed with a single line, with rolling-stock, telegraph, and with masonry works for a double line, on an average of £10,000 a mile.

36. From my connection with the route of the Indus I have no ordinary interest in the establishment through Turkey of a safe, certain, and rapid means of communication with India. The port of the Indus, Kurrachee, on the Arabian Sea, is the most western or European port of India, and would be the first to receive the advancing tide of commerce.

37. Being assured of the co-operation of the most eminent capitalists in England and France in raising the loan, and of the most experienced and successful contractors in constructing the works, I feel well convinced, if honoured with the confidence of the Sublime Porte, of being able to inaugurate and conduct to the satisfaction of the Government of his Imperial Majesty this great undertaking of paramount importance to Turkey, and so full of promise to the world at large.

38. In conclusion, I beg that your Excellency will receive the sincere expression of my acknowledgments for your uniform kindness and courtesy, and that,—I have the honour to be, with much respect, your Excellency's most obedient and humble servant,

W. P. ANDREW, Chairman,
Scinde, Punjab and Delhi Railways.
H.E. M. Musurus, Ambassador of the Sublime Porte.

Notices of Books.

[As the Editor is not responsible for the opinions of Reviewers, all contributed articles will bear a nom de plume, or initials.]

Rābīnsan Krūso. By Daniel Defoe. Translated from the Urdu into Persian by Sher Ali, of Kabul, and Edited in the Roman Character by T. W. H. Tolbort, Esq., B.C.S., Barrister-at-Law. London: W. H. Allen and Co. 1878.

This book is remarkable in one respect, it is the first Persian work ever published in the Roman character. Persian Ghazals, and such like, have been before now quoted in Roman characters; and the very useful Manual of Capt. Clarke gives all its Persian sentences in the Romanised form; but here we have before us an entire Persian work boldly put forth in ordinary Latin characters. The subject of the book also deserves remark. It is not a Persian classic. It is neither Firdusi, nor Nizami, nor Sa'adi, nor Jallal-ud-Din, nor Hafiz, nor Jami; it is our old friend Robinson Crusoe, or, in his new dress, Rābīnsan Krūso. And the reason is a sound one. Mr. Tolbort felt that specimens of the colloquial Indianised Persian would be of great advantage to British officers and others residing, or about to reside, in the North-West of India, or wishing to deal with the countries now rapidly being opened up in that direction. Classical Persian has been already very well illustrated, although critical editions of several old Persian works, well known by name, are still needed; but what has hitherto been completely ignored is, the vernacular forms of the language. Like every other thing in use, the Persian language of everyday life suffers from the exigencies of practical convenience, and thus, of necessity, it varies according to place and circumstance. Now it so happens that Afghanistan stands between Persia and India, and has been penetrated in most parts by traders from both sides; hence it follows that Kabuli Persian is a somewhat hybrid affair. Nevertheless it is of great practical importance, and far more useful to those concerned in the administration or trade those parts than is the pure idiom of Hāfiz.

Mr. Tolbort has not printed his book just as his munshī wrote it; on the contrary, he confesses to many and important corrections, for the purpose of toning down unnecessary uncouthness. The principle upon which he has made these amendments, however, seems an unsound one. He has modified and changed words, but has retained much of the irregular spelling, under the impression that it recorded a standard pronunciation, and because its alteration "would have necessitated innumerable petty changes in the manuscript." A precisely opposite principle seems preferable. After eliminating personal peculiarities, what remained might fairly have been considered the actual dialect, and this should have been given intact, but reduced to a standard orthography. Asiatics may be got to place upon paper customary forms of speech, but their ideas of orthoepy are of the vaguest.

Mr. Tolbort's system of transliteration is simple and plain, and is of the Jonesian type.

The chief use of books of this class is to illustrate the dialect in which they are written; and in this respect Mr. Tolbort's "Rābīnsan Krūso" will be found decidedly serviceable. As regards the rest, it is a tolerably close rendering of the English text, and by aid of the latter it can be read with ease by anyone wishing to learn this useful form of Persian.

THE LATE ROBBERIES ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

As the public are aware, during the autumn of 1878 and the subsequent period of distress, which resulted in an enormous flow of grain from Upper India to the Madras lines, grain robberies became so prevalent that the G. I. P. Railway Company has had to pay something like £90,000 as compensation to owners of the stolen property. It was alleged on behalf of the Railway Company that the robberies were the result of the carelessness of the railway police all along the line, and that as the railway police are under Government and outside of the control of the railway authorities, Government ought to be held responsible for at least a portion of the losses. Sir Richard Temple on the 12th March appointed a Commission of Inquiry, consisting of Mr. Arthur Crawford and, Major Wise, as the representatives of Government, and Mr. Conder traffic manager of the G. I. P. Railway, as the nominee of the Company. As the object of the Government of Bombay was presumably to give fair-play to the Company, and to assess at its true value the alleged negligence of the police, it does not appear that the constitution of the Commission was altogether fair, as it was pretty certain that in any differences of opinion the railway representative would be out-voted, and consequently the interests of the Company would suffer while those of Government would be proportionally promoted.

In the month of May the Commission returned two reports, and on the 31st July it presented its final report to Government. On the same day Sir Richard Temple sat down and wrote a Minute on all the reports. Perhaps this haste, striking as it may look as an effort of prompt genius, accounts for the unsatisfactory way in which many important questions are treated in the Minute. Sir Richard says that in his opinion the result of the investigations of the Commission proved that, after making allowances for a considerable accession of ordinary robbery from the outside by reason of the scarcity, and for the shortcomings or misconduct of the police railway subordinate officials were concerned in the robberies either as principals or accessories, and the larger part of the robberies arose from the interior management of the Railway Company itself. Extensive frauds are indeed found to have been organised in the office of the Goods Superintendent at the headquarters of the Company in Bombay." Of this statement the public have no proof. Mr. Dewey, goods manager, has been prosecuted apparently on the strength of the allegations made by the Commission, upon which Sir Richard Temple relied when he made this statement, yet the only results of these prosecutions were that Mr. Dewey was acquitted by a jury in the High Court; that the Government lawyers were compelled to withdraw the charges they had made against Mr. Dewey; and that at the present moment Mr. Dewey is prosecuting the witnesses upon whom the Commission depended for proving those statements which Sir Richard Temple has accepted without reserve. Captain Babington, we are told, has been removed from his office as Superintendent of the Railway Police, and a better officer appointed in his place. Forty policemen have been convicted and punished judiciously for being concerned in the grain robberies, and other members of the force have been or are being removed. These rigorous steps regarding the police are an acknowledgment that they were to a certain extent directly responsible for the robberies, and a question ought here to arise as to what proportion of the compensation money the Company is entitled to have returned to it by the Bombay Government. Though Sir Richard Temple subsequently argues in a way which shows that he does not intend to let the Company have any compensation, doubtless the question will be agitated by the English directors, to whom Mr. Barnett, the Agent, has now gone with all the papers on the subject. A great point is made of the fact that 266 of the Company's servants have been successfully prosecuted; but after the Dewey and Bedford cases, who is to say that these 266 convictions were just? Dewey and Bedford were in a position to engage lawyers for their defence, and thus to break down the evidence that was led against them; but we should like to know how many of these 266 persons were equally favourably situated? It is impossible to avoid asking these questions when we remember what took place in Sholapore and in the Girgaum Police Court; 1,441 outside persons were convicted for being concerned in the robberies. This is certainly a large number, but the question occurs whether, at a time when the ordinary staff of the Railway Company was confessedly overworked, the robberies committed by many of these persons might not have been altogether prevented if the police system had not been so thoroughly defective as it was. Sir Richard Temple's reference to "the two Europeans who were acquitted" strikes us as being both ungenerous and in bad taste. Notwithstanding that they were acquitted, he refuses to accept either the judgment of the judge at Sholapore or the verdict of the jury of the High Court. "I think," he says, "there was much reason for entertaining the gravest suspicion regarding them. The Commission entertained no doubt as to their guilt upon a large scale. The Agent does not intend to retain them in the service." This shows the bias that has been at work against Mr. Dewey and Mr. Bedford, and apparently the Bombay Government as incorporated in Sir Richard Temple is annoyed because it could not obtain the conviction of both of these persons. Sir Richard Temple says that the upper class of officials were to blame for the robberies in great part, otherwise the lower members of the railway service could not have had the opportunities they had for thieving. This may be true, but only in a small degree; for it is equally clear that if the Railway staff had not been overwhelmed with traffic of an unprecedented description, and if the police had done their duty, the G. I. P. R. Company would never have had to pay the enormous sum of £90,000 for grain robberies. The whole tone of this part of Sir Richard Temple's Minute conveys the impression that the Commission was appointed for the sole purpose of securing convictions, no matter how reckless the charges, so that a prima facie case might be established that the Government of Bombay with its police was in no way responsible for any of the grain robberies. Had Dewey and Bedford been convicted, there would then have been some reason for suspecting that the whole Traffic Department was a mass of fraudulent schemes. In fact, Dewey and Bedford were meant to be made scapegoats for the defects of the police and the purpose of saving the pockets of the Bombay Government; that appears to be the secret of the prosecutions to which they were exposed.—Bombay Gazette.

STATION TALK.

ALLAHABAD, Aug. 24.—I regret to have to inform you that his Honour the Lieut.-Governor does not concur with the Judges of the High Court, North-West Provinces, as to the advantage of moving the Court for the "season" (that is eight months in each year) to Nynee Tal. He considers that the disadvantages of such a measure far outweigh the advantages, but, if the Court wish, he is quite willing to submit their proposal and his adverse opinion for the decision of the Government of India. I think this question is one of such great public interest that the correspondence ought to be left open to the Press. Allahabad may be a very good place, owing to railways and telegraphs, for the seat of Government, but it is not at all central for a High Court. Nynee Tal is, if anything, better situated as regards the more important of the districts of these provinces, and with extension of railway communication many objections which may now be made will be removed. I think the season at Nynee Tal next year might be granted as a tentative measure; all other provincial departments go up the hill, why should not the High Court? Everything considered, the High Court deserves some encouragement. Notwithstanding unfavourable seasons last year they reduced the amount of their pending appeals, &c., from 736 to 724; their income has increased from Rs. 72,036 to Rs. 97,277; the cost of Judges and establishment have been reduced from Rs. 3,50,420 to Rs. 3,44,859, and the net loss to Government has fallen from Rs. 2,78,384 to Rs. 247,581. Surely these facts ought to bear? I think the provinces would really benefit by moving the records of the High Court from Allahabad to Futtehgur, and allowing the Judges to sit for eight months at Nynee Tal and for four months in the year at Futtehgur. Of course there will be the objection of having to build a Court-house at Futtehgur. This would be counterbalanced by the saving of the costs of one of the two or three public buildings still urgently required at Allahabad, and for one of which arrangements were just being made. The Accountant-General cries out for more space; so do the Engineer offices; the Inspectors-General of Police and of Stamps and Excise had to move to Lucknow owing to want of accommodation at Allahabad, and the Commissioner of the Division, all the lower courts, and some other offices have still to be provided for.—Times of India.

SIMLA FINE ARTS EXHIBITION.—The annual Fine Arts Exhibition was opened by the Viceroy at Simla on Saturday. Various prizes were awarded.—Times Telegram.

SANITARY COMMISSIONER OF THE PUNJAB.—The officiating appointment of Sanitary Commissioner of the Punjab, vice Dr. Bellew, has been offered to Surgeon-Major Courtney, Civil Surgeon of Peshawur.

CIVILIANS.—On the 30th of June last 108 of the 615 civilians on the Bengal establishment were absent on furlough, or other leave. Of these seven were serving under the Government of India, forty-two in Bengal, forty in the North-West Provinces and Oudh, twelve in the Punjab, five in the Central Provinces, one in Burmah, and one in Assam.

THE LATE DR. GAYER.—The Friend of India publishes a document which has a melancholy interest. It is an address which the students of the Calcutta Medical College had intended to present to their late Professor of Surgery, whose death took place on the day preceding that fixed for the presentation. We can only quote their words:—"If your great abilities as a lecturer and a successful operator have entitled you to our respect, your goodness of heart and affability have gained our esteem and affection."

INTER-PROVINCIAL EMIGRATION.—The Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces has written a report on the result of the experiment in colonisation tried at Charwa in the Hoshungabad district. The experiment has ended in failure, which is ascribed chiefly to the repugnance with which the natives of India seem to regard inter-provincial emigration. The Secretary of State is of opinion that it will be impolitic to incur any further expenditure on schemes of this character.

THE HOMEOPATHS AND THE FACULTY.—The Senate of the Calcutta University, at their meeting on August 30, rejected Dr. Partridge's resolution against the appointment of Dr. Mohendra Lal Sarkar, the homeopathic physician, to the Faculty of Medicine, the amendment of Babu Rajendra Lal Mitra, that the resolution of the Faculty and Dr. Sarkar's letters be recorded, being carried by a majority of twenty to fifteen. The Englishman adds that the decision was received with applause. Several of the European members abstained from voting.

THE REV. JOHN ROBINSON.—We regret to announce the death of the Rev. John Robinson, the Bengali Translator to Government. This melancholy event took place on Thursday, the 28th ult., at Benares, whither, it is said, he had gone for the benefit of his health. Mr. Robinson, we are told, was a fellow-worker of the late John Clark Marshman in the Translation Department of the Government. As the recognised interpreter of the wants and aspirations of Bengali society, Mr. Robinson's place was a difficult and delicate one. The very length of his services shows that Government had confidence in him.—Mirror.

THE KASHMIR FAMINE.—The Kashmir authorities reckon that from five to seven thousand emigrants have left for British territory. Such emigration is not, however, looked on favourably by the Kashmir officials, who fear that the emigrants will not return. Those who have appeared in the Rawul Pindee, Jhelum, and Gujranwalla districts mostly belong to the classes which refuse to work, and prefer to steal or beg; and the relief works started for them in Rawul Pindee have had to be abandoned accordingly. Notwithstanding the partial failure of the rice crop in Kashmir, the maize is nearly ripe, and it is hoped that the distress will be very shortly considerably relieved.

KUMAON TEA.—The Kumaon correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says that this promises to be a very favourable season for tea, both in Kumaon and Garwal. The rain, after the first outset, when it was excessive in its fall, has been moderate in quantity, and, falling as a rule at night, followed by warmth and sunshine, has been very conducive to heavy flushes; so it is confidently expected that 1878 will in a great measure make amends for the unfavourable season of 1877. Black tea is still being made as a rule, the quantity of green tea made will not exceed 100,000 lbs. this season, whereas in former seasons it used to come up to nearly 500,000 lbs. Prices have fallen nearly 25 per cent.

AN EXPERIMENT IN TEA GROWING.—From our Toungoo correspondent we learnt that so long ago as 1876 the Assistant Commissioner of the Salween Hill Tracts, Mr. Hildebrand, tried the cultivation of tea in those hills. He looked upon the experiment as a failure, as there was no sign of any of the plants coming up. About the beginning of the year Mr. Parrott, the present Assistant Commissioner, discovered to his surprise that hundreds of tea plants were growing wild in the locality where Mr. Hildebrand had sown the seed. We trust to hear something more of this interesting experiment.—Rangoon Gazette.

THE CHOLERA AT LUCKNOW.—The Lucknow correspondent of the Pioneer writes on the 26th instant, "I am sorry to say cholera has broken out in cantonments, in the military prison, in the poor-houses, and on the relief works. The 13th Hussars have two troops out in camp, the 73rd has again had to send out two companies into camp, and the Artillery are also out under canvas. The prisoners from the military prison have been sent to the Alambagh enclosure. The Military prison is a high walled enclosure, surrounded by houses with still higher walls, so that never a breath of wind can blow through the cells. The drainage about these parts is not of the best. The place is badly situated in every way for a military prison. The proper locality for this prison is where the prisoners now are, and the sooner a military prison is erected on the site of the Alambagh the better for every one. Cholera, I hear, has also broken out amongst the troops at Fyzabad."

THE PLAGUE OF FISH.—The shoals of dead fish that have been floating down the Ganges and Jumna have greatly puzzled fishermen, opinions being divided as to the cause of so unusual an occurrence. A correspondent ingeniously suggests that the swarms of locusts which crossed the North-West Provinces some time ago may be answerable for the destruction of the fish. He instances the case of Nynee-Tal in 1863 or 1864, when a flight of locusts fell upon the lake. For several days after, many dead fish floated to the surface, and it was found that they had gorged themselves with the insects and had died miserably. Such a theory would scarcely apply to the two large rivers in which the destruction has taken place this year, as it is clearly established that the fish at first tried to leap out of the water, and were apparently escaping from some danger directly pursuing them. Large and small alike died, and those who have seen the enormous bodies floating down the Jumna and polluting its current are quite at a loss to account for the phenomenon. If the water was poisoned by any mineral deposit being washed down by the rains, or by being saturated with lime from its tributaries—another suggestion—it would be worth while to trace the matter to its source. Much disease, it is said, has been caused by natives eating the half-rotten fish they picked up on the river's banks.—Pioneer.

THE MAN-EATER AND GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.—According to a Naini Tal correspondent, Gurwhal tigers respect Government servants, at least are reported to do so. There is a man-eater about the Kumaon hills credited with the slaughter of nearly a hundred persons in the course of nearly ten years. The Conservator of Forests for years had had armies of men on the tiger's track, but the brute is cunning as he is malevolent. He ranges over an enormous extent of country, some 300 square miles it is estimated, and it is impossible to guess where he will turn up next. But he never attacks Government servants. By a curious coincidence none of his victims yet have been employes of the Sirkar. So the natives look on a chuprassie as a certain talisman. An officer in the Forest Department heard two of his people talking one evening when out in the jungles. One was asking where he was to cook his dinner. "Down there by the stream." "But that is so far off, I am afraid to go for fear of the tiger." "Bah! what are you thinking of; you are a Government servant." "But I haven't got a chuprass" "Well, never mind, I will get you a sirkarce lifafer." So the man comes into his master's tent, and on some pretence asks for an official envelope. The master gives it, curious to see the result, and fortified by the charm the other man cheerily goes down to the stream to cook his dinner, casting terror to the winds.—Pioneer.

FLOODS IN RUNGPORE.—The officiating magistrate of Rungpore has come to the conclusion that the injury caused by inundation has been much exaggerated. The general results of the inquiries that have been made are thus summed up:—"There is no doubt that the inundation was felt most on the chur of the Bhahmaputra, but all authorities who have personally and carefully inspected the place, one and all, absolutely concur in stating that there has been no loss of human life or loss of cattle, and that no houses have been washed away, so that the injury is entirely confined to the standing crops, which there consist of aous, paddy and jute. There is no doubt that much of the paddy, even under water, must have been recovered, as we learn that on the subsidence of the flood, which happily was not of long duration, the owners returned and reaped it as soon as possible. The loss is variously estimated; on some low churs, probably situated within the range of the current of Brahmaputra, very little crop could have been saved, but the general conjecture is that about eightannas has been probably lost over the immediately affected tract. This of course can only be conjecture. At the same time, we know for a fact that prices of coarse rice are the same as ruled before the flood. At present, prices are unusually dear, and dearer in Rungpore than towards the border of the affected tract; but the prices of the district are regulated by export, and we know that Calcutta, Dacca, and Assam are all indenting on this district. This of course benefits the ryot and goes some way to account for his peculiarly favourable and prosperous condition. We know as a fact that much of the Rungpore soil produces three crops in the year, and the churs give rubbee as well as aous, and the former may be considered the more valuable and paying crop. We know also for a fact that there is no distress anywhere. The landlords here dare not treat the ryot badly, as he will leave for other zemindaries. Rent is moderate, and the condition of the ryot such that labour, which is scarce and highly paid for, has to be almost entirely imported."

Madras.

MR. GORDON invested the Dowager Maharanee of Mysor with the Order of the Crown of India on the 26th ultimo. The ceremony was followed by a public dinner to the officers of the station.

ADMINISTRATIVE CHANGES.—A scheme is now before the Government of India, which, when carried out, will effect very important administrative changes in the Madras Presidency. The Board of Revenue is doomed, and there is to be an increase of collectorates, and commissioners are to be appointed to overlook the collectors. These changes have been for some time under contemplation, and probably it will not be long before they are carried out.

ARRIVAL OF THE "MALDA."—On Aug. 3rd the transport steamship Malda, 1,269 tons, Commander John Lung, arrived in Bombay Harbour from Cyprus, via Port Said and Suez, with 296 rank and file, H.M.'s 25th M.N.I., and the following officers:—Lieut.-Col. Osborne, Lieut. Hastings, Lieut. Burn, and Surgeon Harrison. This is the third and last detachment of the Madras N.I. The next vessel, H.M.S. Sinmoon, is expected about the 9th or 10th. She brings a large portion of the 9th Bombay N.I.

RETURN OF THE MADRAS INFANTRY.—On Monday, Sept. 2nd, the transports Canara and Madura, with the 25th Madras N.I., arrived in harbour from Cyprus. The Canara, Commander Sharp, brought 291 men and the following officers:—Colonel Giles, Major Gabbett, Major Cotton, Captain Stainforth, and Dr. Rikby. The Madura, Commander Smith, brought 289 rank and file of the 25th M.N.I. and the following officers:—Major C. Mackenzie, and Lieut. H. F. Cadell. The men on board the Canara will be landed early this morning, and will forthwith proceed to Madras by special train. The men on board the Madura will land to-morrow and proceed by special train to Madras. The men are all well and in good spirits.

BUCKINGHAM CANAL.—The following figures will give a good idea of what has been done on the Buckingham Canal. The whole length of the canal is 115½ miles, amount of earth excavated, in round numbers, 9,500,000 cubic yards. The average number of coolies for thirteen months, from the time work was commenced until the canal was declared open, was 32,000 per day. Reckoning from the best authorities that each cooly on an average supported three persons, we have the whole number actually daily fed by the canal about 96,000. The greatest number on the canal at any one time when the famine was most severe was 61,200, giving the aggregate probably supported by it of 180,000.

GOOD-SERVICE PENSION.—It is announced in the Gazette of India that on the recommendation of the Government of India her Majesty's Government have been pleased to confer a good-service pension on Colonel Lewis William Buck, Madras Staff Corps, from the 30th April, 1878, in room of Major General W. G. Owen, Madras Infantry, succeeded to the colonel's allowance. Colonel Buck served with the expedition to China in 1857 and 1858, and was present at the capture of Canton in 1858 (medal and clasp); mentioned favourably in letter from Commander-in-Chief of China, dated Hong Kong, 10th February, 1858, to Commander-in-Chief, Madras; mentioned favourably in proceedings of Madras Government, dated 23rd May, 1865, No. 201.

BROKEN DOWN.—The criminal prosecution of Mr. Horden, who was brought down to Madras from Rangoon on a charge of having failed to account for fifteen thousand rupees entrusted to him to carry out famine relief operations in parts of the Cuddapah district, has fallen through, and he has been permitted to return to Rangoon. Famine accounts have evidently been very loosely kept in the district. In this case the authorities charge a subordinate with not being able to account satisfactorily for large sums of money entrusted to him, and bring him as a criminal from a distant country, charge him before the Magistrate, and then enter a nolle prosequi. The public funds must have to some extent been expended upon this prosecution; and will nobody be called upon to reimburse the Government?—Standard.

LOCAL BEER MANUFACTURE.—With a view of encouraging the local production of sound beer, the Madras Government have modified the rules relating thereto, so far as they operate in the opposite direction. To this end they have directed that in future, the employment of malt prepared from any grain should be permitted; that the present license fees should remain unaltered, but that the excise duty of four annas a gallon should be reduced to one anna, provided that the alcoholic strength does not exceed 6 per cent., and that the grant of licenses for the sale of country-brewed beer should be permitted at the discretion of the collectors, as in the case of imported beer. The Commissioner of the Nilgiris has been requested to inspect periodically the breweries in the Hills, and all collectors are to send occasionally to the chemical examiner, Madras, for analysis, specimens of country-made beer ordinarily offered for sale in their districts.—Friend of India.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.—The report on Public Instruction in Mysor for 1876-77 states there was a substantial increase in the number of pupils under instruction, contrary to the expectation which had been formed through the late famine which depopulated the villages and impoverished the ryots. At the Raja's High School games have been kept up with great spirit by the boys, and several good cricket matches have been played; at the High School, Shimoga, more than forty boys have either learned to swim or have "improved upon their clumsy native style," and at the school at Chikmagalur "one boy is said to have taken a high jump at 4ft. 10in." In the matriculation examination the Wesleyan Mission School, Bangalore, surpassed every institution in the province, having passed twenty-two pupils. At the close of the year there were 921 schools in connection with the department, containing 38,389 pupils; the Government expenditure amounted to Rs. 4,53,353; and the educational income from all schools, private or otherwise, to Rs. 2,22,735.—Times of India.

CONVERSIONS TO MAHOMMEDANISM.—A correspondent at Trichinopoly writes:—"About a week ago two European sailors, one an Irishman and the other a German, were sent to the Central Jail here to undergo imprisonment; they were sentenced by the Magistrate of Negapatnam for refusing to work on board their ships. On the termination of the said imprisonment, they were, of course, released from jail, when they proceeded direct to the Fort, had an interview with the Mahommedan kazee, expressed a desire to become converts to the Mahommedan faith, and were duly admitted. They are now considered real Mahommedans, after having submitted to the performance of the necessary rites. These men are to be seen daily in the town strutting about the streets in the garb of Arabs, much to the delight and exultation of the Mahommedan population, who contribute to the maintenance and support of the newly-converted men to their faith. One of these men is named Abdool Rhyman and the other Abdool Kurreeni."

THE FAMINE LICENSE.—The Madras Times says:—"A supplement to the Gazette, of many pages, has been issued, giving a list of the persons in Madras who are to be licensed under the new Act for famine prevention purposes. The lowest sum is Rs. 4, and the first name on the list is Veerasawmy Naick, dealer in rice and culinaries. Dealers in firewood, chunam, &c., are similarly assessed. So far we have glanced over the twenty pages devoted to the first division only. This yields certain results. Over Rs. 7,000 are expected from this quarter of the town. Five individuals or institutions are classed under No. 1, i.e., to pay Rs. 800; nine under class IX., Rs. 50; thirty-two, class X., Rs. 25; fifty-eight under class XI., Rs. 10; and two-hundred and eighty-one in class XII., Rs. 4. This may serve as a sample of the other divisions of the city. Meanwhile, consternation almost has fallen upon the tradesmen who thus find themselves "in the Gazette." Some are afraid these heavy exactions will bring them there in another sense. Trade in Madras is much depressed, and this weighty tax—"a vile tax" a correspondent calls it—will certainly not improve affairs. We fear there is trouble ahead in regard to this license-tax as there was about the Income-tax.—Times of India.

THE LATE REV. W. TAYLOR.—Mr. Taylor, whose decease was announced in our last issue, was born at Glasgow, Scotland, in the year 1796, and was thus upwards of eighty-two years of age at the time of his death. He came to Madras originally in the H.E.I. Company's Service, resigning his appointment, but returned to England and took holy orders. In 1826, having been engaged by the London Mission Society, he came to Madras, never again leaving India. The Rev. Mr. Taylor was well-known as one of the most distinguished Oriental scholars of the East India Company's period, possessing an extensive knowledge of most of the Indian languages, learned in Sanskrit, Greek, Hebrew, and Latin, and speaking several of the modern European languages. He took a prominent part in the establishment in 1847 of the Madras Polytechnic Institution. In 1834 he was employed by the Government of Madras to examine and report upon the Oriental Manuscripts deposited in the Government College Library, and produced in 1855 the Catalogue Raisonné of Oriental manuscripts, a fine work, in two volumes, forming an admirable book of reference in matters connected with the religion, antiquities and literature of Southern India. In 1838 he published an "Examination and Analysis of the Mackenzie Manuscripts." He was also the author of a "Handbook of Hindu Mythology, A Key to the Chronology of the Hindus," "Antiquities of Madura," "A Memoir of the First Century of the Earliest Protestant Mission to Madras and Madrasiana," an interesting account of the old buildings of Madras. He was one of the first members of the Madras Literary Society, and for many years editor of the Madras Journal of Literature and Science.—Madras Athenæum.

STATION TALK.

PUNA, Aug. 27.—I telegraphed to you yesterday the important news that the Viceroy has now given his sanction to the Cotton Frauds Bill passed last year by the Bombay Legislative Council. It will be remembered that this Bill was brought forward very reluctantly by Sir Philip Wodehouse's Government in obedience to instructions received from the Secretary of State. The Bombay Chamber of Commerce called a public meeting, which condemned the new Bill as, on the whole, a little worse than the old Act; and the Government of India concurred with the mercantile community of Bombay in thinking special legislation for the prevention of frauds in the cotton trade should cease. The Secretary of State, however, asked the Government of India to make a further reference to the Bombay Government on the subject; and, Sir Richard Temple having by this time succeeded Sir Philip Wodehouse, and Mr. Ashburner taken the place of Mr. Rogers, the local Government frankly turned its back upon itself, and, disregarding the opinions recorded by Sir Philip Wodehouse and his colleagues, affirmed that it was necessary, in the interest of trade, to maintain the Cotton Frauds Department. The Viceroy has, therefore, been obliged to give way and to sanction last year's Bill; and so Mr. Ravenscroft has, with the help of Sir Richard Temple, finally triumphed over his enemies. It might have been safely predicted that Sir Richard would take this course, for the quarrel was really one between officials and non-officials, and the present Governor of Bombay is the bitterest foe that non-officials have in India. The papers relating to what must now be called the new Cotton Frauds Act must, I suppose, soon be published, and then we shall see by what arguments Sir Richard supported a recommendation that Bombay merchants should not be allowed to manage their own business. The Governor's conduct in this matter is of evil augury for the consequences of the movement now going on for the purchase of the foreshore properties. Unless the working of the gigantic Government monopoly is controlled beforehand by regulations limiting the power of a Port Trust chiefly composed of officials to place heavy burdens on the trade of the port, Mr. Graham's prediction that the Chamber of Commerce would soon have cause to regret having advised the purchase of these properties is, I fear, likely to be realised. The negotiations between the Governments of India and Bombay for the transfer of Sindh from this Presidency to the control of a Governor-General's Agent are proceeding slowly. A final reference has been made to the Bombay Government regarding some disputed questions that still require adjustment; but it is considered improbable that all the necessary arrangements for the transfer can be completed till towards the close of the official year 1878-79. At the same time, the plan of compensating Bombay for the loss of Sindh by transferring the Central Provinces to this Presidency is under active discussion; and the two transfers will no doubt be effected simultaneously. As I have heard military men speculating as to the comparative merits of stations in Sindh and the Central Provinces, I may mention that it is not proposed to make any change in the present distribution of troops. Bombay regiments will continue to garrison Sind, while Madrassees will still occupy Kamptee and other stations in the Central Provinces. I must say that the decision to separate the areas of military from those of civil jurisdiction seems impolitic, and likely to be productive of inconvenience, unless, of course, it is intended as a first step towards bringing the forces of all three Presidencies under the immediate control of the Commander-in-Chief in India.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MR. GERARD NORMAN, C.S., the well-known Collector of Puna, will, it is said, shortly resign the service and retire to England. Mr. Moore from Sattara is spoken of as his successor.

MAJOR BABINGTON.—We learn that Major Babington, Superintendent G. I. P. R. Police, is appointed Superintendent of Police, Ahmednuggur, and Captain Wise succeeds Major Babington.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.—The Ootacamund paper states that the Bombay Government contemplates establishing an Agricultural College at Gunesh Khind, and that Mr. Robertson, of the Sydapet Experimental Farm, has been invited to give his opinion on the subject.

BHORE FORESTS.—His Highness the Punt Suchev of Bhore has asked the Bombay Government for a Conservator of Forests, on a salary of Rs. 400, to look after and make proper arrangements for the protection and improvement of the forests in his Highness's territory.

THE SIKKIM RAJAH.—It is said that the Sikkim Rajah will probably come as far as Dumsong to meet Sir Ashley Eden after his return from the Plains. The neighbouring potentate is somewhat troubled by Nepanlese immigrants and mahajuns, who give him much trouble in collecting the land rent, and the Rajah wants Sir Ashley Eden's advice and assistance in his troubles.

THE RAILWAY STRIKE.—With reference to a strike of the men employed in the B. B. and C. I. Railway Company's workshops at Parell, we are informed that the men accepted the condition laid down by the Company—viz., an extension, to operate from the 1st September, of the ordinary working time in a day's labour from seven hours to eight. The men returned to duty on this condition.

POLICE APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. Giertzen, the present Superintendent of Police, Puna District, has been, we understand, transferred to Kurrachee in that capacity, and Major H. S. Daniel is appointed to Puna from Ahmednuggur. Government could not have made a better selection for one of the principal stations in the Mofussil, and the public will hail the nomination with gratification.—Puna Observer.

PARSEE OFFICERS.—A correspondent at Malwa tells us that rain has fallen plentifully there, and that the prospects are good. He also mentions that the advice given by H. E. Sir R. Temple to Parsees to become soldiers has, in one instance at least, been acted upon, Mr. Mehrwanjee, son of a wealthy Parsee of Mhow, having, through the recommendation of General Sir H. D. Daly, obtained the post of commissioned native officer in the "Central India Horse." He has been gazetted as a jemadar of the corps.

THE GWALIOR ARMY.—A correspondent, writing from Gwalior to the Agra paper, says that the Maharajah has ceased to take that interest in his troops for which he was at one time distinguished. It is alleged that for the last two years his Highness has not been once on the parade ground, nor have his troops been drilled within that time. On the contrary, reductions have taken place in his military following, for six hundred horsemen were dismissed "some time ago." His Highness now occupies himself with revenue matters and the construction of roads.—Bombay Gazette.

OATH ON THE KORAN.—The Friend of India remarks that nothing has yet come out of the Surat trials of any interest beyond the technical question raised by Mr. Pheroze Shaw Mehta, the well-known Parsee barrister, whether a witness could be sworn upon the Koran. Some conversation passed between the judge and the counsel on the matter. Mr. Branson thought that in the instance cited by Mr. Mehta, and the only one apparently that could be called to mind wherein the demand had been made that a Mohammedan witness should take oath on the Koran, the man refused on account of conscientious scruples. The Koran was then offered to the witness in the present instance, but he refused to be sworn on it.

MEMBERS OF COUNCIL.—The following Bombay Government Gazette Extraordinary was issued on Saturday, August 31:—"His Excellency the Honourable the Governor of Bombay has been pleased to nominate the following gentlemen to be additional members of his Excellency's Council for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations only:—The Honourable Mackintosh Balfour; the Honourable Syed Hassan El Edroos, c.s.i.; Colonel Charles James Merriman, c.s.i.; Morarjee Goculdass, Esq.; Madhojirao, Zanrao alias Bapu Saheb Naik Nimbalkur, Esq., Chief of Phaltan."—Bombay Gazette.

NATIVE FOOTBALL.—The natives who, Parsees especially, have long taken kindly to cricket have adopted another of our Western games, and one which appears less suited to their national characteristics. On a recent Sunday evening some forty or fifty Hindus were engaged on the Esplanade, near the bandstand, playing at football according to the well-known Rugby rules. The game was not conducted exactly after the fashion of English football players; there was much less knocking down and tearing of clothes,—in fact, there were much less clothes to be torn, the competitors being clad for the most part in langooties (waist cloths) only, their legs, bodies arms and heads being entirely naked. They kicked the ball with their bare feet, and often kicked right well, too. A spirited game was played, lasting over an hour. There were no regulation goals, the object being, apparently, to kick the ball beyond certain boundary lines.—Bombay Gazette.

BOMBAY ELPHINSTONE HIGH SCHOOL.—We hear, says the Bombay Gazette, that at the Entrance Examination of the Elphinstone High School held in June about 140 candidates appeared, of whom half were admitted. There are altogether twenty-one classes in this school, and scholarships were given to those who obtained the greatest number of marks during last term, and at the terminal examination. These are tenable for six months. To gain a scholarship is generally considered praiseworthy, and at the English Universities those who are so fortunate are envied by their fellow-students who are the great majority; so in this case, where there are about 750 blanks and only twenty-one prizes, those students who win the latter are to be congratulated. The preliminary examination begins this week. Its object is to decide as to the students who have a fair chance of passing the Matriculation Examination. The fees collected last month amounted to Rs. 2,735.

TRANSFER OF SINDH.—The first effective step in the annexation of Sindh to the Punjab has been taken. The Rev. S. Stead, Acting Archdeacon and Commissary of Bombay, has officially informed the clergy in Sindh that "the Chaplains of the Bombay Presidency now serving in Sindh are in spiritual matters under the authority of the Bishop of Lahor," and that the control of contingent hills and Church and Cemetery establishments is now invested in the Archdeacon of the Diocese of Lahor. The date of this official communication is the 3rd of August; it effectually separates Sindh from the diocese of Bombay, and places it under that of Lahor. The annexation of the province of Sindh cannot be far distant. Every one in the province will be glad when the annexation is completed. Why there is any hesitation now is not apparent, but no one, we believe, in Sindh is able to explain the cause of delay. We hear that the Joint Chaplaincy of Kurrachee has been offered to one of the chaplains in the new Diocese of Lahor, to which we are now ecclesiastically attached.—Beacon.

THE CESSION TO HOLKAR.—The following are the facts of the cession of territory to Holkar, lately commented upon in the Indian Press as an indiscreet measure:—For many years his Highness has been discontented with the Khandeish boundary of his dominions. The strip of country which he coveted was rough and unproductive, a land of rocks and jungle, scantily inhabited by a few Bhils, and, from a fiscal point of view, utterly worthless. Accordingly, when the Queen was about to be proclaimed Empress, the cession of these rocks, jungles, and Bhils to Holkar was recommended as suitable to the occasion, and the Maharajah was told as much. Since then the consent of the Home Government has been obtained, the needful arrangements made, and the land is Holkar's. As the Under-Secretary of State for India told the House of Commons, "a readjustment of the boundary line of Maharajah Holkar's territory has been sanctioned, by which he obtains an extension of three hundred and fifty square miles of territory in Khandeish, and this act of grace is peculiarly gratifying to the Maharajah"—and, the Pioneer hopes, not too inconvenient to the Bhils.

THE INDIAN EXPEDITION.—RETURN OF THE GOORKHAS.—The s.s. Goa, 1,231 tons, Commander R. L. Turner, arrived in Bombay Harbour on Friday, August 30, having on board the left wing of the 2nd Goorkhas from Cyprus. The detachment consisted of 308 rank and file, and four commissioned officers, under the command of Major Ness. The Goa arrived in harbour about noon, and soon afterwards Captain Brelner, the Dock-master, went on board to make arrangements for the landing, and shortly before four o'clock the whole of the detachment was on its way to the Carnac Bunder. The men have enjoyed capital health during their trip to Malta, and they only seem disappointed at not having had a brush with the Russians. When they left they were armed with the Snider, but on their arrival in Malta they were given the Martini-Henry. The plucky little fellows seem very pleased with their new weapon, and some of them were proudly showing their rifles to old acquaintances who came to meet them on their arrival. They were also armed with their favourite koekree, although we do not suppose they would have found this weapon very useful to them in European warfare. The detachment left on Friday night by special train for Deolalee, and will eventually go to Dehra Doon, their head-quarters. —Times of India.

Ceylon.

METEOROLOGICAL THEFT.—The Galle correspondent of the Ceylon Times complains (Aug. 20) that the rain-gauge and a barometer had been stolen from the Master Attendant's residence, so that the meteorological reports from Galle would be very incomplete until they were recovered or replaced.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.—His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint James Peter Obeyasekara, Esq., to be an unofficial member of the Legislative Council of Ceylon; A. H. Duncan, Esq., of Rangalla estate, to be a Justice of the Peace for the Rangalla district; and the undermentioned gentlemen to be Deputy Coroners for the district of Dickoya:—H. Blacklaw, Esq., and J. D. Lambert, Esq.

STRANGE POISON.—The Badalla Correspondent says that another man is said to have been poisoned, and the nature of the poison is said to be an oil called by the natives cabbra. It is gravely asserted that all the poison of cobras, scorpions et hoc genus omne, are put into a jar and buried, and afterwards the oil is extracted by fire. This oil is said to be so deadly that a drop given in a betel, even if, as is said in this case, of the size of a pinhead, it is quite enough to cause death. The doctors believe the man to have died of poison, but the subtlety of the vegetable poison cannot be discovered or traced.

COLOMBO MEDICAL SCHOOL.—The distribution of prizes took place at the Ceylon Medical School on August 26, under the presidency of his Excellency Sir James Longden. The address of the principal medical officer, Dr. Kynsey, contained an acknowledgment of the foundation of a Medical Scholarship, which marked the interest taken in the school by the Governor. Allusion was also made to the loss sustained by the death of the late Principal, Dr. Noel, a bust of whom, presented by the students, was on this occasion placed in the school. A Noel memorial prize has also been founded by a subscription among the officers of the department, and the education of his children has been provided for by the people of Colombo. Dr. Kynsey in conclusion stated that in connection with the Civil Hospital of Colombo, which has lately undergone wonderful improvements, a training school for nurses had been established, and that the De Soyra Lying-in Home would be at once commenced, and that he hoped to establish a school of midwifery. Sir James Longden, after handing the prizes to the successful students, addressed some kindly words of encouragement to them, and especially recommended them to study the botany of the country, as their researches in this direction might result in some valuable discoveries and additions to the pharmacopœia.

THE CROPS.—The Ceylon Times of Aug. 27 is of opinion that the amount of the coffee exports for the season 1877-78 will slightly, and but slightly, "exceed 600,000 cwts., there is no doubt; for at the present moment but 9,000 cwts. are required to make up the above quantity." How much more of the Ouhah crop might have been shipped had the coming season in Colombo been of a less exceptional character it is useless to speculate. The crops from that quarter have not been so large as at one time expected, but they are tolerably forward; a good deal has already reached Colombo, and all that is needed for their despatch is fine weather. It is fortunate for growers of coffee that much of the heavy and continuous rainfall in the maritime country does not reach the planting districts, where the weather is reported changeable, showers being interspersed with sunshine. In one or two of the lower districts, especially where the wind has been felt, some crops may have suffered, but not to any extent. In the more elevated and distant localities, again, the weather has proved decidedly unfavourable to growing coffee, and we hear that in such situations mischief has been occasioned to some extent. We fear the effect of the continuous rainy weather on native crops in the low country will be most unfavourable. Low-lying lands have now been so long submerged that the young paddy has died out, and in many places all hopes of reaping even the smallest crop have disappeared. On such lands as are fortunately beyond the reach of flood waters the growth of the grain has been excellent; but even in such localities it is now feared that unless fine weather shortly sets in the yield will be exceedingly small and poor in quality.

AMONG the obituary announcements in the Bombay Gazette we read:—"At Sholapore, Mr. William Unger, Band Master and Pensioned Line Sergeant, Bombay Army, aged 105 years. Madras papers, please copy."

GOLD IN WYNAAD.—The gold industry in Wynaad, unless some great change takes place in the mode of working, seems, like the iron industry in Bengal, destined to die out. Of the three companies that have tried their hand on the reefs—the Alpha, the Wynaad Prospecting, and the Prince of Wales—only one seems to have even a qualified success. The capital of the three companies, says a note in the "Records of the Geological Survey of India," "has been expended on what must be considered mere scratchings below grass, from which, of course, it was always possible that local rich finds might have been secured; as it is, no rich shoot of gold was struck until very lately, or until the capital and patience of the pioneer explorers was to all appearance worn out. It is evident, however, from the latest reports of the working of the Prince of Wales' Company, that a rich vein has at length been struck, which may in its continued development fulfil all the promise of this new gold field."—Bombay Gazette.

A STORY FROM KASHGAR.—Mirza Mulla Rahmat, of Kashgar, who arrived at Peshawar lately, on his way to Mecca, has told what he knows about events in Kashgar. The following is his story:—In the month of Jamadi-us-sani 1294 (June-July 1877), that Mahammed Yakub Khan, the Badshah of Kashgar, collected a large army to fight the Chinese. He died near the town of Balisan, and his army then recognised Hakim Khan Torah as his successor. The mullahs in Kashgar in the mean time appointed Beg Kuli Beg, Yacoub's eldest son, as their Badshah, according to Yacoub's will. Hakim Khan and the army which joined him then came to Aksu, where Beg Kuli Beg also arrived, meaning to capture the place and the person of the usurper. A battle was fought between Kuli Beg and Hakim Khan on the 26th and 27th of Rajab (27th and 28th July, 1877), and Hakim Khan was defeated. Many of the soldiers belonging to Hakim Khan's force fell in the battle, and many others were starved, and some were drowned crossing a river. Hakim Khan then went into Russian territory with 1,000 chosen soldiers. Beg Kuli Beg now seized several towns and returned to Kashgar. In the meantime Naiz Hakim Beg, the Governor of Khotan, rebelled, and Kuli Beg met him in the field, and captured Khotan. The Beg was scarcely a week at that place when he heard that the Chinese had arrived at Aksu and had taken it. An officer of the Chinese army who had turned Muhammadan (but subsequently recanted) attacked Yangi Shaihr, the capital, and capturing it shut himself up there. The town was then besieged by the Governor of Kashgar, and the siege continued for fifty days. Then Kuli Beg came up, and forcing his entry into the town took possession of it, and destroyed the fort. But on the 10th of Zilhij (16th of December) a strong Chinese force entered the country, and rapidly reconquered the possessions of the late Yakub Khan. Beg Kuli Beg then fled with his men to Tashkand, which he reached by the Mangzul Oshand Marghilan, and put himself under the protection of the Russian Governor there. Mulla Zunis Jan, the Governor of Yarkand, and his son and brother fell into the hands of Hasan Jan Bai, Ikskal. I left Khokand on the 20th of Rabi-us-sani 1295 (24th April, 1878), and came to Kabul via Khojand, Sarmarkand, Shaihr-i-Sabz, Sherabad and Afghanistan, and heard no reports of the assemblage of a Russian army, which it is said meant to cross the river Hamun, and proceeded towards Karshi. But there was a force of some strength from Ovgand, and it was asserted that it apprehended an attack at any moment by the people of Khokand and its dependencies and the Uzbeks. There are no fears of the Russians coming towards Karshi, as they are not so powerful as to attempt this.—Pioneer.

CHILD MARRIAGE.—The following resolution was passed on the 17th August at a crowded meeting of the Students' Association of Calcutta:—"That in the interests of students, and with a view to promote their welfare both as students and as men, the meeting resolves to organise a united movement amongst students to put down the pernicious custom of child marriage, and that the Committee of the Students' Association be empowered to take the necessary steps to carry on the movement."

Home.

INDIA OFFICE, Sept. 16.—Her Majesty has been pleased to approve the resignation of the service of the undermentioned officer :—Lieut. Col. G. V. Fosbery, v.c.

JOWAKI MEDAL.—A Royal Warrant will, it is understood, shortly be issued authorising a decoration being given to the troops who were engaged in the late South African and Jowaki campaigns.

A ROYAL WARRANT will, it is understood, be shortly issued authorising a decoration being given to the troops who were engaged in the late South African and Jowaki campaign.

OXFORD MILITARY COLLEGE.—The Right Hon. Lord Waveney, F.R.S., has intimated his intention of giving a sword annually, at the Oxford Military College, as a prize for horsemanship and sword exercise.

PARIS EXHIBITION.—We are glad to learn that among the awards made at the Paris Exposition Universelle the gold medal has been awarded to Messrs. F. and C. Osler, of London and Birmingham, for their exhibits in glass.

THE MAHARAJAH OF JOHORE.—The Maharajah of Johore, G.C.M.G., after a stay of three months in this country, has left for France, en route to Singapore. Among his suite are his nephew and the son of one of his chiefs, who have been six years in England for their education.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—At the general meeting of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, on 16th proximo, the directors will recommend an interim dividend for the half year ended June 29 last, at the rate of six per cent. per annum, free of income-tax.

THE WOODROW MEMORIAL.—The Secretary of State for India, through Sir Louis Mallet, has allowed the marble bust of the late Mr. Henry Woodrow, subscribed for by the natives of Bengal and others, to be placed in one of the Committee Rooms at the India-office, for a short time before it is sent to Calcutta. In addition to the bust, the natives of Bengal have subscribed funds sufficient to found at the University of Calcutta a scholarship in commemoration of Mr. Woodrow's services, and to be called "The Woodrow Scholarship."

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday for £350,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted were: to Calcutta £250,000, and to Bombay £100,000. Tenders on Calcutta at 1s. 7½d. will receive about 8 per cent., above in full; those on Bombay at that price about 29 per cent. These rates show an advance of 3-16 for the Calcutta, and ½ for the Bombay drafts; but the movement appears to be speculative, based upon the assumption that, should the Afghan difficulty not be settled, the Indian Government will want all its available funds, and that therefore the Council bills may be reduced, or may even, for a time, cease altogether.

THE ORIENTALIST CONGRESS.—An Oxford correspondent of the Times writes, September 24th, with reference to the reported illness of Mr. Sayce, that a letter from him of three days' later date, says:—"The shock of Professor Seager's death, combined with a chill occasioned by my having to go about half-dressed in the night air, made me feel too unwell to attend the close of the Congress on Wednesday. The consequence was that a report got abroad that poor Seager had died of cholera and that I was attacked by the same malady." He goes on to say that on the 20th he accompanied Professor Seager's body to Leghorn to make arrangements about its shipment to England, and speaks of going to Ravenna on the 23rd and returning home through the Dolomites, so his friends need be under no anxiety as to his present state of health.

CYPRUS, &c.—The Jumna (5), Indian troopship, Capt. C. Parsons, was to leave Portsmouth on Thursday (this day) with the 2nd Battalion of the 6th Foot for India. The Crocodile, Capt. F. P. Doughty, will sail on the 1st October with the 2nd Battalion of the 14th Foot and drafts. Commander Cameron, R.N., was a passenger on board the Orontes, which left Cork on Sunday last for Cyprus, whence, after a short delay, he will proceed to the Euphrates Valley, with the object of reporting on its practicability for railway communication. H.M.S. gunboat Ready, having completed her repairs, left Malta on the 24th inst. for India. The Central News learns that Mr. Charles Alfred Cookson, Consul at Alexandria and Judge of her Majesty's Chief Consular Court of Egypt, is about to be appointed Chief Justice and Attorney-General for Cyprus. He will also be the chief legal authority of the island.

POPULAR DELUSIONS ABOUT THE AFGHAN WAR.—A letter in the Pall Mall Gazette signed "C." thus comments on Lord Carnarvon's reported statement that a British "army" had been destroyed in Afghanistan. The "army" in question contained exactly one European battalion and a couple of batteries of European artillery, and amounted altogether, Europeans and natives, to what would, according to Continental ideas, make up an ordinary sized brigade. The troops which occupied Afghanistan, taken altogether, did not make up an "army," but only a single division of three brigades; and Elphinstone was not its commander-in-chief, but simply a major-general commanding a division. One of these brigades was destroyed, not in open fight, but under circumstances brought about by a combination of cowardice, indecision, and stupidity on the part of its leaders such as happily has never been exhibited by British officers either before or since. The other two brigades at Candahar and Jellalabad held their ground with perfect ease and small loss. The Afghan War did not end with the destruction of the Kabul brigade, or even with the subsequent defence of Jellalabad and Candahar. The country was reoccupied by our troops in the following summer, and all resistance put down. Never was there a more completely successful operation than Pollock's advance on Kabul—the "battles" on the road being in reality little more than insignificant skirmishes. The work was hard, but the fighting was slight, the whole loss sustained by Pollock's division from first to last hardly amounting to what might be looked for from an ordinary skirmish. We may all of us have our opinions as to the propriety of this or that policy; but at least let us stick to facts. When Mr. Baxter says that "there was nothing more terrible in the history of our Indian possessions than the results of the last campaign in that quarter of the world," he is talking sheer nonsense. Our last campaign in that quarter was an almost bloodless one, in which the enemy were driven from one position after another and the country reoccupied with almost ridiculous ease.

ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE, SANDHURST.—An examination for cadetships at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, will be held at the University of London, Burlington-gardens, W., on Monday, the 2nd December, and following days, the first day being devoted to the medical examination of the candidates. The subjects of examination, the limits of age, and other conditions will be those specified in the Regulations issued in 1876 and 1877. There will be 110 Cadetships to be competed for, of which ten will be for candidates for West India regiments. Twelve cadetships will also be offered for competition by University candidates, as provided for in paragraphs 21 and 22 of the Regulations. The successful competitors will be required to join the Royal Military College, as gentlemen cadets, on the 10th of February, 1879. Applications cannot be received unless made in strict accordance with paragraphs 13 and 14 of the Regulations. Such lieutenants of Militia duly nominated in 1878 for transfer to the Line as have not already qualified will be allowed an opportunity of passing the necessary examination on this occasion. Candidates who have been previously examined should forward with their applications a certificate of good conduct for the intervening period. Further information relative to the examination may be obtained from the "Military Secretary," Horse Guards.

INFANTRY VERSUS ARTILLERY.—At the Dumdum experiments, which were held in the early part of this year, a half-battery in action was represented by logs of wood on trestles, placed at proper intervals. The gunners—nine per gun—were represented by wooden targets, painted black, 4ft. high, and 20in. broad at the bottom, but narrow at the top to represent a man's head, which part was painted white. The gunners were supposed to be kneeling or standing in shallow pits which gave them partial cover. The limbers and teams were represented by targets 8ft. square, painted a neutral tint. To give an air of realism to the affair a heap of damp straw was lighted to windward of the half-battery, so that the smoke might, as it would in action, partially conceal the guns. The range was 1,500 yards, and the 48th and 54th Regiments each selected ten men to fire at the half-battery. The men were drawn up in single rank behind a low bank, and were allowed in independent firing to choose their own position. Thirteen lay down and seven knelt. The men aimed over the top of the back sight, which gave the requisite elevation for 1,500 yards. The result of the independent firing, each man firing ten cartridges, two hundred being fired by the whole body, was as follows:—Hits on the gunners, eight; on the limbers and teams, three; total hits, eleven. We are not told how many, if any, of the gunners were hit more than once; it is believed, however, that nearly one-third of the twenty-seven gunners were disabled. A shower of rain had fallen a short time before the commencement of the experiment; thus it was impossible for the infantry to correct their aim and elevation by observing where there bullets knocked up the dust. In the volley firing, each section of ten men fired alternately, two-hundred cartridges being expended. The result of the volley firing was as follows:—Hits on gunners, twenty-eight; hits on limbers and teams, sixteen; total, forty-four.—Times.

NATAL EMIGRATION.—The report for 1877 of the Protector of Immigrants at Natal describes a happy condition of things in that colony for the Indian emigrants. There were some 2,200 landed from Calcutta and Madras in the course of the year. Madras sent rather more than half of the number, and it was noticed as a special feature that many of the Madras emigrants were men who had been to the colony before. This is not usually considered an advantage, so far as the employer is concerned, but satisfaction with colonial means of livelihood is at least indicated on the part of the man returning. The Protector, Major Graves, states that from his own experience he is satisfied the Colony of Natal is in every way better fitted for Indian settlers than the West Indies, and makes this, as we think, valuable suggestion:—"If any desire is felt here, as in the West Indies, that colonisation should be the sequence of Indian immigration, I feel sure that much might be effected by the offer to time-expired immigrants of grants of land or sums of money in lieu of their returning passages." It would seem that many of the time-expired immigrants have managed to settle themselves. The names of several are mentioned who have established themselves as shop-keepers, and there are about fifty on the Burgess roll as rate-payers. All the fishing, and nearly all the market-gardening, and hawking of fruit and vegetables are in the hands of Indians, while the following extract from the 'Planters' Column' of the Natal Mercury of the 3rd November last will show the importance to the Colony of the class of small cultivators which has sprung up in Victoria County:—"The young corn is well above ground and looking very healthy. Indian cultivators are gradually extending their cultivation of this product in all parts of the division. Their small holdings dotted over the whole county, and forming in the aggregate a very considerable acreage, are a marked feature in the agriculture of this portion of the colony. In contrast with their ill-fated brethren in Madras, their position seems one of affluence. We notice that they are learning wisdom by experience, and instead of, as at first, employing Kaffirs to do the work whilst they watched the workers, they now, with the aid of their wives and families, do the work themselves, only getting assistance during the busiest season. The holdings vary from five to fifteen acres, seldom larger; rents vary also from 25s. to 15s. per acre per annum, generally paid in advance. Besides maize, these men cultivate beans, tobacco and vegetables. The tobacco (rough-dried) is sold readily to Kaffirs at 1s. to 1s. 6d. per lb. In illustration of the desire these men have to acquire land, we heard the other day of an Indian purchasing his five-acre holding for £100.—Friend of India.

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a deliciously-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See Article in the Civil Service Gazette.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1878.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, September 13; Madras and Allahabad, September 11; Calcutta, September 10.

THE reports on the season and prospects for the week ending the 3rd September, 1878, are as follows:—Good rain has fallen in all districts of Madras, and general prospects continue favourable; in Kistna the upland crops are recovering from the damage done by the recent excessive rain. The total number on works is 102,006, and gratuitously relieved 62,402, less by 7,468 and 5,067 than previous week; 984 tons of grain exported during week ending Aug. 31. Excellent general rain is reported from Mysor; prospects are good, and prices are falling; for the week ending the 24th ultimo the total number on works was 31,129 and gratuitously relieved 13,199, less by 1,506 and 28 than in the previous week. In the Bombay Presidency the rainfall has moderated during the week, and the break has done much good; no rain has fallen in Sind, where the floods are decreasing; prospects are generally favourable. A break has also set in in the Central Provinces, though heavy showers are reported from some districts; prospects are good. A beneficial break is reported from Berar. In Central India excessive rain appears to continue in parts of Malwa, to the injury of the autumn crops; in Gwalior prospects have much improved, but in Bundelkhand more rain is still required. In Rajputana the rainfall of the week has been generally light, and prospects are favourable. Abundant rain is reported from all parts of Bengal and Behar, except the extreme Eastern districts, Howrah and Hooghly, and Orissa; the crops are generally very promising. In Assam there has been good rain; some injury has been done by floods in Sylhet, but prospects are generally favourable. There has been a general deficiency of rain in Burmah and in Myanong, Prome, and Thayetmyo the state of the crops is bad; elsewhere prospects are generally fair, but more rain is wanted, especially in the Tenasserim division (the latest reports announce heavy rain at Akyab and good rain at Rangoon). In the North Western Provinces and Oudh there has been general and abundant rain; prospects are good and prices falling. In the Punjab abundant rain is reported from Delhi, Hissar, and Umballa; none has fallen at Jullundur, Lahor, or Amritsar; prospects are good and prices are falling throughout the Province.

THE week's return from the Provinces as to the public health report fever general, but mild, in Hyderabad and in Upper Sind frontier. In Khandesh, 359 cases of cholera, 193 fatal. Cholera in seven talukas in Konkan; in Puna and district, 49 deaths; 61 in Ahmednagar; in Katiwar, fever prevalent; in Baroda, health good; in Bengal generally, native health good, but fever prevalent in a few districts, and cholera diminishing. Cholera disappeared from Allahabad. Public health good in North West Provinces and Oudh, and generally so in Punjab. Central Provinces, in Nimar 103 deaths from cholera; in Wardha, 244, and general report cholera still prevalent. In British Burmah, cholera ceased in Akyab town, but continued in a sporadic form in portions of Akyab and Kyaukphyoo. In Akyab season unusually unhealthy, fever of a very peculiar type very prevalent, combined with dropsical swellings of legs and feet; elsewhere general health good. In Central India health good, though cholera flits about in Rajputana; cholera in Jodhpur, Tonk, and Ajmere; health improving slightly in Jodhpur Ulwur.

THE Jullundur correspondent of the Times of India writes, Sept. 5, that from the official report to Government it appears that the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway does not expect to have its line completely repaired before Nov. 1, no less than twelve bridges having been swept away. And as the Grand Trunk Road, which formerly offered an alternative route, has also been destroyed, the railway refuses to book goods beyond Jullundur at all, and no goods traffic will pass up the line till the elephant service, which the company is preparing, is organised. Lahore is also cut off from Kurrachee, owing to the floods in Sind, but the State Railway authorities promise that their line will be repaired in a fortnight, and then we are encouraged to hope that the lower section of the line will also be opened, and at last we shall have railway communication from Lahor to Kurrachee, with only the one break of the steam ferry at Rori.

It will be remembered that the preparation for the Mission included an entente cordiale with the Khyberees, who loyally fulfilled their engagements, and gave the Mission a safe escort as far as Ali Musjid, and for so doing were promised our protection in case Shere Ali should resent their taking our side and attack them. He is now reported to be advancing in considerable force, for the purpose of chastising these mountaineers. This, of course, throws the tribe into our arms, gives us the command of the pass, at least in a great measure, and secures by the tie of self-interest, the only one which will bind an Afghan, the friendship of this important tribe. This, while giving us a great strategical advantage, may be considered to completely annul any faint hope of reconciliation if, indeed, the tenour of the recent advices and the utterances of the Russian press, had left a lingering expectation that the Ameer might even now offer apologies and submission.

TELEGRAMS from India published yesterday morning state that the preparations for our advance on the Afghan frontier are being hastened on, and the Daily News published a despatch from Kussowlie that the movement will take place immediately. The Times telegram of 29th ult. states that the following regiments are under orders:—The 59th and 17th Queen's, the 60th Rifles, the 23rd Pioneers, a portion of the 10th Hussars, the 3rd Sind Horse, Jacob's Rifles, the 12th Punjab Cavalry, the Guides (Infantry), the 4th Goorkhas, the 29th Punjab Infantry, and two other regiments of Punjab Infantry; 7th battery, A Brigade; 11th battery, 9th Brigade, 7th company Sappers, E battery, 4th brigade, No. 3 Peshawur Mountain Battery, 32nd Pioneers, 5th company of Sappers, A battery, 4th Brigade, 11th battery, 11th Brigade, 5-11th, Royal Artillery, 9-11th, Royal Artillery, one garrison battery from Madras, on from Bombay, with siege train. These will be distributed among the three columns. The Government will make Lahore their headquarters for the coming winter, and will not return to Calcutta. The Foreign Office has received orders to form a camp at Lahore. This looks as if the Viceroy entertained no hopes of peace. The Broad Arrow of to-day says that, although Lieutenant-General Crawford Chamberlain, C.S.I., is pretty generally looked upon as destined for the appointment, he has not yet actually received the nomination, and in certain usually well-informed quarters his brother, General Sir Neville Chamberlain, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., is considered to stand a better chance of receiving the chief command. That General Sir Frederick Haines will take command in person of the expedition across the frontier may be considered very unlikely. Some of the principal appointments to the staff of the expeditionary army have already been settled. Major-General Frederick Sleigh Roberts, C.B., V.C., the new frontier commissioner, and late Quartermaster-General of the Bengal Army, will take command of the column at Kotah, and will have as his brigadiers Colonels U. Alexander Cobbe, of the 1st Battalion 17th Foot, and John Adams Tytler, C.B., V.C., Bengal Staff Corps, commandant of the 1st Goorkha Regiment; Colonel Hugh Henry Gough, C.B., V.C., Bengal Staff Corps, commandant of the 12th Bengal Cavalry, taking command of the cavalry brigade. Colonel Cobbe served as a volunteer before Delhi during the Mutiny, and is an officer with thirty-five years' service. Colonel Tytler has served under Sir Colin Campbell against the hill tribes on the Peshawur frontier, won his Victoria Cross for gallantry in a hand-to-hand fight in the Mutiny, and has served, moreover, in the Umbeylah, Hazara, and Looshai campaigns, obtaining mention in despatches on several occasions. Colonel Gough, the bearer of a name famous in the annals of Indian military history, is grandnephew of Lord Gough, and as brave a soldier as his hard-fighting ancestor. He served throughout the Indian Mutiny as adjutant of Hodson's Horse, was wounded at Delhi, again severely before Lucknow, has been mentioned on several occasions for "distinguished bravery," and won his Victoria Cross under circumstances of exceptional valour during the Mutiny. The headquarters staff of Major-General Roberts' column will consist of Major William Galbraith, 85th Foot, Assistant Adjutant-General; Major Henry Collett, Bengal Staff Corps, Assistant Quartermaster-General; and Lieut.-General Aeneas Perkins, Royal (late Bengal) Engineers, as Chief Engineer. The Quetta column, which will probably advance upon Candahar, will be commanded by Major-General Michael Biddulph, C.B., an artillery officer who served throughout the Crimean War, and who has for the last five years commanded the Rohilkund district. His brigadiers will be Colonel F. E. Appleyard, C.B., 85th Foot, and Colonel Thomas Nuttall, Bombay Staff Corps. The former officer served in the Burmese War with the 80th Regiment, and throughout the Crimean War with the Royal Fusiliers. Colonel Nuttall has been commandant of the Sind Frontier Force since December, 1873. He served with the Persian Expeditionary Force in 1857, commanded detachments of police in the Deccan and Concan against rebel Bheels, and served in the Abyssinian campaign as second-in-command of the Land Transport Corps, for which he received the brevet of lieutenant-colonel. Colonel Walter Fane, C.B., of the Madras Staff Corps, is named for the command of the cavalry brigade. He is one of the best-known cavalry officers in the Indian Army. Served from 1849 to 1857 in the Punjab Irregular Cavalry, and raised the regiment of irregular cavalry known as Fane's Horse for service in China, commanding it through the campaign of 1860. Major W. C. Wolseley, of the 1st Battalion 6th Foot will serve as assistant adjutant-general with Captain R. McGregor Stewart, Royal Artillery, as assistant quartermaster-general. Lieutenant-Colonel William Hichens, Royal (late Bengal) Engineers, will be chief engineer of the column. The reserve column will be commanded by Lieutenant-General Donald Stewart, C.B., who recently left England to resume command of the Lahore Division. His brigadiers will be Colonel Robert J. Hughes, 63rd Foot, and Colonel Richard Barter, Bengal Staff Corps, commandant 15th Native Infantry. Colonel John Hills, C.B., V.C., Royal Artillery, will serve as assistant adjutant-general to the reserve column, and Captain E. F. Chapman, Royal Artillery, as assistant quartermaster-general.

ACCORDING to the latest advices from Cabul, a portion of the Russian Embassy have proceeded thence to General Kaufman's headquarters on the Oxus.

THE reported abdication in favour of Prince Theebaw, of the King of Burma, has been speedily followed by his death. The courtesy of Mr. Cargill has favoured us with the quotation of a telegram received yesterday from Rangoon confirming the intelligence of the King's death, so that there can be no doubt that it is the case. Moung Luon, Prince Menglon-Mentha, was brought from a Buddhist monastery in 1853 to succeed to the throne vacated by the deposition of his half-brother, King Tharawadi, the insane tyrant, whose insolence caused the second Burmese war and the loss of the province of Pegu. Notwithstanding the shorn sovereignty, the titles of the late king were: "His most glorious and excellent Majesty, Lord of the Tshaddau, King of Elephants, Master of many White Elephants, Lord of the Mines of Gold, Silver, Rubies, Amber, and the Noble Serpentine, Sovereign of the Empires of Thuna-paranta and Tampadipa, and other great empires and countries, and of all the umbrella-wearing chiefs, the Supporter of Religion, the Sun-descended Monarch, Arbiter of Life, and Great King of Righteousness, King of Kings, and Possessor of Boundless Dominion and Supreme Wisdom." As a man he is described by General Fytche, "Doubtless one of the most enlightened monarchs that has ever sat on the Burmese throne. Polished in his manner, has considerable knowledge of the affairs of State, and the history and statistics of his own and other countries. In personal character he is amiable and kind, and, according to his light, religious." He is succeeded, we learn, without any opposition by his son, Prince Theebaw, whom he designated as his heir. The former Crown Prince, or Ieng She Meng, his brother, was murdered in 1866 by two of his nephews. Out of a family of 126 children born to the King by one chief queen, four lesser queens, and upwards of 200 handmaids, eighty-four were surviving in 1876. It is to be hoped that we shall not be called to interfere for the purpose of repressing rebellion or disputes as to the succession, which are the almost hereditary custom of the family of Alompra.

SUBJECT to the necessary sanction of the Home Government, Sir Henry Daly's term of office as agent to the Governor-General in Central India, which should have expired upon his receipt of colonel's allowances on the 1st instant, is to be prolonged for some few months.

MR. HUME, Secretary to Government in the Agricultural Department, is to be sent on a mission to Siam, to endeavour to make better arrangements for the future administration of the large timber tracts in the region of the Salween river, where outrages on the persons and property of British subjects continue to be committed. He will most likely leave India early in the autumn.

A PUBLIC meeting has been held in Calcutta to vote an address to the Right Honourable W. E. Gladstone for his advocacy in Parliament of the claims of the Vernacular Press to freedom of speech. The meeting was a purely native movement. In addition to this address the Bombay branch of the East Indian Association have addressed a letter of thanks to the right hon. gentleman.

WE understand that the Secretary of State has approved the instructions issued by the Government of India to the Famine Commission, but desires that the particular attention of the Commission may be drawn to the question, under what special circumstances aid should be refused to persons seeking labour-relief, whose position in life and outward appearance might justify the supposition that they were able wholly or partially to maintain themselves.

A LUCID exposition of the recent financial reforms as affecting the salt tax is given by the Pioneer, which argues that this tax, which has been described as crushing, is not an excessive burden. A duty of Rs.2.8 per maund is equal to one anna per seer. The recent investigations of the Madras Salt Commission show that in that Presidency, where the consumption of salt per head is said to be highest, it was 12.38lbs., or a trifle over six seers per annum. In many parts of India it is not more than 4 seers, and the general average consumption of taxed salt is not over 5 seers per head per annum. The duty, therefore, falls as a poll-tax varying from 4 to 6 annas per annum. This is collected by almost daily imperceptible instalments; it is the sole tax paid by masses of the people, except by the consumers of exciseable spirits, or drugs, or purchasers of dutiable imports. In the countries of Europe we find that the average annual incidence per head of the salt-tax in France exceeds one franc (say seven annas), in Germany rather more, in Austria and Hungary 92 kreutzers, or nearly a rupee, in Italy 2.91 lire, or say one rupee four annas. The people who pay these comparatively heavy salt taxes also pay many others. The taxation of the poor in British India can thus bear favourable comparison with that in many European countries, even taking into account the difference in wages.

THE growth of the municipal idea in the N.W. Provinces is well seen in the statistical table published a little while ago in the local Gazette. It exhibits the probable receipts of the municipalities for the current year, and the proposals for their expenditure. From it we learn that the number of municipalities is eighty. They embrace a total population of two millions and a quarter, and their gross annual income is nearly twenty lakhs. Some of the towns under the Act are insignificant little places, with little money to spend, and not much to spend it on. But in many the municipal revenues are sufficiently large to make the functions of the committees responsible and important. Benares has a population of 187,000, and an income of nearly two lakhs. Allahabad, with a population of 150,000, enjoys an income of Rs.1,86,000. Agra has nearly the same population, but a somewhat smaller income. These three municipalities constitute the first class. In the present survey Oudh is excluded, or Lucknow would find a place with the three great towns of the N.W. Provinces. The second order of municipalities includes such large and wealthy towns as Saharanpur (population 45,000), Meerut (population 51,000), Farukhabad (population 74,000), Bareilly (population 91,000), Mirzapur (population 77,000), Cawnpore (population 98,000). The rich division of Meerut alone contains twenty-five municipalities, with a joint population of nearly half a million.

EVIDENTLY the Indian Post Office expects to do a brisk business in post cards, which are to be introduced on the 1st of April next. An order has gone home for no less than forty millions of cards for inland purposes, bearing an embossed stamp of one quarter of an anna, and for one million of cards for overland use, stamped one and a half anna each. These latter will carry to all parts of the civilised world, except England via Brindisi, and countries served by that route: post cards by that route must bear an additional half anna ordinary stamp, their share of the cost of the express mail train through the Continent.

A QUESTION of importance to banks in India was recently referred for decision by the Board of Revenue, N.W. Province, to the High Court of Calcutta. It was whether the assignment of a policy of insurance by endorsement on the back of the instrument was liable to stamp duty. The judges (Garth, C.J., and Markby and Ainslie, J.J.) were not able to agree, however, on the proper answer to be returned, the Chief Justice holding that such a transfer was not liable to any stamp duty, while the other judges were of opinion that, although the transfer did not amount to a "conveyance of property," it was liable as a collateral instrument to the stamp duty of one rupee under schedule II. clause 20 of the General Stamp Act. The whole Court was unanimously of opinion, however, that a retransfers of a policy by endorsement was not chargeable with any stamp duty.

THE Government having ruled that appeals to the Collector against sales of land for arrears of revenue may be admitted, the standing orders of the Board of Revenue on the subject have been modified by the insertion of the words, "Provided that parties deeming themselves aggrieved by the sale or any proceeding in connection therewith may appeal to the Collector within thirty days from the day of sale, and the purchase shall be conditional on the final order in such appeal."

THE correspondent at Simla of the Civil and Military Gazette writes:—"A curious illustration of the march of Russian civilisation came under my observation the other day. A Cabul merchant—the bazaars are filled with traders of that ilk just now—offered a China tea service for sale, cups and saucers and teapot all complete, each piece having on the bottom the Russian Government stamp, to which the merchant pointed as attestation to its being genuine, and was astonished that no delight was shown at the fact of a Russian article having been presented for sale; he kept reiterating the fact of his wares being pure Russian, and that he had just brought them from Cabul. A short time ago there was Russian Samovar of plated metal exposed for sale in a Cashmere's shop in the bazaar, as well as other articles from Russia. These are trifles indeed, but somehow they impress one with a feeling that Russian influence is at work, and Russian articles of domestic use are being quietly brought into the market and puffed up as things either of value, interest, or of preference to British manufacture."

THE progress of speculative enterprise during the past year, according to the report of the Registrar, produced only twelve new companies, including one banking company, which was voluntarily wound-up within twelve months from its incorporation, ten mutual loan companies, and a literary society at Ootacamund. Seven of the loan companies were started by Hindoos, and three by Eurasians. The registered capital of all ten companies amounted to Rs.23,59,920. Three old companies, one being the Wynaad Prospecting Company, increased their capital by Rs.94,600, making the total for the year of Rs.24,52,520, which is eight lakhs more than the capital registered in 1876-77. Since the publication of the last report, six of the joint-stock companies in the list have ceased operations, while 72 companies and the literary society were working on 31st March last. Of these, 16 only are commercial, 54 are mutual loan, and 2 provident societies. Three companies have not a capital divided into shares. The capital of the remaining 69 is Rs.1,48,93,674.

THE accounts of the famine in Cashmere are described by a Rawul Pindi correspondent as growing worse daily. The people are said to be dying in thousands, and all who can do so are abandoning the country. The Maharajah is said to be earnestly endeavouring to relieve his people, but is not aided by his officials, who forced the holders of grain to sell their stores to them. The agents are negligent about importing supplies. The emigrants, to whom relief work was offered on the railway works, all ran away, preferring, it would seem, beggary to hard work.

THE London Gazette of the 1st inst. contained an order in Council making provision for the exercise of the power and jurisdiction vested by treaty in Her Majesty the Queen in and over the Island of Cyprus. The government is to be administered by a High Commissioner and Commander-in-Chief appointed by the Crown. He, with the advice of a Legislative Council, is to make all necessary laws and ordinances, subject to confirmation by the Crown, through one of the Principal Secretaries of State. The said Legislative Council shall consist of not less than four, nor more than eight persons, designated by the Crown, one-half, other than the High Commissioner, being official members or holders of offices in the island, and the other unofficial members or inhabitants of the island, who shall hold office for two years, subject to reappointment. Provision is made for the case of temporary absence or incapacity of members. Powers to make grants of lands, to appoint judges, justices of the peace, to exercise the prerogative of pardon, to suspend officials, &c., are conferred on the High Commissioner, who shall be advised by an Executive Council. During vacancy, the office of High Commissioner is to be vested in the senior military officer in command of Her Majesty's regular troops in the island.

A MALTA telegram of yesterday states that the last of the Indian contingent have left in the Lord of the Isles and the Scotland. Their departure is much regretted by all the inhabitants. The conduct of the men of the contingent during their stay in Malta has been worthy of the highest praise, both as soldiers and visitors. A correspondent writes that regret is generally expressed that the Home authorities did not decide to leave one Indian regiment as part of the garrison of the island.

INFORMATION has reached the War Office of the deaths of two officers on passage home from Cyprus, from which station they had been invalided—namely, Surgeon Major R. Menzies, second senior medical officer, and Commissary R. S. Price, second senior commissariat officer; and, according to the Broad Arrow, a letter received from Naples states that Brigadier General Watson, V.C., who commanded the cavalry of the Indian Expeditionary Force, is down with the Cyprus fever. He was on his way to England on leave of absence; but the fever increased to such an alarming degree that it was thought expedient that the gallant officer should land at Naples. Mrs. Watson is with her husband. The most recent telegram, however, received from Sir A. D. Home states that the sickness among the troops in Cyprus is nearly the same as before, but that the fresh cases are milder. Ague is stated to be common.

MESSRS. W. H. Allen and Co. announce for speedy publication, "Travels in Khorassan," with map, plans, and illustrations, by Colonel C. M. Macgregor, C.S.I., who is a well-known authority on all frontier questions. An auxiliary to the study of the Afghan question is promised in the form of a manual of Puk'hto, or Pu'shto, the language of the Afghans, by Major G. H. Raverty.

CYPRUS.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

NICOSIA, SEPT. 18.—Since I last wrote his Excellency Sir Garnet Wolseley has left headquarters on a tour round the island in H.M.S. Raleigh, his intention being to visit the various points likely to prove valuable in the development of the island and in its future government. We have already received accounts from Kyrinia, which announce his enthusiastic reception there by the inhabitants of that town, and this reception will no doubt prove an index of the rest. For there can be no questioning the feelings of relief and satisfaction with which both Greek and Turk have hailed the transfer of Cyprus to England. Their joy, however, seems easily and often disturbed by Rumour with her many tongues. The last canard is that the English rule is likely to be short-lived, and that Cyprus will once more come under the domination of the Turk. This, I found, had its origin in a telegram from Constantinople to Roufat Pasha, countermanning the order for the removal and shipment of Turkish cannon from the various towns. Considering that these, viewed in the light of modern artillery, are perhaps worth their price as old iron, if broken up, and that their removal would cost the Turkish Government about £20 a-piece by the time they reached Constantinople, the decision should have caused no surprise. Another matter that much disturbs the Cypriote mind is that passports are given to them as Turkish subjects. If, they say, we are under British rule, why should we not receive passports as British subjects? But the difficulty might easily be obviated if in their passports they were described as inhabitants of Cyprus. What especially strikes Turks, Greeks, and other natives of the place is the energy and activity of the British officials as compared with their Turkish predecessors. From the High Commissioner downwards there is an earnest endeavour to master every detail of the administration. The Commissioners and their assistants are in daily communication with the people, and personally inquire into their complaints and wants; at the same time they are doing whatever is at present possible to improve the sanitary condition of the towns and districts. The Temize, or High Court, is presided over by Mr. Cookson, an English barrister; whilst in the Lower Court is Mr. Seager, of the Royal Marines, and also a barrister-at-law. These gentlemen are assisted by Turkish and Greek assessors, and measures are now being adopted to reconstitute the Supreme and District Courts with original and appellant jurisdiction. Mr. Kellner has reviewed the accounts of Cyprus for the last five years, describing the several taxes, their yield and incidence in the past, and the prospects of the revenue in the current and next year. Arrangements have also been completed for the organisation of the Finance and Account offices, and for the audit and control of revenue and expenditure. The substitution of English for Turkish stamps has also been provided for, and the transition from English to Turkish accounts has been simplified by expedients which will overcome some of the difficulties presented by the confusion in which the Turkish currency is now involved. There will probably be a very large increase in the customs revenue of the island under British administration; but the tariff and other important matters connected therewith are under consideration and reference to England. Although the organisation of the police was for a time delayed by the illness, which subsequently, to the regret of every one, resulted in the resignation of Major Grant, it is now being rapidly pushed forward by his successor, Col. Brackenbury. The force will be recruited from the Greek and Turkish population equally, and it will receive personal superintendence in each district. Col. Brackenbury is at present away visiting the various stations that have been selected as local headquarters. After all, it seems that Nicosia is to be the capital, and certainly this arrangement would prove the most convenient for some time to come yet. We have everything to learn about the island, and a too hasty adoption of a site would be a mistake. The Commissioners appointed to inquire into the land question have finished their labours and handed in their report. Mr. Baring returns to Constantinople next week. Yesterday and to-day registered the first change in the weather. Rain and thunder, and atmosphere is much cooler. As I write a heavy storm is flashing and thundering. There is one grievance which we hope soon to see remedied here, and that is that letters leave England for Cyprus on the same day that the Cyprus mail arrives there, thus incurring a delay of six days before letters can be despatched here again. In Nicosia, although there is a good deal of fever, the general health is improving. Grave doubts are, however, entertained as to what will be its sanitary condition when the rains come and we are subjected to the trying seasons of autumn and spring. Drainage practically does not exist here, and this labyrinthine capital is not only built within far too narrow limits, but those limits are overcrowded. There are no hospitals or dispensaries for its 18,000 inhabitants, and native medical advice was, until a few days ago, to be obtained only of empirics. Now, however, the town can boast of one physician with a European diploma.

FROM PESHAWUR TO CABUL.

A BRIEF but interesting description of the Khyber route between Peshawur and Cabul is to be found in the following narrative of the march of a troop of Horse Artillery from Cabul to Peshawur in November, 1840, which has been placed at our disposal by Lieut. General Kaye:—

NOVEMBER 12, 1840.—From Cabul the road runs east to Boodkhak, a distance of about eight miles; but our camp was about three miles E.S.E. of the village, making the march eleven miles long. The road itself good, through an open country; the Pughman hills and some other smaller on the left and left rear; and on the right another small range, which extends from Cabul to the defile entered on second march. A great deal of cultivation on either side of the road, and many water-courses; these and the narrowness of the road (the fields being wet from irrigation and impassable) made it a bad march for camels. The Sogheer river was crossed by a stone bridge; this river flows into the Cabul river to the north of the road. "Boodh" signifies an image or idol; "Khak," ashes. Mahmood of Ghuzni buried an Indian idol here. Immediately south of encamping ground, a high rocky mountain. Rain on 12th; halted 13th.

14.—Khoord Kabul,  $8\frac{1}{2}$  miles.—Road led south through a defile between the rocky mountain just mentioned (the summit of which was capped with clouds), and another range extending to Cabul. After about four miles of defile (through which runs a small stream) road entered a tolerably open country and turned eastward. Encamped south of the cloud-capped mountain; some low hills in front, and in the distance snowy peaks. Hence the road crosses the Huft Kotul, a succession of low hills. Coming from Cabul the ascents were but slight; the descent somewhat steep, with a stony ravine which leads to the valley of Tezeen.

15.—Thirteen miles. Encamped north-west of Tezeen valley running north-east and south-west, about half a mile broad. Not much cultivation; south-east of camp, far distant, a snowy range thickly studded with pine trees. ("Sufaid Koh," I suppose.)

16.—Marched down the valley (which is stony and barren) about seven miles, and encamped at the Ziarut-eh-Baba near Burik-ab. Stony and bad encamping ground.

17.—From this ground the road turns from the valley into the low hills bounding it on the right, and leads eastward to Kuttar Sung, or Kotul Sung, where there is a heap of stones marking the grave of Meer Alhum, murdered by Futeh Khan Barukzye. (Hence the name of the place.) Near by is a village, or rather was, called Ispahan; here Shah Shoojah was defeated in battle. Hence the road leads more southward still across low, stony hills to Jugduluch, where we encamped near a small ziarut. The road very stony the whole march; several ascents and descents over the low hills, none of any consequence. After leaving Kotul Surg the road passed over some tolerably steep spurs, branching from the southward. From the Toda (heap of stones) there are two roads, one of which leads to the left through the Purridurrah defile (Fairies' dell), very narrow, close under a lofty hill running nearly due north and south. The advance guns under Mackenzie had gone this road, while the column with the main body of guns were went over the hills. Encamped at Jugduluch, a miserable small valley among the low hills. Distance, thirteen miles.

Soorkhab, twelve miles S.E.—Very little variety, still through the low hills, crossing some of them, and at other times winding among them or along dry stony nullahs—beds of rivulets. Encamped on the banks of the Soorkhab (red water), a rapid stream running from south to north. Valley narrow, northern hill apparently connected with that immediately east of the Purridurrah, high and steep, the others of less height and sloping more gently. A few fields here.

Gondoomuk, eight miles E.—Road much as usual, but rather less stony; still among or over the low spurs, branching from the southern hills. Encamped on an elevated table land, gradually sloping towards the north from the snowy mountains of Rajghul, which are here plainly visible, distant some eight miles, the lower slopes covered with forests of pine, and some of the smaller hills to their summits.

Neemla, six miles E.N.E.—Descended from the high ground, and crossed a rocky stream, then passed over another spur, again a rocky stream, whence the road ascends once more to some table land, and an easy descent led us into the valley of Neemla, lying north and south. Over the second rocky stream are the remains of a rather fine bridge of stone; there is one also across the Soorkhab in tolerable repair. The garden of Neemla, about a mile south of our ground, is a pretty spot. This place is the scene of another of Shah Shoojah's defeats.

Futehabad, twelve miles E.N.E.—Road again leads among the low hills, offshoots from the Rajghul; but at length gradually descends into an open valley running east and west. Encamped on cultivated ground. In front and to the right an extensive, well-cultivated valley; to our rear the low hills, which gradually rise upwards to the snowy range.

Sultanpore, seven miles.—Road good, occasionally stony or sandy; skirts the low hills; a fine valley on the left. Encamped on sand on the base of low hills.

November 24.—Jellalabad, ten miles.—A good road through the valley on its southern verge. The cantonment is formed with its left resting on the Cabul river, and its right on the low hills before mentioned. Beyond these hills to the south extends the range of Sufaid Koh or Kajghul, covered with snow some distance below its summit, the sharp, white peaks standing out in fine relief against the blue sky. The south bank of the river is sandy, but on the north there is a broad belt of cultivation, stretching many miles eastward. It is some four miles broad, bounded on the north by the Kooner range, the lower hills bare and rocky, but some of those more distant clothed with wood. To the north-west is a tolerably high peak, but I do not think it is a part of the Hindu-Koosh range. To the east are several low hills, and to the west the view is bounded by the broad belt of hills through which we have passed, and others more lofty beyond.

Dost Mahomed, the ex-Ameer, accompanied this column from Cabul to Peshawur. The brigade consisted of 4th troop, 3rd brig. H. A., 2nd Bengal Cavalry, 1st European L. I., and 48th N. I., and was commanded by Colonel H. M. Wheeler of the last regiment. Lieut. Peter Nicholson was in political charge of the ex-Ameer. There was a halt at Jellalabad to admit of the arrival of the Ameer's family. The march of the brigade was resumed in two detachments, the last of which left Jellalabad on 10th December, 1840.

A good road, running about east south-east, skirting the low sandy hills; encamped at Summurkhail, near Ali Boghan, at the base of an insulated ridge, east of camp, the Cabul river about a mile to the north. From a mound close to camp a beautiful and extensive view was obtained of the Jellalabad valley, well wooded, and sprinkled with numerous forts; beyond, the hills of Kooner rising one above the other, and, further still, a part of the Hindu-Koosh snowy range could be discerned; this is also to be seen from the Cabul road. A little west of the town of Jellalabad, south of camp, are low hills, and the Sufaid Koh in the distance. Distance, six and a-half miles.

From Ali Boghan the road leads south a short distance, passing round the ridge, bringing it to our left hand. After proceeding some few miles among low hills towards the rising sun we entered the Dusht of Butteecote, a wide stony plain, extending south towards the snowy range, and separated from the valley of the Cabul river by a chain of low rocky hills, which continue for about ten miles east of Ali Boghan. The road then again approaches the river Cabul and leads to Char Deh, where we encamped. The river about a mile to the north; to the east some rocky hills, among which the stream enters; and to the south an extensive plain (in which is situated the village of Butteecote) bounded by Rajghul; to the right the Dusht, and north of the river a fine well-cultivated valley. Several open villages near camp. Distance fourteen miles.

December 12.—Bursole, eight miles.—From Char Deh the road led south-east, skirting the rocky hills; after about five miles it bends to the east, passing between the hills, on emerging from which it enters a well-cultivated valley, again encountering the Cabul river, to the south of which we encamped, while south of us is a wide plain, dotted over with forts; east are several low chains; and north a steep, rocky hill, along the base of which the river flows. The Rajghul, as usual, bounds the view towards the south. Several walled villages and dismantled forts.

13.—Dukka, thirteen miles.—From Busoul (or Bursole) we proceeded over a hard plain (occasionally sandy), and between some low hills in an easterly direction, to Hazarnou, a large straggling village, situated at the base of a rocky elevation. The road then made a sharp bend to the north, skirting the high land closely, there being a broad sheet of cultivation on our left, impassable from its being flooded. After rounding the hill we again turned towards the east, a firm road, many eminences on either hand, and after a few miles we passed over a small ghaut at the junction of two hills, and entered the valley of Dukka. At the summit of one of these eminences a small watch-tower commanding the pass. Lakpoora, a large town on the north bank of the Cabul river, is situated at the foot of mountains rising to the north. Dukka is a small fort on the south bank; the valley is small, in no part more than three or three and a-half miles in diameter. The Sufaid Koh no longer visible; the Khyber range in our front.

14.—Luudikhaneh,  $8\frac{1}{2}$  miles.—We traversed for some two miles a stony plain and then entered the mouth of the Khyber Pass. Just before emerging among the hills the Sufaid Koh became again visible, but was soon shut out from view. The defile into which we entered was by no means narrow (never less than fifty yards in breadth), and the hills neither steep nor difficult, but at nearly every point accessible by infantry. After about two miles of defile the passage widened considerably to about 600 yards, and here in the centre we passed an isolated eminence, on the summit of which was a small fort or breastwork constructed of loose stones and garrisoned by a company of Jezailchees. After this the pass narrowed again. We ascended considerably, but the road was by no means difficult, though everywhere stony. Stunted trees and bushes throughout the defile. Encamped on uneven ground close to the foot of the ghaut, leading over the summit of the pass. Some cultivated land rising in terraces to the summit of the hill to the south, and some rude fortifications, now dilapidated, are to be seen on the same side of the defile. Looking back, the summits of many mountains visible to the north-west, the most distant partially covered with snow. This I imagine to be the Kooner peak. We travelled towards south-east to-day.

15.—From Luudikhaneh the road led up the side of the hill to the left, passing round two shoulders. The ascent not steep, but the road wound in and out, occasioned by various fissures or water channels in the face of the mountain. After rounding the second shoulder we descended gently into the bed of the stream, which was previously too confined and rocky to allow of guns passing. This was the case again occasionally, necessitating the road to pass over parts of the hill; the ascents on those occasions, though short and not very steep, difficult on account of awkward bends occurring at the very foot. Most of the carriages had to be unlimbered on this account, at three of the ascents. After about four miles we reached the summit of the pass, the hills receded right and left, and we entered on a broad extensive table land, sloping gently towards the east, well cultivated and sprinkled with forts, hills on all sides, but not very lofty, also a few insulated eminences. The plain sometimes stretched miles across, and here and there valleys branching off right or left. After about five miles the valley narrowed, and the descent became more sensible, and as we approached Ali Musjid we entered into a narrow defile, enclosed by precipitous rocks; this, however, only continued for about half a mile, when we passed close under the fort of Ali Musjid, and encamped about a mile lower down the glen. Distance marched to-day fourteen miles.

The Khyber hills and the defile through which we passed are tolerably well wooded, but the trees are stunted, indeed, scarce anything more than bushes. On the open land, at the most elevated part of the pass, there are many forts, and much cultivation also in the valleys branching off on either side, but the forts are the worst I have met with. They have only one tower each, and that very weak. The fort of Ali Musjid is better built and designed, but its strength consists in its situation, it being on the summit of a lofty hill, insulated and difficult of access, to the south-west of the road. The musjid, or mosque, is in the valley below. Immediately after passing Ali Musjid the hills decrease in altitude and steepness. Our direction of march tortuous to-day, but generally south-east.

16.—Jumrood, seven miles.—From our last ground we ascended the hillside on our left by a steep tortuous road; there was another road to the left, but we did not know of it, exceedingly easy, so we pulled the guns up the ascent; after which we proceeded for some distance over undulating ground, an elevated table land, and passed over one narrow defile by a well-built bridge. We then descended into the bed of a stream by a good road cut in the side of the hill. The remainder of the march lay through low hills until we debouched into the plain near Jumrood. There is another road which continues in the defile, without ascending the hillsides, but it is very circuitous.

I may as well mention here, in explanation of our finding the passage of the Khyber so free from difficulty, that Major Mackeson had just caused an excellent road to be cut through the pass, and as the Ameer's family was with us the tribes evinced no hostility towards us.

The Sikhs have built a fort here, which they call Futeeghur; the interior or citadel is on the summit of a mound, and there are two on the walls, with bastions, besides a low fausse braye; the walls appear to be tolerably solid, but the fort is by no means strong; all the walls are exposed to fire, and there is no water within.

With the exception of the hills from which we have just emerged there is nothing to bound our view. There are ranges both north and south, but very far distant, while the plain stretches boundless to the east. Very few trees to diversify the scenery. We came about S.S.E. to-day.

About four miles above Ali Musjid, in the pass, there is a "lope," said to be Grecian, on a hill by the roadside.

17.—To camp near Peshawur, sixteen miles.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE MISSION TO CABUL.

We do not under-estimate the gravity of an Afghan war, though the times have quite changed since the last catastrophe. The Afghans are brave men and stout soldiers; but it would be vain for them to attempt to make head against such forces, British and Indian, as the Government of India could despatch against them. Those whom the gods would destroy, first they madden; and if, indeed, what with Russian intrigues, their own internal disturbances, and their national haughtiness, the Afghans are insane, there may be need for a war. But this chance, valuable as it is, should teach our Government to be wise as well as bold. There is a section of the British public which bids against the Russians and the Afghans for the credit of being considered insane. We mean that section which lately tried to induce Parliament to reduce the British and Indian armies on the point of a national crisis. With the whole world unsettled, with wars or rumours of wars everywhere, from Bosnia to Cabul, that stolid stupidity which dare ask of the nation the cancelling of its assurance against national disaster is simply astounding. We are of those who think the Indian army is below its proper strength. It is just strong enough to take care of the Empire in normal times, and that is all; it could not meet the strain of abnormal demands upon it. The British portion of it could, of course, be strengthened from England and from the regular and reserve forces, but there is no mobilisation known to the native army, and the scheme must be indeed profound which could make of necessity 2,000 Sikhs or Goorkhas where there was only 1,000 before. We speak of Sikhs and Goorkhas, because these are the native soldiers who will have to bear the brunt of the battle in countries as cold as those across our frontier. We seriously think, considering the incessant intrigues of Russia and the policy of that Power in Central Asia, that the plan of mobilising a large native army to meet any emergency ought to be no longer postponed. The native army is strong enough, along with the British troops, to make sharp work with any Afghan war, but it is not strong enough for contingencies such as a war in Europe and Asia at the same time, in which England was one of the belligerents. At all events, we ought to learn the necessity of being well prepared for war, even when we trust in peace. But we are certainly not making the best of the native army in the leisure that is now vouchsafed us. It is very evident that the nature of the native army is not in the least understood at home. We were told by the English press that the native army was not only capable of extension to any number—we think some journals went so far as to say we could carry a million native troops into Europe if we willed it—but that it was already mobilised to admit of that extension. But, in sober truth, we have no scheme of mobilisation at all. The Indian army consists of the regiments whose numbers are printed in the Army List, but of the mobilisation which could immediately increase it by only twenty thousand men we are sorry to say it knows nothing. The menaces of Russia and the obstructiveness of the Ameer will not be without their uses if they instruct the English people that it is not the reduction of the Indian army that they ought now to propound, but of its mobilisation. These war clouds may pass away like so many others, but we invite the worst effects of the tempest by neglecting to prepare shelter against its terrors. And armies, it must be remembered, are being raised, equipped, and drilled on the other side. The policy of waiting for a war to begin in order to find the troops for it is so thoroughly English that neither Russians nor Afghans can be supposed to regard it with favour. This is a policy that has been successful with us sometimes, but it is not a policy suited to a period when the whole world is unsettled by ever-recurring rumours and intrigues, and when the lust of warlike nations for battle and spoil is inflamed by the recent successes of the Russians in Europe and Asia.—Times of India.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE ROMAN-URDÚ JOURNAL.—No. 3.—AUGUST, 1878.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The third number of the journal of the Roman-Urdú Society is now before me, and it shows that marked progress has been made in the movement since the formation of the society. The journal is better got up, contains more information than what preceded, and wide subjects for discussion are being opened up in its pages; furthermore, many native gentlemen are giving more or less support to the movement. This is as it should be. The adoption of the Roman character is a matter of serious import, and should receive much consideration and be fully ventilated.

In an unusual spirit of fairness several pages of the Journal are occupied with a report of a discussion which followed a paper on the subject by Mr. F. Drew. This discussion naturally brought forward much that is to be said on both sides; and it is only just to add that some of the objections urged against the Roman character are readily refutable.

The strong scientific argument against the Latin alphabet is the fact that its letters cannot accurately express the sounds of all the Indian languages—that, in short, the phonetic principles of languages vary—and any arrangement which would suit one would not suit another. To this the very natural reply suggests itself that the adoption of the Roman character need not influence in any way the phonetic laws of any language. The advocates of the change of character desire simply transliteration, not uniform principles of phonetics. If ten languages were to adopt the Roman character, and each of the ten were to vary somewhat in the power ascribed to every letter, the advantages of the Roman character would be in no respect diminished. If this is not so, then the dissemination of the Latin alphabet in Europe has been a disaster, and it would be well if France, Italy, Spain, Portugal, and England were to adopt distinctive characters suited to their respective phonetic principles.

The advantages claimed for Roman letters are mechanical and economical, and have nothing whatever to do with philology. Roman letters are easily written, easily read by anybody, and are cheaply and expeditiously printed; therefore, any information couched in Roman characters can be readily made available to masses of people. The powers of the letters have no necessary connection with their shapes, the former must always be learned for every language; the latter has not to be learned unless the alphabets differ. For instance, the sounds of some Sanskrit letters differ from the cognate sounds in Arabic; but in reading a piece of transliterated Sanskrit every one familiar with the language would accord to each letter its Sanskrit power; and the same person, if reading transliterated Arabic, would just as naturally give the Arabicised powers to the same marks. It does not require an upright stroke with a hook to the left to suggest the correct sound of t to a Sanskritist; not a curl with two dots over it to assist an Arabic scholar. The Roman letter t, whether written or printed, would be equally effective to one conversant with the particular language to which it might be applied. Again, the mass of mankind are familiar with only one language, and one set of phonetic principles, which could be readily associated with any set of marks; it would only be a few scholars who would be even aware that there existed any conflict between the alphabetical marks and powers in any other languages.

A real objection to the application of the Roman character to Eastern languages lies in the accessory dots and marks, the misplacement or omission of which is productive of confusion and error. In the native characters the form of a word tends to preserve its identity; but when the many z's, n's, t's, s's, &c., are all reduced to a dead level, distinguished from each other only by dots, liable to misplacement, a goodly crop of errors must result. And, as a matter of fact, every Eastern book yet printed in the Roman character, which I have seen, is bountifully besprinkled with errors of the kind indicated. The two pages of transliterated matter in the number of the Journal before me bristle with errors of this class—the result of simple carelessness.

The first step in real education is precision of thought. Romanisers must write in one definite system of transliteration, which must be considered as unalterable as the very letters of the alphabet itself. The whims and fancies of transliterators having subsided, the commonly adopted system should be carefully and strictly applied, it being held to be as great an error to write ka for kh, as to omit the final alif when using the native character. In carrying this out faithfully it will be found that much of the facility claimed for the Roman character will disappear. To omit the diacritical marks is simply to abandon accuracy in favour of speed.

In so large a country as India there is room for considerable diversity without much inconvenience; and if Romanisers will print useful books carefully there is no doubt a wide field for profitable labour for them also. The great mass of the people of India are totally unable to read any character whatever, and to teach these millions of ignoramuses to read their vernaculars in the easy Roman letters is a noble work, deserving and requiring the best efforts of generous and philanthropic hearts. The friends of the native character need not fear that Roman letters will sever these poor people from their ancient and beloved literature—their present crass ignorance severs them completely from all literature whatever, so that the Roman character can in no wise prejudice them in this respect.—Yours, &c., FREDERIC PINCOTT.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, AUG. 28.—Affairs beyond the border have naturally been much under discussion during the past fortnight; and nearly every man one meets has a pet theory of his own to propound anent the course of action we should pursue in Cabul. It appears that the Russian Mission had been despatched in anticipation of a war in Europe, with the object of bribing Shere Ali to oppose our passage through his dominions, and securing the Russians a safe conduct, should they find themselves in a position to require it, as far as the confines of British India. I believe it is no longer a secret that had war broken out we should not have remained on the defensive in India. A force of 30,000 men, having pushed its way through Afghanistan, thrown rapidly into Samarkand and Bokhara, would have little difficulty in beating the scattered Russian troops back to the Caspian; for coming thus as deliverers the whole population must have risen in our favour. In the feasibility of such a programme the Russians fully believed. It only remained to them to steal a march while we yet slept, and persuade Shere Ali to oppose us by every means in his power. Their proposal of a joint invasion of Hindustan, to be paid for by the loot of Delhi, and cemented by the restoration of Afghan rule to the banks of the Jhelum, was one which, however illusory, a semi-savage could scarcely withstand, especially as he bore us hereditary hate, and there was a soreness of years to adjust. Naturally, then, he welcomed his Northern friend, and chuckled at the mess he had prepared for us. What counter-offers can we make? We have no territory to spare him. Money is all we could suggest, and this he has scornfully rejected for three years past. Only threats, then, remain, and the Mission, if it ever reach Cabul, will have some peculiarly unpleasant communications to make to the venomous old serpent (that is his native soubriquet) whose stings are no longer harmless, and whose obstinacy has brought upon him the punishment he is about to receive. It is probable the Russian Mission (if it have not departed already) will leave Afghanistan under orders from St. Petersburg as soon as news reach it of the result of the Berlin Conference. The Russians can scarcely be prepared to go to war in justification of their interference with Cabul; or, in other words, in defence of their new-found ally, else they would have quarrelled with us in Europe on the more dignified question of Turkey. Shere Ali will, therefore, find himself rather at our mercy when the terms of our friendship are being read to him. What these terms will be is, of course, a matter for speculation only, as far as our aiders are concerned. But with tolerable certainty it may be laid down that we shall no longer permit the Ameer to close his territories to British subjects. His policy of suspicion and exclusion must give place to one of frankness and confidence in our motives. He will be required to admit a permanent Resident in Cabul with British agents wherever their presence may be deemed necessary within his dominions; and the location of one, or perhaps two, cantonments to guard strategical points. Trifling will be no longer permitted. If the terms about to be offered are more severe, now that he has shown his hand, than Shere Ali could have secured two years ago from Sir Lewis Pelly, he has only himself to blame. And no concessions, either, beyond, perhaps, a money subsidy. He will be told to "take or leave;" and, should he choose to leave, the punishment will doubtless be immediate and effective. We are in a good position at the present moment to carry out a bold policy with Cabul. The Government at home is strong enough to overrule all Liberal opposition to the Viceroy's views, and the press is roused to a sense of the danger of our situation by the coquetting of the Ameer with the Muscovite agents. On the other hand, Russia is, in her present enfeebled state, unable to lift a finger on behalf of her would-be ally thus left completely at our mercy, without a word to offer in justification of his late treacherous policy. It is therefore pleasant to know that Lord Lytton, fully supported by the Cabinet at home, is not a statesman to let slip this splendid opportunity of strengthening a vulnerable portion of our border at once and (let us hope) for ever. These are, we believe, the echoes of Simla on the Cabul question.—Correspondent of the Pioneer.

Mr. Charles Currie, Commissioner of Agra, died Sept. 3 of fever.

The Viceroy has nominated Sir Alexander Arbuthnot to the vice-chancellorship of the Calcutta University, in the place of the Hon. Justice Markby.

BURMAH COMMISSION.—Colonel R. D. Ardagh, of the British Burmah Commission, vacates his appointment on succession to colonel's allowances, and his place as commissioner is gazetted to Lieutenant-Colonel A. G. Duff.—Pioneer.

CAWNPORE MEMORIAL CHURCH.—H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge has sent the Chaplain of Cawnpore the sum of ten pounds as a contribution to the Bells Fund of the All Souls' Memorial Church.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF GOA.—The Roman Catholics of Calcutta subject to the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Goa have resolved to present his Grace on the 3rd of December next with a heavy purse to defray his expenses to Lisbon.

BHOOTAN.—The Darjiling paper has heard rumours of internal dissensions in Bhootan, but is unable to furnish particulars. This, however, is almost a chronic state of affairs in Bhootan, where the Penlows are constantly quarrelling amongst themselves, as they pay little attention to the Raja's authority.—Times of India.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—The Secretary of State in a recent despatch is said to have intimated to the Indian Government that his decision relieving a certain surgeon-major from the operation or rule 26 of the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, by which he was called upon to pay subscription to the fund as Dep. Surg. Gen. on declining promotion to that rank, may be made of general application to all officers of the Indian Medical Service similarly circumstanced.—Madras Athenæum.

POSTHUMOUS GREATNESS.—A Church Missionary reports that the cemetery where General Jacob, of Sind fame, lies buried, is still visited reverently by many natives, Hindu and Mahomedan. The missionary saw a Mahomedan at the General's tomb, who, being asked what he came for, replied, "I want a wife, for I am growing old; I hope to get one by the help of Jacob Sahib, surely he is a man of influence." So the man in search of a wife made his vow at the tomb, gave alms to the gatekeeper and food to the poor, and went home full of hope.—Pioneer.

RAILWAY CORPS.—The Government have it in contemplation, the Civil and Military Gazette tells us, to organise a railway corps from the native ranks. A circular has been issued to some of the native regiments to ascertain if volunteering for such service will be probable. Men over two years' service may be available to form such corps. The strength to consist of 35 havildars, 40 naicks, and 530 sepoys. They will be specially employed in the defence of railway stations. Present rates of pay and pension will be adhered to.

THE BENGAL ARMY.—It is stated by a correspondent of the Punjab paper that the total strength of combatant officers in the cavalry and infantry regiments, 8th Bengal Army, including the Punjab force and all contingents, is 820, of which the proportion should be one field officer to five captains and subalterns. But in actual numbers there are 300 field officers to only 520 captains and subalterns; 300 men with the wear and tear on them of from twenty to thirty-six years' Indian service, with less than double their number of young men to complete regiments!—Times of India.

SUNDAY WEATHER.—At a time like the present, remarks the Lahore journal, when meteorological observations are supposed to be of the greatest importance, it is curious to find that in some stations in Upper India no observations are permitted to be taken on a Sunday. Our contemporary adds:—"Sacred authority can be quoted to justify the most scrupulous Sabbatarian lending his assistance to an ass on the Seventh Day, but why a philosopher in search of truth should be debarred from pursuing his inquiries on that day it is difficult to understand. We shall next hear of such an entry in a ship's log as: 'Yesterday, being Sunday, the chronometers were not wound up or the ship's position taken!'

IN THE SMALL CAUSE COURT OF CALCUTTA.—In this court during 1877-78 the whole number of suits instituted was 33,510, and the amount in litigation was Rs. 1,711,118, a considerably larger sum than any of the previous ten years. The judges attribute the increase in the number of suits to the great impulse given to trade by the Madras famine. During the latter half of 1877 the court was flooded with suits on rice and wheat contracts, &c., and there were several suits against the E. I. R. Company for short delivery of goods. The receipts during the year under report amounted to Rs. 2,21,219, and the expenditure to Rs. 1,53,860.—Times of India.

COMMERCIAL.—The following companies held their ordinary half-yearly meetings at Calcutta between Aug. 28 and Sept. 2. The Balasun Tea Company: dividend declared ad interim of 4 per cent. Central Cachar Tea Company: ad interim dividend declared at Rs. 2 per cent. Equitable Coal Company: dividend declared 5 per cent. Tukvar Company: ad interim dividend declared at 10 per cent, or Rs. 10 per share. Kursiong and Darjiling Tea: ad interim dividend to be declared as soon as funds permit. Singell Tea: ad interim dividend to be declared previous to next quarterly meeting, if agents be in a position to do so. The Calcutta Docking Company, and Watson's Patent Press Company: passed report and accounts.

THE KHURAM VALLEY.—In referring to a present advance into the Khuram Valley, the Civil and Military Gazette mentions that immediately after the subjugation of the Punjab, when Edwardes was Commissioner of Peshawur and Coke Deputy-Commissioner of Kohat, the Turis of Khuram represented that they were tributaries of the Sikh, and desired to be considered British subjects, which was accordingly done. Next year a non-payment of revenue led to a difficulty. Edwardes, against Coke's wishes, decided that the Turis of Khuram should be no longer considered within British territory. The country accordingly fell under Cabul authority, which forcibly raises tribute annually. The advent of our forces would be greeted as an era of deliverance by the Turis.

LAHOUL.—A letter from Lahoul states that some three inches of snow fell there on the 18th of last month, and about the same date six inches fell at Ying Yinglu, which lies at foot of Bam Lanha Pass. Several native traders were delayed four or five days. A Moravian missionary, who has lived twenty-five years in the valley, declares that he has never known a snow-storm there so early as in August. The correspondent contradicts the report that famine had spread from Cashmere into Lahoul. Agriculture in Lahoul is carried on by means of irrigation, water abounds, and famine has never been known. The local authorities, however, are credited with a cheerful readiness to accept any famine relief, in the shape of money, that may be going.

THE LATE MR. BATCHELOR.—As an instance of the esteem in which the late Mr. Batchelor was held by the railway employes in India, we see that the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants in India has sent to the directors of the East Indian Railway in London the following resolution, which was unanimously passed at a late meeting of the society:—"That the Executive Council of the New Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants in India, representing a number of the employes on most of the lines in India, beg to submit this expression of their deep regret at the severe loss the East Indian Railway Company has sustained through the death of Mr. J. C. Batchelor, who was respected and esteemed by every railway employe who had the pleasure to serve under or be acquainted with him."—Times of India.

NEW PATENTS.—Specifications of the undermentioned inventions have been filed, under the provisions of Act XV. of 1859, in the office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department. Mr. Thomas Baker, of Nuzerah, in Upper Assam, but at present residing temporarily in Calcutta, tea planter, for an improved apparatus for removing rain water from newly-plucked tea leaf, and for withering the same. Mr. Joseph Clark, of Kensington, in the county of Middlesex, engineer, for improvements in excavating machines. Amrijoo Pundit, resident of Amritsar, for facilitating the weaving of carpets. Messrs. John Smith and Josiah Course, of Carshalton, in the county of Surrey and kingdom of England, for improvements in machinery or apparatus for trimming bevil and other gearing. Mr. Henry Bull, of Agra, for a punkah-puller.—Times of India.

BASE RUPEES.—The Allahabad correspondent of the Statesman gives the following information regarding the circulation of base rupees:—"Among the silver coin issued at Allahabad from the Government Treasuries a quantity of what appears to be base coin is passed out. Servants are constantly bringing back rupees and smaller coins which they say they cannot get any shopkeeper to accept, and which, on examination, appear to be chipped or to consist of some inferior metal cleverly enclosed between two thin plates of silver. It may be that the servants are only members of an organised gang of swindlers who have counterfeit money in their possession, and which they substitute for good money paid them, but in more than one instance have I had objection raised to money at the moment of paying, and this morning I had received in person from a Government Treasury. It is only on close inspection that the division in the plates is detected."

DARJILING STEAM TRAMWAY.—It is satisfactory to learn that this steam tramway company is in a fair way of becoming an accomplished fact, a guarantee having been given by the local government of Rs. 140,000 per annum as a minimum gross earning. Our information is derived from the Darjiling paper, which further tells us that "the Government, being fully alive to the enormous advantages which this company will confer on the Darjiling district, has very generously, and at the same time very wisely, declined to participate in the profits of the company. Messrs. Ashburner and Co. are the financial agents and the Bank of Bengal are the bankers of the new undertaking. The list of the directors of the company includes two ex-officio directors appointed by Government, and the others are Messrs. E. C. Morgan, William Lloyd, G. P. Evans, and Franklin Prestage (of the E.B. Railway). The fifteen lakhs of rupees capital are almost certain to be subscribed immediately, and the estimated net earnings of the line are 45 per cent. of the gross earnings."—Pioneer.

MADRAS.

STATION TALK.

BELLARY, SEPT. 1.—The country at present looks in splendid condition as regards vegetation, which, whether wild or cultivated, is luxuriant in the extreme. Wells are brimful, and tanks are surplussing with a head higher than on any year since 1874. Notwithstanding the encouraging appearance of the country, one meets with a vast number of paupers, ill-clad and ill-conditioned, with no home and no future beyond the limited meal from the "Relief Camp," or the low wage from the "Relief Works." I am afraid that the levelling-down system, pursued so persistently of late years, and the breaking-up of the communal system, has not tended to better the condition of the lower orders at least. There was a good deal of truth in what a village officer said some time back: "As the Government have taken all authority from us, and as the low caste people will not now obey us, let them go to Government for support; we will not feed them." I believe that that has a great deal to do with the greater portion of the people now roaming over the country, with no object, save that of living on charity. Any one acquainted with the country twenty years ago knows that, although mendicants, cripples, and diseased persons were to be found in cantonments and large stations, they were not to be found in the villages. All that is now changed, and in the remotest hamlet he will be importuned for alms.—Correspondent of Madras Times.

OOTACAMUND LAWRENCE INSTITUTE.—The eighteenth annual report of this institution has been published, and the Madras Athenaeum gathers that it is prospering.

MEDICAL SUBORDINATES.—Government have ordered the Surgeon-General, Indian Medical Department, to send three medical subordinates for charge of relief camps in the Vizagapatam district as soon as possible.—Madras Athenaeum.

PRESIDENTSHIP OF THE MADRAS MUNICIPALITY.—Colonel T. Weldon, Chief Magistrate of Madras, and Mr. C. D. Maclean, of the Madras Civil Service, are spoken of as applicants for the post held by Mr. L. R. Burrows, who has resigned the appointment of Acting President of the Madras Municipality.—Madras Times.

DECREASE OF RELIEF.—The Pioneer of the 11th ult. states that there was a decrease of 150,000 in the numbers receiving relief in Madras during the previous week. The prospect in Mysor is reported to be excellent. Prices are falling generally; there has been seasonable and sufficient rain, and the young crops are doing remarkably well.

MADRAS VOLUNTEER GUARDS.—The members of the Madras Volunteer Guards recently, at the St. Thome Butts, competed for the prizes kindly offered by Colonel T. Ross Church, the commandant of the corps. There were three prizes, for which twenty-two competitors fired. The first prize was won by Vol. Mackendry, the second by Vol. Smith, and the third (extra prize) by Sergeant Barrow.—Madras Times.

THE MYSOR GOVERNMENT.—According to a local paper it is rumoured in Bangalore that one of the objects of Mr. Gordon's visit to Mysor is to arrange for the temporary removal of the Government offices to Mysor. The Maharajah's guardian intends to reside near him for a portion of the year, during which time the business of the Government will be conducted at Mysor.—Times of India.

TANJORE IMPROVEMENTS.—An application, signed by the president, Mr. T. Webster, and fifteen out of nineteen commissioners, has been made to the Local Government by the Tanjore Municipal Commission for a loan of two lakhs of rupees for the improvement of the water supply of Tanjore, as resolved by the Tanjore Municipal Board. The application is made in accordance with the terms of Section 2 of Act XXIV. of 1871, and is published by the Local Government in the Fort St. George Gazette. The rates and taxes which form the income of this municipality are as follow:—1. Rate on houses, &c. 2. Taxes on arts, &c. 3. Taxes on vehicles, &c. 4. Registration of carts. 5. Tolls. 6. Fees. 7. Magisterial fines. These are offered as security for the loan now applied for.—Madras Times.

BOMBAY.

THE JAIL ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of State has sanctioned the proposed reorganisation of the establishments of the Common Jail and the House of Correction, Bombay. The new arrangements will result in a saving of over Rs. 1,500 a month.

BERAR VOLUNTEERS.—The Government of India have sanctioned a volunteer corps for Berar to consist of one company at Akola, and half at Oomrawuttee, the number enrolled at the latter place being considered insufficient to admit of a full company.

STAMPS REVENUE.—The gross receipts from stamps during 1877-78 in the Bombay Presidency and Sind have fallen considerably short of those of the preceding year, being only Rs. 41,66,462, and the decrease is said to be almost due to court fee stamps, which were less in demand, owing to the scarcity having caused less litigation.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—The following gentlemen have been appointed additional members of the Bombay Legislative Council:—The Hon. Mackintosh Balfour, the Hon. Syed Hassan, El Edross, C.S.I., Colonel Charles James Merriman, C.S.I., Morarjee Goculdas, Esq., Madhohirao Zanrao, alias Bapu Sahab Naik Nimbalkur, Esq., Chief of Phaltan.

GOVERNMENT CENTRAL PRESS.—The earnings of the Government Central Press at Bombay during 1877-78 are estimated at Rs. 275,110, which show a decrease of Rs. 60,033 when contrasted with those of the foregoing year, but this is said to be owing to the reduction in rates charged for work executed at the Press. The total value of the work done for the different departments was Rs. 2,59,314.—Pioneer.

LICENSE TAX ON PARTNERS.—The Times of India is able to state that the Government of Bombay, acting, as believed, upon the advice of their legal officers, have decided that the individual partners of a firm are not liable to be assessed under the License Tax, but only the firm in its corporate capacity. The timely appointment of the Hon. Desabhoj Framjee to hear appeals did much to lessen the dissatisfaction which was justly felt at the way in which the assessment was begun, and the announcement which we are privileged to make above will no doubt still further conduce to the same end.

KARACHI FISHERMEN AND THE SALT TAX.—The Mohanas or fishermen of Karachi have forwarded a lengthy memorial to the Commissioner in Sind, praying that they may be exempted from paying the enhanced salt tax; they are large consumers of salt, which they use for the purpose of salting and curing fish. On no class of the community does the enhanced tax bear more heavily than on Mohanas, who have represented in their memorial that persistence in enforcing the tax on them will result in nothing more nor less than driving them to abandon their calling altogether, a consummation by no means to be desired, we should think, by the public.—Friend of India.

ATTEMPT TO POISON.—An attempt was recently made to poison the sister of the Chief of Veerpur. The lady in question, finding the khana disagree with her palate, looked into the food and found some sparkling grit, which of course roused suspicion. Some of the food was given to a dog, which shortly afterwards began to foam at the mouth, with other signs of arsenical poisoning. The chief, satisfied that some attendant of the lady in collusion with the instigator were the culprits, has obtained sanction to criminally try the case in his court, as the ladies of the zenana are precluded putting in a personal appearance before a British court.—Bombay Gazette.

THE KHOJA COMMISSION.—We understand that a petition to his Excellency the Governor in Council is in course of being signed by the Khoja community of Bombay, praying that the proposed commission to inquire into and report upon the Khoja customs as to intestate succession should not be issued, inasmuch as, for the last 135 years, all matters in relation to the customs and usages of the Khojas have been decided by the respective Khoja leaders and have never been before a law court, except in the recent case of the estate of Rahimbhoy Aloobhoy, deceased; and as the Act to be passed on the report of such commission would probably take away the right of his Highness Aga Khan to decide cases of intestate succession.—Times of India.

THE RUGBEIAN DINNER.—The Rugby dinner given on Saturday, 7th ult., by H.E. Sir Richard Temple was a great success. About thirty old Rugbeians attended, only one of whom was a contemporary of the Governor. After dinner his Excellency made a short speech enumerating all the distinguished men who belonged to his decade, and successfully challenging any old boy of a later decade to produce a list that could at all compare to that of the well-known men trained under Dr. Arnold. With this exception there was no formal speaking. The idea of this dinner was probably due to the Harrow dinner lately given by H.E. the Viceroy, but it may be remembered that some four years ago Mr. Branson got up a Rugby dinner in Bombay.—Times of India.

THE GONDUL STATE.—The government of the Gondul State has been conducted for several years by European officers of acknowledged administrative ability, and that Major Scott, like his predecessors, is no exception to the rule may be seen in the many works of public utility, and in reforms political, judicial, and fiscal. Moreover, if the contentment and prosperity of a people be a gauge of good government, Gondul unquestionably wins the palm. Notwithstanding this it seems that Government intends to make Gondul a joint administration by giving Major Scott a native colleague. This policy is late in the day to begin now, and will be looked upon by the Gondul body politic as out of season.—Bombay Gazette.

SUPERSTITIOUS CHARITY.—We are exceedingly surprised to learn that the Hon. Rao Sahib V. N. Mandlik at the time of the last lunar eclipse, got himself weighed with rupees, amounting to 9,500, and set these apart to be distributed to mendicant Brahmins. Our readers are doubtless aware that this was formerly a favourite mode of obtaining righteousness in this country among Rajahs. Who would have supposed that the Hon. Mr. Mandlik would have done such a thing? Let it not for a moment be supposed that there is any charity in this. These mendicant Brahmins are the last persons in the community who are in danger of dying of starvation. The act of the Hon. Mr. Mandlik will be regarded throughout India as a glorification of Brahminism, of the system that has proved such a curse to this country.—Bombay Guardian, Sept. 7.

RETURN OF THE 9TH BOMBAY N. I.—H.M.S. Simoom, from Cyprus, arrived in harbour on 9th ult. at 6.30 a.m. with the right half-battalion of the 9th Bombay N. I., consisting of 463 rank and file, including followers, who landed at the Carnac Bunder at 1 p.m., in two transport tugs and four barges. After a short while the men fell in, and, headed by the band, marched to their old quarters behind the Crawford Markets. Along the whole way, which was crowded with spectators, tremendous cheers were given, to which the 9th cordially responded. A prosperous and cheerful voyage was experienced, with the exception of a few days' intense heat in the Red Sea. No mishaps occurred. The men looked as fresh and vigorous as when they started, and seemed delighted that they had been privileged to sail on European waters.—Times of India.

BOMBAY MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—At a special general meeting of the policy-holders of the Bombay Mutual Life Assurance Society, held, pursuant to notice, on the 26th of August, Mr. N. Spencer, jun., Second Judge of the Small Cause Court, being in the chair, Mr. W. Maidment, Assistant Secretary to Government, Military Department, was unanimously elected secretary to the society. This society, which has for its motto, "Alterum alterius auxilio eget," seems to be doing much good in a quiet way. It was established in 1871, and registered on 21st March in that year under Act X. of 1866. It does not appear to have courted notoriety, and yet we find by a reference to the annual report for the past year that there were 122 policies in force on 31st December last, held by 110 members, assuring Rs. 3,75,000, and yielding Rs. 17,137-6-6 in annual premiums. The accumulated fund on that date was Rs. 46,550-9-9, being equal to 85 per cent. of the premia received on account of the policies in force. The society deserves to be better known. The management of its affairs appears to be in good hands, and conducted with prudence at very moderate cost.—Bombay Gazette.

VACCINATION BILL FOR KARACHI.—The Bombay Government Gazette contains a Bill to prohibit the practice of inoculation, and to make the vaccination of children in the town of Karachi compulsory. The following is a statement of "objects and reasons" appended to the Bill:—"The town of Karachi has been visited within the last few years with destructive outbreaks of small-pox, resulting in great mortality among the people. Experience has proved that the present system of voluntary vaccination has failed to supply a sufficient and effectual safeguard against the recurrence and spread of this dangerous malady. Instances have also been brought to light showing that the injurious practice of inoculation is to some extent prevalent in the Province of Sind; and that it has been fruitful in introducing and spreading contagion. The existing laws do not provide any adequate means for the prevention and punishment of this highly dangerous practice. It is therefore proposed by this Bill to prohibit, under express penalties, the practice of inoculation, and to make suitable provision for the introduction of a system of compulsory vaccination. A similar Bill for the town and island of Bombay was some time ago introduced into the Legislative Council, a representation in favour of such a measure having been previously received from the Bombay Association. The principle of the Bill had also the approval of the leading native gentlemen in Bombay, and the measure finally passed into law in the beginning of 1877. It has since been found to work efficaciously and to the general satisfaction of the public. Compulsory vaccination has long since been the law in England, and in most other European countries, with consequences most beneficial to the human race."

The actual loss on the Secretary of State's bills on India to the end of August has been Rs. 1,29,95,490, which is Rs. 2,88,819 in excess of the estimated loss.

The quantity of cotton exported from British Burmah in July last was 8,268 cwts., valued at Rs. 1,84,647.

For the months of April to July last the amount of Indian salt revenue was Rs. 2,16,13,432, as compared with Rs. 2,22,65,754 in the corresponding period of last year.

The construction of a chemical laboratory has recently been sanctioned by the Madras Government in connection with the Madras School of Agriculture.

OUR TRUE AFGHAN POLICY.

THE military preparations which have been so promptly made by the Indian Government remove all doubt as to what degree of pressure will be put upon Shere Ali. It is evident that we shall not remain content with a mere military demonstration if the Ameer continues in the same hostile mind that he is in at present. Whether he will meet us boldly in the field, or will draw us on to advance into his territory, matters little at the present moment, and in face of the great preparations being made along the Indian frontier all Shere Ali's power must be held to be insignificant. But the strategic aspect of the question is, after all, of the least importance. When it comes to fighting, either to the capture of a fortress or the forcing of a pass, we know what we can do, and how to do it most expeditiously and thoroughly. But while we are clear on the military points, which may be summed up, in the first stage, as the concentration of large bodies of troops on the Afghan frontier, and in the second as an advance on certain points in overwhelming and irresistible strength, we do not appear to be so unanimous as to the political advantages which are proposed as the price of a costly and troublesome war. It is almost a truism to say that when one nation enters upon hostilities with another it has some clear and definite object which will be exacted from the vanquished as the reward of the conflict. The penalties of empire are so great, and the responsibilities of English rule in India so various and so wide-reaching, that it is impossible to enter upon a war without the firm resolution to secure advantages that must be of permanent utility. The pressing question, then, in the present crisis, is, What is our best Afghan policy? What are the objects which we should place before us on forcibly entering the dominions of Shere Ali? We propose to consider in some detail these points, which most writers on the subject have studiously avoided.

The principal portion of the foreign policy of the Indian Government centres round its relations with Cabul. The movements of Russia in Central Asia are, comparatively speaking, of importance only because they influence the ruler of Cabul so far as to make him adopt a more hostile attitude than his predecessors did when their State was really far more powerful than it is at present. Both because of its strategical advantages, as well as for the great hold which its importance has acquired upon the mind of the peoples of India, our foreign policy has always been, and must always be, to hold a preponderating influence in Cabul. The friendly reception of a Russian Mission and the refusal to receive an English Embassy demonstrate beyond all doubt that we possess no influence at all in the council chamber of Shere Ali. It is not a question of dividing political influence in Afghanistan with Russia as we do in Persia. We have lost our hold upon the respect of Shere Ali, and Russia has obtained that which is a vital necessity to our Government in India, and which General Kaufmann can only have striven for for the purpose of causing us annoyance and of enhancing his own prestige. It is idle to deny that, thanks to our own masterly inactivity, Russian diplomacy up to the present point has achieved a success, and it rests entirely with ourselves whether its later stages are to be equally advantageous. We can only hope to counteract the effects of General Stoletoff's mission by a vigorous policy, following, if needs be, a victorious campaign. To overthrow Shere Ali and then to recede within our present frontier, with some nominal concessions on the point of diplomatic representation, would be to court a repetition within a few years of Russian energy south of the Hindoo Koosh. The concession of the right to appoint diplomatic agents in the chief cities of Afghanistan would at the present moment avert the dire necessity of war, but it will not suffice as the outcome of a great and difficult campaign. We must march into Afghanistan with a firm resolution on two points. In the first place, Shere Ali must be deposed. His hostility towards us is not the growth of yesterday. It must have become a second nature with him to have so blinded him to the risks of his present policy. We cannot delude ourselves with the belief that after engaging in a war with him it may be possible to contract a fresh friendship with the conquered Ameer, such as we did with Dost Mahomed. If we are compelled to enter Afghan territory without meeting a humble tender of apology, we must cast away all hope of restoration or restitution of friendship with this ruler. With such a man it will be impossible to enter into any relations whatsoever. Whether he ends his days as a pensioner in India or in Turkestan, he must be deemed to have ceased to reign the instant we resort to the extreme measures which we are now so diligently putting into train.

In the second place, all Russian pretensions to political influence south of the Oxus, and any presence of Russian Residents in that region, must be declared to be incompatible with the preservation of our predominance in the countries south of the Hindoo Koosh.

The effect of the Russian Envoy's reception at Cabul must not only be neutralised, but effective precautions must be adopted to prevent a repetition of the experiment. But in order to accomplish so much the country must be prepared to support a very bold policy. If Shere Ali has to be deposed, and there appears to be no other alternative, we must be prepared to undertake the Government of Cabul, either through a nominee of our own choosing or directly by annexation. Both of these plans are attended with risk and grave responsibility. Should we place one of the younger members of the present dynasty upon the throne (and if Yakoob Khan be, as is reported, incapacitated by harsh usage from exercising that power to which his former abilities and his birth alike entitle him, we have scarcely any other choice), we must arouse the hostility of every other member of the family, and we never can be sure that our own candidate will remain true to us in any future crisis. We cannot hope to destroy in a single campaign all the traditions of the Durani monarchy. Yet the greater responsibility of accepting the complete administration of the country by ourselves makes us loth to sanction so advanced a step. It may come to that in the end, but we shall probably accept the compromise, although we may have little faith in its successful working. Our object is to bring English bayonets as near as possible to the passes of the Hindoo Koosh and to Herat. We may rest satisfied if that can be secured without formally annexing Afghanistan; but at any cost that result must be obtained. Bearing this fact in view, and remembering Russia's recent action in Bokhara and south of Ferghana, we must perceive the necessity for an advance to Candahar. At Candahar we are sufficiently near to Herat, so long as Russia does not occupy Merv. The capital of Southern Afghanistan being in our hands, and the passes between it and the Indus in our possession, there would remain no obstacle worthy of the name to prevent us concentrating a sufficient force at Candahar in any future crisis. We could leave to the Afghan prince, our own nominee, all the northern portion of Cabul, and we could enable him to consolidate his hold upon the trans-Hindoo Koosh region. The annexation of Candahar would not add much to our own responsibilities, or detract much from the value of the dominions of the Afghan ruler. It would, of course, place his country at our feet, but that is exactly what we must accomplish. Shere Ali has himself alone to blame for the fact that an occupation of Quettah was undertaken, and that a similar advance to Candahar is projected, and the Afghans themselves can scarcely fail to recognise in the mad action of their ruler the cause of a violation of their territory. An advance to Candahar is, after all, only the first step on the road to Herat, just as the permanent occupation of the Khurum Valley is the first move towards the capital. The sign of the times is that Cabul is gravitating either towards India or towards Russia; it can no longer maintain its neutrality. It behoves us to act in order that it may not be doubtful which country is supreme there. With an English garrison at Candahar, and English Political Agents at Herat and Balkh, on terms of alliance with the Turcomans, and with Cashmere slowly tightening her hold from Gilgit on Mastuj and Baroghil, England could rest satisfied that Russia, whenever she advances, can be stopped in the passes of the Hindoo Koosh and before Herat. If those measures be the result of a war with Afghanistan the country would cordially endorse the most vigorous of policies as the wisest and the most statesmanlike.

Major Sandeman left Dera Ghazee Khan on August 3 and proceeded via the Khetran Valley and the Marri and Bugti hills to Quettah, where he was expected to arrive last month. The left wing of the corps of Jacob's Rifles and a detachment of 250 troopers of the Sind Horse have been ordered to proceed to Quettah to join Major Sandeman.

VICTORIA R.

Whereas in those portions of our Warrant of the 1st of May, 1878, which regulate the appointment, promotion, and retirement of combatant officers, officers subject to Indian retiring regulations are exempted provisionally from the operation of certain articles of that Warrant:

And whereas it is now desirable for the sake of promotion and military efficiency that the articles aforesaid should be made to apply to all officers of our cavalry and infantry, notwithstanding that they may be subject to Indian retiring regulations; and that additional facilities should be offered for the retirement of officers of our Royal (late Indian) Artillery, and of our Royal (late Indian) Engineers;

An officer who had not attained the regimental rank of major, or who had not become a mounted officer in our foot guards, before the 1st October, 1877, fifty-five years.

This rule may be relaxed if in any special case it shall be represented to us by our Secretary of State, on the recommendation of our Commander-in-Chief, that such relaxation would be for the good of our service; and, in all cases, a colonel of our Royal Marines, of our Royal (late Indian) Artillery, of our Royal (late Indian) Engineers, or of our Indian Staff Corps, shall, if otherwise qualified, be eligible for promotion to the rank of major-general, notwithstanding that he shall have passed the age above prescribed.

[No. 97, NEW SERIES.]

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

DEPUTY ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, ROYAL ARTILLERY, HORSE GUARDS, WAR OFFICE, Sept. 12, 1878.

REGIMENTAL ORDER.

A Royal Warrant having been issued laying down new conditions of retirement for the officers of the late Indian Artilleries, the following is published for general information and guidance:—

All applications from officers wishing to retire under the conditions of the new Warrant are to be transmitted—at home, through officers commanding artillery districts; from India, through the commander-in-chief of the several Presidencies, and if from general officers, colonels unemployed, or officers upon leave at home, direct; in all cases to the deputy adjutant-general, Royal Artillery, Horse Guards.

These applications in the case of the general officers and regimental colonels must reach the deputy adjutant-general by the 15th December, 1878, after which date no application from these officers can be received.

Officers retiring under the conditions of the new warrant will, in addition to the ordinary pension to which they may be entitled under Indian retiring regulations, be granted special annuities according to the following scale, viz.:—

SERVICE FROM DATE OF FIRST COMMISSION WITHOUT DEDUCTION.

Years.	Annuity.	Years.	Annuity.	Years.	Annuity.	Years.	Annuity.
20	£150	25	£200	30	£250	35	£300
21	160	26	210	31	260	36	310
22	170	27	220	32	270	37	320

						40	350

The aggregate retiring allowance pension, special annuities, and good service pension is in no case to exceed £1,000 per annum.

All general officers not in receipt of colonel's allowances, and regimental colonels, will be permitted to retire upon the special annuities for which, together with pension, their services will be made up to the 31st December, 1878.

After the 31st December, 1878, no general officer will be eligible for these special annuities in addition to ordinary pension, nor will regimental colonels be eligible to take them after that date, unless they have completed five years' service in the rank of regimental colonel, in accordance with the terms of the warrant.

Retirements on the special annuities herein laid down, in addition to ordinary pension under Indian retiring regulations, will be continued without limit as to number or date to all officers of the late Indian Artilleries, except general officers, fulfilling the conditions as to the periods of service prescribed by the Royal Warrant.

In carrying out the promotions consequent upon the retirements of the general officers and regimental colonels, which may take place prior to the 1st January, 1879, only one promotion to the rank of regimental colonel will be made for every two vacancies therein, the number remaining after such retirements and promotion being the future establishment of that grade for the Indian lists.

All retirements in the lower grades will carry with them promotions to such extent as will leave the establishment of lieutenant-colonels on each list as follows, viz.:—Bengal, 20; Madras, 12; Bombay, 10. The majors and captains remaining at their present numbers.

By command,

mission. Some of the chieftains seem to be desirous of acting independently of the man who has from the beginning planned and directed the rebellion, but the Dutch consider the Acheen War settled through the strategy and energy of Colonel van der Heyden, who has been raised to the rank of Major-General. Other chiefs are sending in their submission.—Times.

THE CITY OF GLASGOW BANK.—This bank, the failure of which was announced on Wednesday last, was established in May, 1839, and according to the latest published accounts the number of proprietors is 1,249, whose liability is unlimited. The capital is £1,000,000, the reserve fund £450,000, and the fixed note issue £72,921. The bank has 133 branches, and has paid a progressively increasing dividend for several years past until it reached 12 per cent. The business of the bank, it would appear, has been conducted for years past upon very unsound principles, and from the fact of the other Scotch banks having decided to let the City of Glasgow Bank stop, it is inferred that it is a very bad case indeed. Operations upon an enormous scale have been indirectly entered into in Indian produce and Australian wool, some two millions and three-quarters of bills having, we understand, been accepted for the account of three firms. Very large advances, it is said, have been made to firms in the iron trade in the North, and an utterly reckless support appears to have been given to builders. The immediate cause of the failure, we are informed, was the impossibility any longer of getting the bills drawn from India on the bank in Glasgow discounted in the London market, a circumstance which explains to some extent the feverish oscillations in the rates demanded for loans from time to time for some months past. These bills have been sold in India to the Indian banks ostensibly against the shipment of produce, and have ultimately come upon the discount market. The terms demanded for negotiating them having steadily advanced, instructions were at length telegraphed to the Indian branches to take no more of the bills. The amount of the liabilities is estimated to be £10,000,000, and that of acceptances a little below £3,000,000, the last statement to the 5th of June, when the annual balance is struck, which shows £1,488,000, being, we believe, incorrect. The deposits amount to about £8,500,000. The subjoined circular announces the failure of Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., with two of its Indian connections, as a result of the stoppage of the City of Glasgow Bank. The house was established in 1860. Mr. Alexander Brown retired in August, 1870:—"11, Birchlin-lane, E.C., Oct. 3. Gentlemen,—We regret to inform you that in consequence of the stoppage of the City of Glasgow Bank Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., of 17 and 18, Leadenhall-street, are compelled to suspend payment. This will involve the suspension, also, of their corresponding houses, W. Nicol and Co., Bombay, and Fleming and Co., Kurrachee. The Financier learns that the acceptances of Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., in connection with the City of Glasgow Bank, figure for about £900,000, as against cash advances of £700,000. In the case of a firm located in India, the figures are relatively very different, acceptances having passed to the amount of £1,600,000 against cash advances of £735,000. In the case of three other affiliated Indian houses the figures in this way reach an aggregate of £1,250,000. Another house, carrying on business in Scotland and the East, is concerned in the flying of paper to the amount of £500,000, and still another, located in Scotland and Australia, to the amount of a million.

The War Office will not entertain the applications of home officers for active service to Afghanistan.

RIDER'S PATENT HOUSEHOLD PUMPING ENGINE.

SOLE MAKERS,
HAYWARD TYLER & CO.,
LONDON.

The cost of running an Engine of half-a-horse power does not exceed 2s. 6d. per week for coke and oil.

An Engine of half-horse power will raise all the water required for a large mansion or public buildings, and one of a third-horse power is sufficient for most gentlemen's houses, whilst its simplicity is such that no skilled labour is requisite—in fact, a gardener's boy of sixteen years old, of ordinary intelligence, can work it.

The following gentlemen have ordered a second engine for private use:—

Cranston's Nurseries, King's Acre, near Hereford,

Messrs. HAYWARD TYLER and Co.,

Gentlemen.—We have much pleasure in being able to state that the "Rider Hot Air Engine" has given great satisfaction, and has done all we expected of it. Our fear at first was that it would soon lose air by the packing getting worn, but this has not been the case, as we have worked it now for twelve months without its having cost us a penny for repairs. Any of our men can work it, and the consumption of fuel is as small as you state. We should be very sorry to be without it now in the nurseries.—Yours truly,

CRANSTON AND CO.

A RIDE TO KHIVA.

BY
CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY,
Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken: and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

THE DEAF, AND THE SO-CALLED

"DEAF AND DUMB."
SOCIETY FOR TRAINING TEACHERS OF THE DEAF, AND DIFFUSION OF THE "GERMAN" SYSTEM IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

PRESIDENT.
HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

The "German" System teaches spoken and written language to the "Deaf and Dumb." It dispenses entirely with signs and the finger alphabet, and with the necessity in after-life of using pencil and tablets.

The Training College and School of the Society is situated at The Elms, Castlebar-hill, Ealing, Middlesex.
Applications for the admission of Students and Pupils should be addressed to the Secretary, 9, Nottingham-terrace, York-gate, Regent's-park.

Donations and Subscriptions are solicited for the purpose of extending the System throughout the United Kingdom, by promoting Schools for the Poor; and for the gratuitous or assisted training of Students, not in a position to pay the ordinary College fees.

The want of well qualified Teachers is one of the most serious drawbacks to the proper instruction of the Deaf, and to supply this want in the best manner is a main object of this Society.

Subscriptions may be paid to the Treasurer, Sir John

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1878.

SUMMARY. AND REVIEW.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, September 20; Madras and Allahabad, September 18; Calcutta, September 17.

THE reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending September 10 state that in Madras the general prospects are good as before, especially in Trichinopoly, Tinnevely, and Chingleput. Rain has been fairly abundant in most districts; in Malabar it was excessive with reference to the requirements of the crops. There were 98,040 persons on relief works, and 58,998 gratuitously fed; the decrease, as compared with the previous week, being 3,966 and 3,404 respectively. Heavy rains continue in Mysore, where crops and prospects are excellent. The statistics of relief for the week ending August 31 are, on civil relief works, 2,828, on departmental works, 26,620; gratuitously relieved—in hospitals 2,287, in villages 11,529. There has thus been a decrease of the numbers on works, but a slight increase amongst the recipients of free relief. In the Bombay Presidency the floods are diminishing in Sind; there has been light rain in Guzerat, the Deccan, and the Southern Mahratta country; and in these localities, as well as in the coast districts, crops are good. Cholera continues in a few places. In the Central Provinces the break in the rains previously noted has done much good; there has been a fall now of from 1 to 3.50 inches in almost all districts, and prospects are everywhere favourable, except in parts of Sambalpur and Bilaspur, where more rain is required. The break in Berar continued to the end of the week. In Central India, the improvement in Gwalior still lasts, and prospects are now much better in Bundelkhand, where more rain was wanted. There is no alteration in Rajputana, light rains occurring as before. Good general rain has fallen in Bengal, except in parts of Pooree. The early crops now being harvested are yielding well. Incessant rain is reported from Sylhet, where floods are on the rise. In several districts of Burma more rain is much needed. Seasonable rain is falling in the North Western Provinces and Oudh, and general prospects continue satisfactory. The reports of harvest prospects are also good throughout the Punjab.

THE reports of the public health from the provinces for the week ending Sept. 10 are as follows:—In Shikarpur, fever prevalent; slight cholera and fever in Guzerat; in Khandesh, cholera abating, 336 cases, 180 deaths. In Puna and districts, 21 deaths from cholera; 26 in Ahmednagar. In Bengal, general health good; in Chittagong, Backergunge, Pubna, Hooghly, and Lohardugga. Fever prevailing in 24 Pergunnahs, a few cholera cases in Diamond Harbour, Shahabad, and Hazaribagh. Fever prevalent at Sarun, Balasore, and Cuttack, N.W.P., and Oudh; health good at Benares and Allahabad. Cholera decreasing at Bareilly. In Punjab, health generally good, with exception of fever usual at this time of year. In Central Provinces, cholera still bad in Wardha (229 deaths), Nimar (107 deaths), and Betul (73 deaths); also prevalent in Nagpur, Chanda, and almost all districts. Cholera has disappeared from Arakan, but fever very prevalent. Six deaths from cholera in Rangoon, but public health in Pegu and Tennasserim good. In Rajputana fever prevalent, in Marwar, and 300 deaths from cholera in Jodhpur. Fever prevalent in Meywar, and cholera in Ajmere and Ulwur.

THE 1st Battalion of the 25th Regiment, stationed at Fyzabad, suffered severely from cholera during the month of September, in spite of the prompt measures of the officer in command, who removed the troops from the barracks. The disease continued its ravages, but was happily diminishing in virulence. The number of cases up to the 20th ult. had been 85, and the deaths 41 non-commissioned officers and men, 7 women, and 12 children. So many fatal cases had not occurred at Fyzabad in any year since 1859.

THE Indian papers necessarily contribute nothing to our news from Cabul. The Times of India says that of course the Afghanistan question occupies the foremost place in Anglo-Indian public attention. 'The policy which the Government of India ought to adopt is much discussed' a powerful section of politicians contending that nothing will ever thoroughly secure India but the occupation of Jellalabad, Herat, the Bamian Pass (that is, the only road from Bokhara to Cabul), and Cabul itself. According to the most recent telegrams from Simla (9th inst.), it is officially stated that no collision with the Afghans has yet occurred anywhere on the frontier, and no immediate attack on Ali Musjid is contemplated. Beyond active military preparations nothing has been done, and all statements to the contrary must be received with caution. But another telegram stated, not officially, that the forces under General Ross at Jumrood, amounting to seven infantry regiments and three batteries, have passed Ali Musjid, and were advancing on Dakka. As to military movements, it was reported on the 6th from Umballa that the 26th Regiment of Native Infantry had arrived; that the 70th and 59th Foot proceed forthwith to Mooltan; and that a detachment of the 18th Royal Irish left Rauvind by special train for Mooltan. The Indus Valley Railway is preparing for the carriage of the Bombay column to Sukkur. The 15th Sikhs have marched from Sealkote to join the force assembling at Mooltan. The 23rd Pioneers have marched from Simla en route for the frontier. General Biddulph and Major Worsley left Nynee Tal for Quettah on Friday. The troops will consist of two divisions. The 2nd Division will be divided into two columns, one under General Roberts moving up the Kuroom Valley; the second column joining at Dera Ghazi Khan, will reinforce the Pioneers at Quettah. The 1st Division will for the present remain in support. Colonel Hill proceeds at once to Dera Ghazi Khan to hasten the advance of the troops to Quettah. There is considerable delay consequent on defective carriage. Colonel Lane has been ordered to Mooltan to superintend and expedite the commissariat arrangements for the Quettah force, carriage being again the difficulty. The Times states that orders have been issued by the India Office directing all officers on furlough belonging to regiments in Sind and the Punjab, together with those whose corps are detailed for the Afghan Expeditionary Force, to rejoin their posts by the first mail. Those who are at home on medical certificate have been directed to present themselves for examination, in order that, should their health permit it, they may be pushed on to the front. Colonel T. D. Baker, C.B., 18th Royal Irish, Assistant Adjutant General at headquarters, has left to take up the appointment of Military Secretary to Lord Lytton, in the place of Lieutenant Colonel the Hon. G. P. Villiers, who has proceeded on field service with the column now being massed at Jumrood. The appointment of Quartermaster General of the main expeditionary column has, it is stated, been bestowed on Colonel C. M. Macgregor, C.S.I., C.I.E. A better selection could not have been made. No man knows the frontier more thoroughly, or is better qualified to act as head of the intelligence department in any operations towards Central Asia. He has an intimate knowledge both of Pushtoo and Persian, is gifted with a rare faculty for winning the confidence of his subordinates, and has earned the respect of all under whom he has served, not only for his painstaking work, but also for his indomitable gallantry in the field. Colonel Macgregor was employed for some years under the direction of Lord Napier of Magdala in the compilation of a Gazetteer of the North West Frontier of India and of Central Asia—a work which contains all we know of those regions. It was with a view of making the book as complete as possible that he twice traversed the country between Herat and Candahar, and between that city and our border. He served through the Indian Mutiny, including the siege and capture of Lucknow and many minor engagements; during this campaign he was three times wounded and four times mentioned in despatches. In the China campaign he was again complimented for his gallant conduct, again twice wounded; in the Bhootan Expedition, through which he served as Assistant Quartermaster General, he was twice severely wounded, and three times mentioned in orders. He served in the Abyssinian War on the Quartermaster General's Staff; so it may safely be said that he has had stern experience of the working of that department in the field, and is not likely to fail for want of a practical knowledge of its requirements in war. Colonel Baker served with the 18th Royal Irish in the Crimean War, was mentioned in despatches, and awarded the Sardinian medal for gallantry displayed at the attack of the cemetery and suburbs of Sebastopol on June 18, 1855; he also served in India during the mutiny in a field force under Colonel Beatson. During the New Zealand war, 1864-66, he acted first as Deputy and afterwards as Assistant Adjutant-General. For his conduct at the action of Rangiahia he received the brevet rank of major; at the attack and capture of Orakau he was again mentioned in General Carey's despatches. He accompanied Sir Garnet Wolseley to the Gold Coast, and served throughout the Ashantee War, being present at the battles of Amoafu, Ordahsoo, and Coomassie, and was promoted to a lieutenant-colonelcy and decorated with the Companionship of the Bath. In addition to the Sardinian medal and C.B., Colonel Baker possesses the Crimean, Turkish, Mutiny, New Zealand, and Ashantee medals, and is an A.D.C. to her Majesty.

THE Times of India is of opinion that the death of the King of Burma is likely to lead to serious consequences at Mandalay. The succession is certain to be disputed, and the British Government may probably have to interfere, according to the Times telegram. Meantime, the existence of many candidates for the throne may threaten the new King's peace; beginning with the old King, deposed in 1853, and including his elder sons, and the sons and nephews of the late King, who is believed to have died on Sept. 11, but whose death was concealed until the Woongyees decided upon his successor. King Thebau is described as an intelligent, thoughtful, able man, gifted with a considerable amount of moral robustness. He was one of the pupils in the Royal School, and took high honours in the annual examinations.

SCINDIAH was invested with the Order of the Empire of India in full Durbar at Gwalior on the 21st. Many guests were present. The Maharaja was gracious and conciliatory.

IN acknowledging the letter of the Government of India reporting the circumstances attending the assassination of Mr. T. T. Cooper, the Secretary of State writes:—"Her Majesty's Government sincerely deplore the untimely death of an officer who had exhibited in his career as an explorer qualities which appeared to fit him for a post where he was to some extent brought into contact with races among whom he had travelled, and with whose languages and customs he had attained a certain degree of familiarity. The kind offices of the missionaries, the Rev. H. Soltan and the Rev. J. N. Cushing, in attending to the various matters incidental to the sad occurrence, entitle them to commendation, and you will doubtless cause the thanks of your Excellency's Government to be conveyed to them for their disinterested exertions." The despatch concludes by expressing satisfaction that measures for the improvement of the guard of the Political Agent at Bhamo are under consideration.

A MEMORANDUM recently issued by the Acting Chief Engineer for Irrigation in the Bombay Presidency states that the gross area under command of the works to the end of 1877-78 was 244,137 acres. Deducting for unculturable land, &c., the culturable area may be taken as 219,000 acres. The irrigated area formed nearly 12 per cent. of the culturable area under command. According to the returns the area of irrigation shows a considerable increase, part at least of which is not due to abnormal causes. The area on the Jamda Canal has risen from a maximum of 1,536 in previous years to nearly 5,000 acres in 1877-78. It is often stated that the preparation of land for irrigation costs not less than Rs. 30 per acre. If this is so, the people under the Jamda Canal must have expended over a lakh of rupees on the land irrigated during the short period that elapsed between the time they gave up all hope of rain and the time they first took the water. This is almost impossible, and bears out the opinion that the work of preparation is, for a very large proportion of the area commanded, very much less expensive than is generally supposed. It has been ascertained that such preparation as was necessary was actually made, and that irrigation was carefully practised. The area irrigated on the Lakh Canal shows a further improvement, and nearly 42 per cent. of the gross area under command of the Ojhar Canal was irrigated during the year. The percentage last year was 31, and the rainfall was only one-half what it was in 1877-78.

FROM the resolution of the Government of the N. W. P. on the Irrigation report for 1876-77 we learn that the operations of the Department resulted in a net profit of Rs. 25,76,406, equivalent to 4.81 per cent. on the total capital invested, or 6.10 per cent. on the capital of canals in operation. After deducting interest charges for the year, this net profit left a balance of Rs. 8,02,247 to set against the accumulated deficit of past years. The working of the Ganges Canal resulted in a profit of about 4, and that of the Eastern Jumna of about 14½ per cent. The most encouraging feature in the results is, however, the fact that the Agra Canal, in the third year of its working, yielded an income in excess of working expenses, whereas Colonel Greathead had estimated that this would not occur until the sixth year. The gross income of this canal was Rs. 1,23,300 as against an estimated income of Rs. 47,000, while the working expenses were only Rs. 1,16,132, as compared with Colonel Greathead's estimate, for the third year, of Rs. 1,50,000.

A DEMI-OFFICIAL note has been circulated to members of the Covenanted Civil Service in the N. W. P., informing them that the Government of India has sanctioned the separation of the service into two branches, executive and judicial, and calling upon them to state in which they will elect to serve; the staff of the former to consist of twenty-two collectors on Rs. 2,250, five on Rs. 1,800, and five on Rs. 1,600 per mensem. The judges will be graded similarly; only, to console them for the total abandonment of hopes of the commissionership, two judges are to get Rs. 3,000 a-month.

DURING 1877, 563 officers and men of the Assam police force were punished, some for very serious cases of misconduct, such as torture to extort confession, and in one case plundering the house of a dying man. The province during the two previous years was singularly free from such malpractices, and the Chief Commissioner regrets that violence and extortion, the besetting sins of the police in India, should be now gaining ground. Dismissals and desertions were not so frequent as heretofore, but the percentage of resignations was very high, and the latter is said to be due to the low rate of salary in the lower grades, while more lucrative employment is obtainable in the numerous tea-gardens. 10,957 cognisable cases were reported during the year; the value of property stolen amounted to Rs. 93,210, about one-third of which was recovered; and of the 379 cases of rioting or unlawful assembly, 282 occurred in Sylhet alone, where they are numerous, and the magisterial proceedings in dealing with them is not at all satisfactory. In the Surma Valley districts matrimony is a light matter, and summarily dealt with at times; for instance, if a man takes a fancy for a young girl, or another's child-wife, he "pops the question," and then kidnaps her, though frequently with her own consent.

THE report of the Superintendent of Emigration at Dhubri shows that the emigration to Assam has largely increased since the opening of the Northern Bengal State Railway. Emigrants to the number of 8,000 were embarked at Dhubri for the Lahore districts, as against 3,600 during 1876-77. Increased facilities of communication, such as are promised in the increased speed of river transit, as well as the extension of rail and roadways, will soon show still more favourable results. Not only Assam is ready to receive and maintain a large population, but the "wastes of Arakan," to use the expression of a correspondent, would ripen and blossom if the overcrowded districts of Bengal were enabled to pour their surplus population into the territories ready for them. We have on one side the population, as the late district officer tells us, of Monghyr increasing far beyond the supporting power of their native soil; on the other, we are told of wide and fertile areas lying waste for want of hands to till them. As the famine in Ireland forced upon her inhabitants the remedy for her over population, viz., emigration, so the growing risks of recurring calamities should lead our administrators without delay to promote the migration of the overcrowded cultivators, not to a foreign country, but to the uncultivated reserves of our own Indian Empire, where they will begin at once to decrease the burdens and fear of "the poverty," and increase the revenues of India.

THE Government has determined to push on the Punjab Northern State Railway towards Rawul Pindi with the utmost energy, regardless of financial considerations. All leave for the railway staff has been stopped, and officers on duty on that line recalled. The Times of India says that there is a widespread idea in military circles that the complications on the frontier are rapidly tending to render preparation for all contingencies extremely desirable.

THE need of some legislative protection for the "mill hands" of the Indian cotton factories is, we rejoice to see, being pressed upon the notice of Government. The veteran champion of the mill and mine workers is ready to do what he can "for the alleviation of such misery" as is described by eye-witnesses in such words as these:—"Never have I seen such a wretched crowd of working people, men pale and haggard, women and children drooping, the latter some not more than seven years old, who had toiled for six continuous hours, and, after a brief half-hour's rest, would return for three to four hours' more labour in the terrible atmosphere." Mr. Arnold, who then describes the hands as they left the mill, adds that for forty-six out of forty-nine days these children had toiled from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m.! The obsolete cruelties, dangers, and oppression of the worst Lancashire mills of the old days are declared to be in full force in the cotton mills of India at the time we write, yet the Local Government sees no need for legislative interference. But we know that the "cry of the children" from Bombay will not be heard in vain in England. It would be well if those gentlemen who have come forward to protest against the continuance of a state of things which "grossly outrages humanity in various ways," would combine together to procure a complete statement of the case to be laid before the Secretary for India, so as to obtain prompt and effectual remedy for so great an evil. If, as some aver, the evil is exaggerated, let the truth be known; if the reports be substantiated, redress of the wrongs of the patient workers is an imperative duty.

ARCHÆOLOGISTS will be glad to hear that Sir Richard Temple has taken measures for the preservation in Western India of the architectural remains of the dynasties which preceded the British dynasty. This, says the minute constituting the office of a Conservator of Archæological and Architectural Remains, has for many years past been admitted to be an object worthy of our administration, and is generally considered to be one of the duties of the State. The minute gives a long list, but not an exhaustive one, of the monuments which the opulence or pride of our predecessors have left in the Dekhan, Konkan, Guzerat, Kattywar, and Sind, including the Mahomedan mosques and palaces of Bijapur, the various Maratha palaces and forts, the Hindu rock cut temple, Buddhist caves, and the Dutch tombs of Surat and Broach. The consulting architect is to fill the office of Conservator, and a grant will be made in the annual budget of the P.W.D., "small at first," but "we may be able to give more hereafter." Each executive engineer will understand part of his duties to consist in an examination of the antiquities, and suggestions for the necessary repairs. Thus each official of the P.W.D. will be an archæologist in spite of himself.

THE Bombay Gazette is able to announce that the Postmaster-General has consented to allow the English mails to be put on board the steamers of the B. I. S. N. Company once a fortnight at Aden under the new arrangements made by the company for running fortnightly steamers via the Suez Canal. The change is to be tried as an experiment first of all, and if it succeeds it will be continued. Much of the success will depend upon the regularity with which the steamers of the B. I. S. N. Company arrive at Aden. Bombay will also gain two days in the despatch of letters to Aden, in time to catch the outgoing mail steamer; the first despatch will be on Sept. 12, when the Assyria is advertised to leave. This will give two days more to reply to letters—an important consideration now that our postal communications are so limited.

THE troubles of the Calcutta University in connection with the appointment of Dr. M. L. Sarkha (homœopath) to the medical faculty have come to an end by the syndicate having, at his wish, transferred him to another faculty, and by the doctors withdrawing their resignation, not, however, until the syndicate had refused to accept it. Dr. Sarkhar, having won the battle of principle, can well afford to retire gracefully from the contest, and we hope that there is now an end of strife.

ACCORDING to a correspondent of the Times, there is reason to fear that a period of scarcity is threatening at least a part of the Cypriote population. Last year was a bad year, but the harvest of this year is said to be one-third less than last year's yield. It will be an immediate but difficult duty to acquire correct information as to the necessity for making advances for seed corn, for which, according to Turkish precedents, the villagers are already petitioning.

THE following items of news from Cyprus are furnished in the Daily News:—The 101st Regiment has embarked on board the Orontes. The whole of the men will be treated as invalids during the voyage. A recent medical report states that the hill stations have proved to be less healthy than the plains. Two per cent. is the actual increase in the sick rate now, but there is apparently a larger increase, because 100 men are away cruising. Mr. Hepworth Dixon has fallen from his horse and severely fractured his collar-bone. He is now on board the Minotaur. The three unofficial members of the new Legislative Council are MM. Glikis, Mattei, and Fonat; the names of the three official members have not yet been made known. The Council will sit in Nicosia.

THE abuses lately brought to light in connection with the pilgrim traffic and quarantine arrangements in Egypt have been so serious as to call for remonstrance on the part of the Home Government with the Egyptian authorities. It seems that not only is the quarantine system a bad one, but corruption and cruelty are largely practised by the officials who are charged with the working of it. This was notably the case during the last pilgrimage season in the Red Sea, when the pilgrims were allowed to lie out in the filth and stagnant water of the streets of Jeddah and other Arabian ports during the heavy rain which fell in December; and bribes were freely taken by the quarantine officials to allow communication between the ship and the shore, and native craft to leave the various ports without restriction. At one time affairs became so bad that the pilgrims revolted, both at the quarantine stations, where many escaped, and on board the ships, where they threatened the lives of the captains and crews. The Egyptian Government have therefore been warned that Her Majesty's Government can no longer permit a state of things which causes misery, crime, and disease, which inflicts needless hardship and losses upon legitimate trade.

and which appears only to serve as a cloak for corruption and extortion, and that they intend to take steps to obtain a thorough investigation and reform of the whole system.

THE opening address of the Governor of Ceylon to the Legislative Council describes the financial position of the colony at the close of 1877 as highly satisfactory. The revenue yielded Rs. 17,026,191, being an excess of Rs. 2,526,191 over the estimate, and an increase of Rs. 2,350,055 over that of the previous year. Deducting repayment for stores and Rs. 190,337 yielded by the pearl fishery, the increase was made up as follows:—Sale of waste lands, Rs. 680,534; railway receipts, Rs. 633,261; customs, Rs. 351,691; paddy tax, Rs. 201,808; miscellaneous, Rs. 144,017. The imports in the year amounted to Rs. 62,783,676, and the exports to Rs. 61,120,540, showing respectively an increase of 6 per cent. and 25 per cent. The exports of coffee were 974,333 cwt., as against 673,490 cwt., showing an increase of 300,843 cwt. Cinchona bark increased from 14,932 lb. to 74,127 lb., and coconut oil advanced from 1,651,881 gallons to 2,653,182 gallons. The expenditure amounted to Rs. 15,330,839, being about two million rupees over estimates, and exceeding that of the former year by 1,710,249, distributed over relief works in Northern Province medical establishments, hospitals, and immigration, and increased expenditure in stores and railway charges which were repaid and covered. Thus it appears that the revenue will exceed the actual expenditure by Rs. 1,695,352. There has been a slight decline in the revenue of the first half of the current year, and the estimates have been framed with regard to this fact. Important works on flood outlets to prevent the constantly recurring damage by the overflow of the Kelassi and Kaluganga rivers, are proposed; the total cost of which will amount to Rs. 3,473,000, the principal item being a canal from Ambatale to the sea, estimated at Rs. 1,430,000, which will be commenced without delay, a partial vote of Rs. 150,000 being proposed for the current year. Various railway extensions are proposed, and as the receipts of the Ceylon railway and its branches for 1877 have amounted to Rs. 3,641,940, and the net profits to more than 11 per cent., there is every reason to expect that the further outlay will be almost as remunerative. In referring to the extension to Haputali, urged by the Uva planters, his Excellency declared his belief that the leaf disease is not so serious an evil as to lead to the abandonment of coffee planting, and referred to the public confidence shown by the continued purchases of Crown lands. The most important measure of legislation to be brought forward is a bill to abolish the renting system of collection of the grain duties, which has been described by the Commissioner's report, endorsed by the Secretary for the Colonies, as "indefensible in principle, open to abuse," and as having "actually led to abuse." It is hoped that by degrees a fixed money payment may be substituted for the tythe. In conclusion, his Excellency stated that he had forwarded to the Secretary of State the address presented by the Council to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales on his memorable visit to Ceylon in 1875, engraved on plates of gold by a native artist in English, Sinhalese, and Tamil, which had been at last completed, and Sir H. Longden had received the Prince's commands to convey to the Council his Royal Highness's thanks for that valuable and interesting specimen of Ceylon manufacture, prized by his Royal Highness, not for its intrinsic value only, but more especially as a memento of the hearty welcome he received from all classes during his stay in the island.

DURING the course of a thunderstorm which broke over Jhansi on the 5th September the mess house of H. M.'s 39th Regiment was struck by lightning and completely destroyed. The thunder-bolt fell on the centre of the roof, and, shattering a large beam and sending it down with a terrific crash on the floor, appears to have spread over the rafters in different directions, until finally making its exit in three distinct places on opposite sides of the building. Owing to the heavy rain which had previously fallen and saturated the roof it was some considerable time before the fire made way, and the officers of the regiment were thus enabled to save the whole of the mess property; but of the house only the bare walls now remain standing.

MONSIEUR WEINBERG'S MISSION TO BOKHARA.—The following is an extract translated from the Turkistan Gazette of the 13th (25th) June, 1878. The article is headed "Monsieur Weinberg's Mission to Bokhara," and runs as follows:—"Monsieur A. A. Weinberg, officer for special political missions, and now on a visit to the Ameer of Bokhara, to discuss matters relating to the movements of the active forces about the headquarters of the Amu Darya, has written from the city of Bokhara. From his letter we extract the following news:—Having hurt his foot on the way, he had to give up riding at Samarkand, from whence he travelled in a country cart as far as Chirakchi, to which place the Ameer had politely sent one of his own carriages. In the afternoon of the 21st May (2nd June) M. Weinberg reached Karshi, and on the day following, accompanied by Staff Captain Schlichten, he had an interview with the Ameer, to whom he delivered a letter from the Governor-General of Turkistan, at the same time pronouncing some friendly sentiments. He informed the Ameer that his Excellency (Von Kauffmann) hoped for a sincerely friend-like attitude on the part of Bokhara, in case the Russian forces now under marching orders should be directed to the Amu Darya; he reminded the Ameer of his friendship as tested during the Khivan expedition of 1873, and wound up by giving expression to Von Kauffmann's hopes that the Ameer would assist the Russian forces by way of voluntarily permitting his subjects to sell them bread, flour, and other provisions. Ameer Syad Muzafar, who had appeared somewhat excited at the commencement of the interview, offered no remark while Weinberg was speaking. Having listened to the end, he replied to the effect that he was willingly ready to meet the wishes of the Governor-General, and that he would do all in his power to assist the Russian troops to the end of improving upon the good friendly relations now maintained between Russia and Bokhara. In reply to the Ameer's question as to 'how Russia intended to arrange her affairs with Cabul' Mons. Weinberg deemed it necessary to reply openly (sincerely), that the Governor-General of Turkistan entertained no enmity whatever against Afghanistan, and that he (Von Kauffmann) contemplated sending an embassy to Shere Ali Khan, on the arrival of which at Cabul the relations of Russia with that country would probably be cleared up in one way or other, that is, assume a friendly or hostile aspect. All would depend upon Ameer Ali's uprightness, frankness, and good sense. The Russians plot nothing whatever (entertain no devices of any kind) against him. At the expiration of half an hour the interview came to an end, and when M. Weinberg rose to take leave the Ameer asked him to come again on the following day in order to discuss some further questions. With reference to M. N. A. Mayet's journey the Ameer raised no objections, and declared himself willing to aid him. Merchant Ivanof has already obtained the Ameer's permission to buy provisions in Bokhara, which are intended for the use of the Amur Darya corps." N. A. Mayet is the editor of the Turkistan Gazette, and holds the rank of a major in the Russian army. The last two numbers of the Gazette (22nd and 23rd) are signed by Dmitsofski for the editor. It gives no clue as to the direction and object of Mayet's journey or the way in which it concerns the Ameer of Bokhara.—Times of India.

Her Majesty's Indian troopship Yumna left Malta for Bombay, and the Euphrates arrived at Port Said, on the 6th inst.

News from Kumaon to Sept. 6 says:—"The weather still continues favourable for the tea crop, and with moderate rain and a fair modicum of sunshine a bumper outturn will be the result."

The excessive mortality in the North Western Provinces and Oudh began to decrease in July last, when only 91,619 deaths were registered, as against 120,767 in June. Still, the deaths were largely in excess of those in July last year, when only 65,551 were registered.

The value of cotton exported from India during the ten months ending July last fell considerably below eight crores of rupees. For the same period of last year the amount was roughly 9½ crores; for the ten months of 1875-76, 10½ crores; 1874-75, 14½ crores. In Bengal the amount has fallen since last year from 72 lakhs to less than 11 lakhs; in Bombay from 840½ lakhs to 720½ lakhs.

PUNA CANTONMENT.—The Commission which was assembled under the orders of the Government of India to inquire into the affairs of the Puna Cantonment, after sitting over two months, has nearly finished its labours. We believe the Commission will animadvert strongly on the lax manner in which the cantonment regulations are enforced, but what else can be expected when there is no one held responsible, for the Cantonment Commission consists of about twelve members, most of whom are changed monthly, so there is absolutely no one on whom to fix responsibility. We have frequently heard of the defective system of sanitation carried on in the cantonment; the wretched condition and dirty state of the markets; filthy servants' latrines in the generality of the compounds; dusty roads in spite of an over-abundant supply of water; laxity of the police; and a general want of supervision in the bazaar; these shortcomings, which are easy to remedy, are not creditable to so important a station.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

LIFE IN MONGHYR.*

MR. LOCKWOOD has succeeded in writing a book which is in its conception strictly original. A work on India containing an allusion to the history or topography of the country is a rarity. What then, it may be asked, is the author's object in publishing his work? The answer may be given in his own words. "I shall be glad if I can attract the attention of those who have an Indian career before them to the study of natural history—a subject which at present appears insufficiently developed in the education of youth."

Evidently a disciple of Malthus, Mr. Lockwood regards with alarm the increase of population in India, as instanced in the district of Monghyr, the scene of his "Sport and Travel," and he appears to view as a friend of mankind the dreadful scourge of cholera which, "notwithstanding the distribution of pills at the police stations, acts as one of the principal checks to keep the people within bounds." In spite, however, of this epidemic we are given a glowing picture of the future, seeing that the tendency of mankind is to increase in a geometrical ratio, whilst the food supply stands still. It is somewhat puzzling, side by side with this alarming picture, to read an account of a poor, low-caste man's dinner-party. He purchases a large fish, weighing fifty pounds, for a shilling, another shilling will procure a hundred pounds of sweet potatoes; salt and spice cost tenpence more, and if the luxury of meat be indulged in, a third shilling will procure a fat kid. A penny suffices for cucumbers or melons enough for the whole party, whilst a farthing will enable them all to smoke till midnight if they feel inclined to do so. These, at any rate, are not famine prices.

An amusing tale is narrated of a contretemps which occurred on the occasion of a trial of skill as to the comparative merits of the English and native modes of casting nets. Just as Mr. Lockwood was making his cast, "a Raja appeared, with a considerable retinue, on the scene, one of his followers bearing the silver stick, which proclaimed his dignity and his rank. Although he was, no doubt, surprised to find me engaged in so low-caste an occupation, he was far too good a courtier to say so; indeed, he was loud in his declarations that I should exhibit unusual skill, and that it would be quite an honour for any fish to be captured by my hands. I begged the bystanders to keep clear, as the net often took an erratic course; but the little Raja, to show his confidence in my skill, persisted in standing near. When all was ready, and everyone was on the tip-toe of expectation, I whirled the net over my head, and, quite unintentionally, threw it with the utmost precision over the little Raja, who was brought to his knees, and so effectually entangled in the folds of string that he could not move." The contretemps fortunately ended in general laughter, in which the Raja himself heartily joined.

A novel and ingenious way of detecting theft merits notice. A bracelet had disappeared. Accordingly two marked rupees, powdered over with nitrate of silver, were placed on the spot where the bracelet had been left. The money disappeared, whereupon all the servants were summoned, by beat of drum, and placed in a line. One man had a caustic mark on his hand; seeing the scar, he turned and fled across the country as hard as his legs could carry him, pursued by his fellow-servants, who vied with each other in catching him. When captured the culprit was drummed off the premises.

Christianity in Monghyr, or indeed in Bengal, does not appear to flourish, if at least the opinion of Dr. Duff be accepted. That illustrious philanthropist is said to have avowed that he had never known a true convert to the Christian faith. As regards Monghyr, a native inspector, giving his verbal report about a notorious bad character, said to Mr. Lockwood:—"Well, sir, you may imagine what a bad lot this fellow is, when I tell you he has declared himself a Christian."

The flocks of wild fowl in Monghyr almost defy computation. On the lake at Sakarpoor Mr. Lockwood computed that he saw on one occasion upwards of 400,000 birds of various species. Well might he wish he could transport the lake to England, where it would let for more than a thousand pounds per annum to supply the London markets.

Our author's departure from Monghyr gave rise to an incident which cannot better be described than in his own words:—"A most worthy gentleman my landlord was, with a pedigree longer than my arm, and the morning before I left he appeared in order to wish me good-bye. Beneath his ample flowing garment he carried what appeared to be a silver vase or flagon, and a thought passed through my head that this must be a presentation cup, subscribed for by the thousands of Mahomedans that owed him allegiance. I asked him what he had got there, as, with an air of much importance, he placed the mysterious article upon the table. He explained that he had determined to present a spittoon of pewter to my wife, the exact counterpart to one in constant use by his wife whilst chewing betel, for this, he said, would recall him to our minds when the seas divided us."

As might have been expected, Mr. Lockwood's work teems with anecdotes respecting birds, beasts, fishes, reptiles, insects, and every creature that "moveth upon the face of the earth," while numerous are the adventures which befell the author while in pursuit of his favourite pastime of hunting for specimens to be placed in the museum at Monghyr. A deep admirer of nature himself, he seeks to inspire his readers with a similar feeling; and it is refreshing to turn aside for a while from the midst of "wars and rumours of wars," and the excitement of political troubles, to contemplate the beauties of creation as depicted in "Natural History, Sport, and Travel," a most readable and interesting book, the charm of which is materially enhanced by the modest and unobtrusive manner in which the varied experiences and adventures of an Indian district officer are laid before the public.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE ROMAN-URDŪ JOURNAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Your last number contains a letter from Mr. Pincott, in which, while commenting on a recent number of the Roman-Urdū Journal, he takes occasion to advocate the introduction of the Latin characters to represent alphabets of Oriental languages. He rightly states that the matter is one of "serious import." Undoubtedly; and it is no less of consequence that the evils of the system which it is proposed to introduce should be exposed. It would be beyond the province of a letter to discuss this matter exhaustively, but a few vital difficulties may with advantage be enumerated.

First, as to the "powers" of the Roman letters. As Mr. Pincott truly writes, "the mass of mankind are familiar with only one language and one set of phonetic principles." Precisely; and for this very reason an inhabitant of England, of France, of Italy, of Spain, &c., would each give a different pronunciation to the same word when written in the Roman character, hence the introduction of the Roman-Urdū alphabet would give rise to a regular medley of pronunciations as varied as the nations who might adopt the innovation. "But," says Mr. Pincott, "the powers of the letters must always be learned for every language." It is not very clear to what letters allusion is made. If the Roman alphabet is meant, how can the powers be learned of letters which vary in almost every European language which employs them? If, on the other hand, the native character is intended, surely the argument overreaches itself, for to learn the powers of native letters, and, when this is done, to express the sounds in another alphabet, savours somewhat of absurdity.

A real objection to the application of the Roman character Eastern languages, such is the opinion of Mr. Pincott, "lies in the accessory dots and marks, the misplacement or omission of which is productive of confusion and error. In the native characters the form of a word tends to preserve its identity; but when the many s's, n's, t's, s's, &c., are all reduced to a dead level, distinguished from each other only by dots, liable to misplacement, a goodly crop of errors must result. And, as a matter of fact, every Eastern book yet printed in the Roman character, which I have seen, is bountifully besprinkled with errors of the kind indicated. The two pages of transliterated matter in the number of the Journal before me bristle with errors of this class—the result of simple carelessness."

The evil as regards accuracy is undoubted, but need constitute no serious objection to the introduction of the Roman-Urdū alphabet. Inaccuracy is, more or less, inherent to all systems, and the argument, if pressed to its logical conclusion, would result in the exclusion of all modes of expressing ideas in writing. But a more important consideration is the fact that the use of the Roman system of transliteration, far from aiding in the mastery of the language, in reality throws impediments in the way. The reason is obvious: in the native character there are many letters which, though very similar in sound, are totally distinct in shape; hence there can be no confusion in their use. Whereas, in the Roman-Urdū alphabet, the sounds are expressed by the same letters, subject only to various diacritical marks over or under them; the eye, therefore, is well nigh precluded from lending its aid. Now, experience in one's own language teaches that in reading a word it is chiefly the eye which conveys the meaning to the mind; that is to say, the mechanical act of spelling each word is a mode of proceeding adopted only by schoolboys, and is never done in everyday life. To such an extent does the transliteration of the native alphabet into Roman characters impede the reading of an Oriental composition, that one of the first Arabic scholars of the day avows that he always retransliterates the words back to their original character before he can understand their meaning.

Again, what a difficulty is portended in the following paragraph in Mr. Pincott's letter:—

"The first step in real education is precision of thought. Romanisers must write in one definite system of transliteration, which must be considered as unalterable as the very letters of the alphabet itself. The whims and fancies of transliterators having subsided, the commonly adopted system should be carefully and strictly applied, it being held to be as great an error to write ka for kā, as to omit the final alif when using the native character. In carrying this out faithfully it will be found that much of the facility claimed for the Roman character will disappear. To omit the diacritical marks is simply to abandon accuracy in favour of speed."

* "Natural History, Sport, and Travel." By EDWARD LOCKWOOD, Bengal Civil Service, late Magistrate of Monghyr. London: Wm. H. Allen and Co.

But how is this uniformity to be secured? There are already numerous systems of transliteration, notably those of Sir W. Jones, Mr. Lane, Mirza Ibrahim, &c., and how can one of them be compulsorily adopted? Is a royal Ukase to be issued enjoining, on pain of death, the use of a certain system? and, even if so, which one is to be selected? They all have advantages and disadvantages which preponderate according to the object for which the language is studied. There are also letters in Eastern alphabets which have no equivalent representatives in Western tongues—how are they to be expressed?

But Mr. Pincott descends from the pinnacle of philology to the arena of "practical advantage":—

"The advantages claimed for Roman letters are mechanical and economical, and have nothing whatever to do with philology. Roman letters are easily written, easily read by anybody, and are cheaply and expeditiously printed; therefore, any information couched in Roman characters can be readily made available to masses of people."

Even from this point of view, however, the advocates of the new system can with difficulty hold their own; Oriental printing is much more cheap than it used to be, and it is questionable if printing with native type is materially more expensive than that in the Roman character. Having reason lately to consult Messrs. Allen in regard to the publication of a Persian classic, I ascertained not only that they have a fount of Oriental type, but that their readers are competent scholars, well able to supervise the printing of any works in the Eastern language of which the firm may undertake the publication, so that authors abroad do not need to have their proof-sheets sent out to them for correction. In fact, they may be assured that their MS. will not only be accurately reproduced, but any accidental mistakes rectified. The saving in cost of publication is obviously considerable, and it is doubtful whether the use of Roman characters is productive of any great advantage in this respect. Space would not allow more ample discussion of this important matter, which merits far more consideration than it has hitherto received. As I have no wish, by intruding my name, to make the question in any way personal, I prefer to remain an anonymous correspondent. W.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE FUTURE RELATIONS OF ENGLAND AND INDIA.

WHAT is the meaning to India of the new policy at home? Its opponents have described it as an "Imperialising" policy, and its friends, after some protesting, seem willing to accept the term "Imperial" as a not unfair description of its main object and tendency. But they accept that term neither in its old Roman sense of a government by military authority, nor in its modern French sense of a government by despotic power. No stronger opponents could be found to Caesarism, in whatever disguise, than the British House of Commons. That House has accepted the new policy almost by acclamation, and its acceptance has been ratified by the general approval of the English people. Yet in the moment of their triumph, the Ministers who inaugurated the policy have, sensitively, we think, shrunk from any parade of military force and rejected the idea of an English welcome to the Indian troops. Nor have they disclosed less caution in avoiding any of the recognised features of Imperialism in its modern Napoleonic form. Their Imperialism has reference to foreign and colonial relations rather than to internal institutions, and may be described, not untruly by its well-wishers, as a recognition of the external responsibilities of the English nation. Of that recognition India has received a liberal share. At the commencement of last year the Queen formally accepted the position which she had held in reality since 1858 as the successor to the Delhi throne and Empress of India. The solemn pageantry of the Installation meant more, however, than the mere adoption of a title, and events have not been slow to disclose its practical significance. India has been called on to participate in a fuller measure than heretofore in the hopes, fears, responsibilities, and glories of the English race. Her interests have been recognised as of scarcely less importance in the national councils than those of the people whom these councils directly represent. England has declared to the world that she considers India an integral part of her Empire, and that she is prepared to defend her Indian interests, whether by diplomacy or by war, to the same extent and by the same means as she defends her domestic interests. The Installation at Delhi last year has been brought home to the understanding of every European Court during the past few months. Not only Russia, but each one of the great Powers represented at the Berlin Congress, has been made to realise this. As the Queen, by the Delhi Installation, stood forward as the lawful Sovereign of India under the same title as its former native Emperors, so England has now stood forth before the European Powers as responsible for the interests of India, determined to protect her approaches, and able to command her resources. It is clear that if England is to avail herself when she pleases of the resources of India, she must in justice pledge her own resources for the use of India should occasion arise. The cry of "Perish India," heretofore merely foolish, becomes henceforth a crime, involving a breach of national faith. The meaning to India of the new policy is that the English nation distinctly, and in a most solemn and public manner, denounces that cry; that England ratifies as a nation, in the face of Europe, the closer, or at any rate, the more formally expressed, relations which the Proclamation at Delhi announced last year to the Indian people.—Englishman.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

FAMINE IN CASHMERE.—In a sermon for subscriptions for the relief of the sufferers from famine in Cashmere, preached at Simla by Archdeacon Matthew, he stated that the missionaries in Cashmere reported that one-fourth of the population had already perished from hunger.—Times of India.

Her Majesty's confirmation of the appointment of Mr. Arthur Wilson, barrister-at-law, as a judge of the High Court of Calcutta, in the room of the Hon. Mr. Justice Markby, has been officially communicated to the Government of India. Mr. Wilson is expected in Calcutta before the opening of the courts in November next.

FATAL CHARITY.—Disastrous consequences attended a recent distribution of the Maharajah Scindiah's charity at a garden-house at Benares. The rumour that each pauper present would receive Rs. 2 attracted crowds of people to the spot. When the gate was opened there was a rush into the garden; some ten persons were crushed to death and several others badly hurt.—Bombay Gazette.

PRECEDENCE OF BISHOPS.—His Excellency the Governor-General in Council has been pleased to determine that the newly-created Lord Bishop of Lahore and the Lord Bishop of Rangoon shall take rank in the Warrant of Precedence immediately after Additional Members of the Viceroy's Council. The Archdeacon of Lahore will take rank with officers entered as No. 57 in the warrant.—Indian Daily News.

TAGORE SCHOLARSHIP.—His Highness the Maharajah Jotendro Mohun Tagore Bahadoor has offered, and the Government, at the instance of the Director of Public Instruction, has accepted, a scholarship of Rs. 8 a month, to be called "Prosunno Kumar Tagore Scholarship," and a gold keyur or armet to be called "Hurro Kumar Tagore Keyur," which are to be annually awarded to two of the most successful private students from any of the toles in Bengal.—Indian Daily News.

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.—All the members of the Faculty of Medicine now in Calcutta, both native and European, have, with the exception of Dr. Kenneth Macleod, sent in their resignations to the Registrar of the Calcutta University. These gentlemen have not resigned their seats in the Senate. The Registrar of the University has declined to accept their resignations, and the matter was to be referred to the Senate at a meeting to be held on 21st ult.—Times of India.

PORT OF RANGOON.—It is stated in one of the local papers that the number of vessels entering the port of Rangoon from England, via the Suez Canal, amounted last year to 58, giving an aggregate of 64,000 tons. That Rangoon is destined to be a great and flourishing city, no one can doubt. It was little better than a humble fishing village when the British appropriated it in 1852, and it now boasts of a population estimated at over 100,000. Paddy has done a great deal for Rangoon, and the nick-name of Paddyland is not at all inapplicable.—Madras Times.

ASSAM JAILS.—The total number of prisoners confined in the Assam jails during 1877 was 9,012, which shows that the prison population is steadily increasing year by year, and the majority of the prisoners were between the ages of sixteen and forty. No reformatory is said to be necessary in the province for juvenile offenders, nor will the want of such an institution be felt for some time to come. A great number of escaped convicts are at present at large, and every effort is being made for their recapture.—Times of India.

SUICIDE AT SIMLA.—A determined suicide was committed on the 9th inst. by Mr. Howatson, a section writer in the Financial Office, who, in a state of drunkenness, shot himself with a Martini-Henry rifle in the Annandale-road. He had taken off his right boot, and, standing against a tree, he had pulled the trigger of the piece with his right toe, the bullet passing through his chin and right through his head. Death must have been instantaneous. The corpse was inspected by the medical officer, and an inquest held on the spot. The verdict was, that the deceased had committed suicide.—Times of India.

STEEL BARS FOR MANDALAY.—The Rangoon Times says:—"The round steel bars, said to have been intended to manufacture gun barrels out of, and which were detained at the Rangoon Custom House, have at last been made over to the King's agent here on payment of the customs dues, and they are to be shipped to Mandalay. There are some 6,000 of them; each is about 4ft. in length and 1¼ in. in diameter at one end, and 1 in. at the other. They looked marvellously like as if they were intended for rifle-barrels. They are perfectly solid, and it will prove a difficult job to drill them at Mandalay, if they are to be converted into gun-barrels instead of being used as garden fences, for which purpose they are now ostensibly being taken to that city."—Indian Daily News.

INDIGENT EUROPEANS.—An effort is being made to raise a fund for the education of the children of indigent Europeans, and for the formation of a society akin to the Punjab Masonic Institution. Subscriber of a certain amount, Rs. 100, we believe, will be entitled to a vote for the admission of a candidate to the benefits of the proposed society. The number of candidates to be brought on the fund will, of course, entirely depend upon the amount of subscriptions. Successful candidates are to be sent to some good school, and are to be there educated free of all expense in cases in which their parents cannot afford to pay for them. The full details of the proposed scheme have not yet been elaborated. The above, however, is its principal feature.—Friend of India.

THE PROGRESS OF HINDOO LADIES.—A correspondent informs a Calcutta native paper "that the Dacca community is in a state of great excitement in consequence of a respectable Hindoo lady taking service in the local adult female school. The conservative Hindoos are deeply offended, while progressive young Bengal are delirious with joy. The husband of the lady has taken sides with his wife, while her mother, a very respectable and wealthy lady, is dead against her accepting the appointment. Now, the question of right or wrong apart, Hindoo society, constituted as it is, cannot tolerate a respectable well-connected Hindoo lady serving on pay in any public school. Under the circumstances we think (says the editor) that the lady should not have set at naught the feelings of the Hindoo community to such an extent." The Hindoo lady teacher deserves the highest praise for her courage in entering upon an honourable profession, and in despising the stupid pride of the conservative Hindoos who would like to check her in the good work to which she has devoted herself.—Bombay Gazette.

RETIREMENT OF MR. MARBY.—The following resolution on the Honourable Mr. Marby's retirement from the Vice-Chancellorship of the Calcutta University appears in the last Gazette of India:—"The Governor-General in Council cannot allow you to lay down the Vice-Chancellorship of the University of Calcutta, on the occasion of your departure from India, without expressing his acknowledgments of the service you have done to the cause of education and enlightenment in India. While ably performing the arduous duties of a High Court Judge, you have, by precept and example, shown educated natives and Europeans how they can, consistently with the performance of their regular duties, actively promote the cause of intellectual progress. During the last two years you have most successfully guided the deliberations of the University Senate, with whom rests the practical control of higher education among 135 millions of Her Majesty's Indian subjects. His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council considers that your Vice-Chancellorship has been marked not only by steady and useful progress, but also by more than one important step of University reform."—Times of India.

THE LATE BABU THAKOORDAS CHUCKERBUTTY.—Another hard but quiet and modest worker, says the Hindoo Patriot, has passed away from amongst us in the person of the late Babu Thakoordas Chuckerbutty, Head Assistant of the Home Secretariat. He was formerly an assistant in the Bengal Secretariat, and was subsequently taken to the Board of Revenue, from which office he was transferred to the Home Secretariat by Sir William Grey, who was very fond of him. In this office he was highly appreciated by the distinguished gentlemen who from time to time held the office of Home Secretary since his appointment. But Babu Thakoordas Chuckerbutty's usefulness lay in another sphere. From early life he interested himself in the cause of education. He was the first person who introduced the Glasgow training system into India. He established a school at Jonye, where this system was regularly taught, and under his intelligent supervision the institution rapidly rose to the position of a first-class school. The Jonye School has sent forth several clever young men, many of whom are now members of the bar. In Calcutta he originally founded the institution which now goes by the name of the Metropolitan Institution. In consequence of a split in the management of the institution he separated, and established another school called the Training Academy, which is still in existence. Although a man of humble means, he spent much from his own pocket in the promotion of education, and also in succouring the poor. His death is regretted by a large circle of relatives and friends. He was about sixty years of age.

THE CALCUTTA MADRISAH.—From the annual report of this institution, read at the recent distribution of prizes, it appears that the number of students on the rolls of the Madrissah and its subordinate institutions on the 3rd March last was 1,012, of whom 238 were in the Arabic Department, 392 in the Anglo-Persian Department, and 382 in the Collinga Branch School. Of the 1,012 students, 655 were English and 357 were Oriental students. A remarkable fact in connection with the institution is that the boys are mostly Sunnis; out of the whole attendance only 21 students are Shiahs, 18 of whom are in the Anglo-Persian Department and 3 in the Branch School. For many years there has not been a single Shiah in the Arabic Department. In former times the number of Shiahs under instruction varied from 3 to 6, but since the appointment two years ago of a Shiah junior English teacher the number has increased. The parents of the students belong chiefly to the middle classes. The number of resident students on the 31st March was 45—21 in the Arabic Department and 24 in the Anglo-Persian Department. The behaviour of the boarders is said to have been good. The total expenditure on the Madrissah and the Collinga Branch School from 1st April, 1877, to 31st March, 1878, was Rs. 39,816-3-11. Seventeen candidates went up from the Anglo-Persian Department during the year for the University Entrance Examination, of whom 11 passed—3 in the first division, 6 in the second division, and 2 in the third division. The school gymnasium, started by Sir Richard Temple, was poorly attended during the term. It is said that the boys who take to gymnastics "make it their object to perform in public; nevertheless the gymnastic apparatus was much used in a desultory way."—Indian Daily News.

THE MURDER OF MR. COOPER.—In the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, British Burmah, on the 29th August, the criminal reference in the case of the Empress v. Kissen Singh was heard, and judgment delivered as follows:—"The prisoner was charged with the murders at Bhamo, in the territory of the King of Burmah, on the 24th April last, of Mr. Cooper, the Political Agent; of Mahomed Ibrahim, the jemadar, and Teepoo, a private of the Agency Guard. The prisoner said he was a Lucknow man; the Resident at Mandalay certified that the charge was one that ought to be inquired into in British India; and accordingly under Section 9 of Act XI. of 1872, the district magistrate of Thayetmyo held the preliminary inquiry. On commitment the prisoner was arraigned before Colonel Browne, the commissioner of Pegu, as sessions judge, and on the charge being read and explained to him, he pleaded guilty to each of the murders. He added—"I have no wish to live. I was subjected to a long course of tyranny and ill usage at Mr. Cooper's hands. He knew neither Hindustani nor Burmese, and I was helpless. I asked the missionaries to write a petition for me, but they would not. I was beaten, and insulted, and fined, and so I killed him." The prisoner gave a similar account to Colonel Davies, the committing magistrate. He alleged that he had several times been unjustly fined, called a pig and a dog, made to work as a gardener without pay, and on an occasion, three days before the murder, fined Rs. 10, and struck and kicked by Mr. Cooper. He had a spite against the jemadar, because he thought the latter wished to oust him in favour of a relation, and against Teepoo, because he believed he slandered him. There was evidence that he had been fined, but not that he had been ill treated. Colonel Browne, on the 21st instant, convicted the prisoner on his own plea, the depositions recorded by the magistrate showing clearly that the three deceased had been shot by the prisoner. The prisoner is shown to have gone with his rifle to Mr. Cooper's house, which he entered unobserved. Mr. Cooper was reading in a long chair after dinner when he was shot. The other two men were killed immediately afterwards outside. There is no evidence of grave and sudden provocation. An ordinary beating three days before, even if proved, cannot be so described. There are no circumstances extenuating the killing of the two men of the guard. I see no reason for mitigating the sentence. No appeal has been made. The jurisdiction of the Courts is that conferred by Act XI. of 1872, which was passed under the power conferred by 32 and 33 Vic., cap. 98. The Indian Legislature may make laws for all persons, being native Indian subjects of her Majesty, without and beyond, as well as within, the Indian territories under the dominion of her Majesty. By Sections 3 and 8 of Act XI. of 1872, the prisoner, though at Bhamo, was responsible to the criminal law of British India; and, as remarked by the sessions judge, was, as provided in Section 3 of the Penal Code, chargeable under that code. The jurisdiction is clear. I now confirm the sentence of death passed upon the prisoner, Kissen Singh.—JOHN JARDINE, Judicial Commissioner, British Burmah."

MADRAS.

MADRAS SAPPERS AND MINERS.—It has been decided that British non-commissioned officers of the Madras Sappers and Miners shall be entitled to free passages for their servants when travelling on duty.—Madras Times.

TRIAL OF A ZEMINDAR.—The Madras Mail states that the Zemindar of Cundrah Cottah in Tanjore has been acquitted or abetting dacoity. The trial, which lasted three days, caused great excitement, as the accused owns fifty villages. He was defended by Mr. Lascelles.

ACTION FOR LIBEL AGAINST THE "MADRAS TIMES."—Mr. Hill, an assistant traffic manager of the Madras Railway Company, has filed a suit in the High Court against the printer and publisher of the Madras Times for a libel in connection with the Naggery collision. The damages are laid at 25,000 rupees.—Madras Atheneum.

THE MUNICIPAL PRESIDENCYSHIP.—No one has yet been appointed by the Government to the office of President of the Madras Municipality. The name of Mr. J. Sturrock, one of the Under Secretaries of Government, is now spoken of in addition to the names of the gentlemen already given in connection with the appointment.—Madras Times.

RECOVERY OF WAGES.—The Superintendent of Marine in Madras has been authorised to sue for and recover in the manner provided by the Merchant Shipping Acts of 1854 and 1855 any wages or expenses chargeable upon a ship due to, or on account of seamen and apprentices, from any master, owner, or other person within the jurisdiction of the Madras courts.—Indian Daily News.

THE LATE FATHER LE ROUX.—The death is announced at Kitcherry, on the 9th ult., of Father Le Roux, Superior of the Monastery at that place, which he had founded in 1860. The seminary has already given six priests to the Madras Mission, and now contains 21 professed monks, 3 novices, and 4 postulants. The late superior commenced his missionary labours in India in 1838.—Madras Mail.

FAMINE COMMISSION.—An announcement in the Gazette states that a committee has been appointed, at the suggestion of the Government of India, to investigate some of the more important questions regarding irrigation which the commission have to consider, and that Col. J. Mullins, Chief Engineer for Irrigation, and Mr. E. Forster Webster, Collector of Tanjore, have been appointed members of the committee.—Madras Times.

DEATH OF MR. GORDON OUCHTERLONY.—We regret to announce the death of Gordon Ouchterlony, a son of the late Mr. James Ouchterlony, proprietor and editor of the old Madras Spectator, and one of the pioneers of coffee cultivation in the Wynaad. Young Ouchterlony, who was only twenty-eight years old, had already made a reputation for himself as a daring sportsman, who had succeeded in ridding the neighbourhood of Ootacamund of several tigers, and his death will be regretted by many visitors to the Hills, to whose recreation and amusement he contributed not a little.—Madras Mail, Sept. 14.

OFFICERS' QUARTERS, GENERAL HOSPITAL.—The local Surgeon-General, Indian Medical Department, has recently been turning his attention to the rate at which officers have been assessed at the General Hospital if there detained sick. Dr. George Smith found that hitherto the rate for all subalterns has been two rupees per diem, and officers of any higher rank five rupees per diem. As this scale was not sufficiently graduated, the Surgeon-General addressed Government with a view of adopting some scale that would assess officers with reference to the amounts of their incomes and not with reference to their rank alone. The Government have expressed their concurrence with this suggestion, and the following scale is to be the guide in future for effecting stoppages:—Amount of pay from Rs. 200 to Rs. 299 per mensem, daily stoppage Rs. 2; from Rs. 300 to Rs. 499 per mensem, daily stoppage Rs. 3; from Rs. 500 and upwards, daily stoppage Rs. 5.—Madras Times.

THE TRIPPLICANE LUNGURKHANA.—It appears from the report on the Triplicane Lungurkhana for the official year ending 31st March, 1878, that, during the year, 3,141 persons received relief, against 3,641 in 1876-77. Of the number relieved 102 were inmates of the institution, and 3,039 out-door; of the latter number 2,379 received relief in "cooked food," 237 in "raw rice," and 423 in money. The receipts of the institution amounted to Rs. 7,200, and the charges to Rs. 6,756 2-6, against Rs. 5,992 and Rs. 5,988, respectively, in 1876-77. The average charge per pauper relieved in 1877-78 was Rs. 2-1-9, while in 1876-77 it did not exceed Rs. 1-10-4 per pauper. The cause of the excess is probably to be explained by the larger expenditure, as compared with 1876-77, under the heads of "cooked food," "raw rice," and food and clothing for the 102 inmates of the institution. It is shown that, on the 1st April, 1878, there was a balance of Rs. 443-13-6. His Grace the Governor in Council considers that the time has arrived for the discontinuance of the additional grants authorised by G.O.'s, dated 12th November, 1876, No. 1,220, and 23rd August, 1877, No. 1,131, and directs that they be discontinued accordingly from the 1st September, 1878, no provision having been made for the purpose in the budget estimate for 1878-79 reviewed in G.O., dated 26th October, 1877, No. 2,588. The report is satisfactory, and reflects much credit on Mr. T. Ramachandra Row for his successful management of the institution.—Madras Times.

WILD BEASTS.—From a statement submitted to Government by the Board of Revenue showing the results of the measures adopted for the destruction of wild beasts and snakes in this Presidency during the year 1877, we find that the number of beasts killed during the year was 6,997, for which the amount paid away as rewards was Rs. 18,403, as follows:—Tigers, 154; leopards, 507; cheetahs, 135; bears, 150; wolves, 33; hyænas, 121; other animals, 5,897. The number of tigers killed in 1877 compare with 1876 as under:—1876, 236; 1877, 154. The decrease in the number killed is chiefly in Vizagapatam, Kistna, Coimbatore, and Malabar. Of the 154 tigers killed, two were trapped; the others seem to have been shot. In the number of leopards and cheetahs killed there is also a large decrease, the figures standing thus:—1876, 1,021; 1877, 642. The variations are chiefly in the districts of Vizagapatam, Godavery, Nellore, Cuddapah, North Arcot, Salem, and South Canara. The number of bears killed was as follows:—1876, 133; 1877, 150. The districts in which the greatest number of bears were killed are Ganjam 54, Vizagapatam 24, Godavery 22, Coimbatore 7, Nilgiris 6, Salem 5, and all other districts 15. Thirty-three wolves were killed in 1877 against thirty-nine in 1876. As regards hyænas the numbers destroyed stand thus:—1876, 164; 1877, 121. Out of the 121 killed, ninety were in the three northern districts of Ganjam, Vizagapatam, Godavery, and ten in Kurnool. The other animals killed were:—1876, 4,741; 1877, 5,897. The districts in which the largest number was killed are Vizagapatam 1,209, North Arcot 2,292, Salem 963, Nilgiris 129, all other districts 148. No rewards were granted for snakes killed. The total loss of cattle and human life by wild animals and snake-bite was as shown below. The results are satisfactory if the figures are reliable:—

BOMBAY.

TENT LASCARS.—The corps of Tent Lascars which existed in this Presidency has been abolished. Each corps will now be in possession of its complement of tents as in Bengal.—Times of India.

ESCAPE OF PRISONERS.—Recently fifteen prisoners broke out of the Murmugam Jail, in Goa, the guard fired on them; five were killed, five more wounded, and the remainder escaped unhurt.—Indian Daily News.

THE MARINE BATTALION.—It is the intention of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to take the Marine Battalion to Puna for instruction and field manoeuvres for about three months during the coming chill season. The regiment will proceed by route march during the month of November.—Times of India.

PENSION PAYMASTER.—The Government of India have been pleased to sanction the transfer of the Pension Paymaster, Presidency Circle, from Bombay to Puna, and the pensioners of the Bombay Circle being paid in future by the Assistant Presidency Paymaster. This arrangement will be carried out under detailed instructions to be issued by the Controller of Military Accounts, with effect from Oct. 1.—Times of India.

THE LATE MR. CURREY.—The following Government resolution was issued in a Gazette extraordinary on the 18th ult.:—“Government have learned with much regret the death of the late Mr. Charles Currey, formerly agent at the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company, and for some time chairman of the Town Council, in both of which appointments he did good service to his company, the city of Bombay, and Government.”—Times of India.

GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS.—We learn that the Bombay Government have received instructions to take over from the Great Indian Peninsula Company at the end of this year, and work on their own account, the Nizam's State Railway, the Dhond and Manmar line, the Wurdah Valley line, and the short branches to the Oomrawutte and Khangaum cotton markets, all of which are at present managed by the Great Indian Peninsula Company.—Englishman.

RAJKOT SCHOOL OF ART.—The chiefs of Kattiwar have decided to establish a School of Art at Rajkot on the model of the Jamsetjee School of Art at Bombay. A competent teacher and superintendent from that school is to be imported, and the different States have agreed to send pupils. In the beginning, drawing and painting only will be taught, but by-and-bye pottery and wood and metal-carving will be introduced. In order to spread and encourage the knowledge of the various arts and industries of the province, it is proposed to collect specimens of indigenous products and manufactures and lodge them in the school-house. The School of Arts will be placed under the supervision of the political agent. The maintenance of the school has been guaranteed for three years, and the States have agreed to subscribe every year a sum of Rs. 2,760 for the support of the same.—Englishman.

According to a Puna letter of September 10, a Government resolution has been passed, ordering that all poor relief houses shall now be closed in the Deccan. This amounts to a formal declaration that the famine is absolutely at an end. The resolution is not passed a day too soon, for the reports of the district officers show that the inmates of the relief houses are now merely the ordinary paupers who are usually supported by private charity and who can be safely left to shift for themselves again. Nothing has happened to mar the prospects of a glorious harvest in almost every part of the Deccan districts, and the condition of the people is already completely changed. The prices of grain are still very high, and will remain so till the end of this year, when the new grain will come freely into the market; for the old stocks of grain are quite exhausted, and a good deal of food is even now imported from Bombay for consumption in these districts, though the grain traffic from Upper India has ceased.

THE PERSIAN GULF.—By private advices from the Gulf we learn that the weather has been exceptionally hot all over. One writing from Bushire says:—“The weather has been most dreadful, I have never felt it so much. Almost always a south wind blowing, and so damp and hot. We hope a change for the better will come with the new moon. If we had not had a punkah pulled over our beds every night it would have been impossible to sleep at all through the awful heat. At Fao they have had the thermometer nearly steady at 112 deg. and damp. How they have lived, or can, is a wonder. Many natives have died from heat apoplexy at Bushire, and at Bussorah no less than twenty-three Europeans have died from the same cause! I think we may be grateful to have lived at all through it all." There have been breaks in the I. E. telegraph lines between here (Kurrachee) and Guader, two, we believe, one lasting ten days and the other three. The river is said to have overflowed the country 20 feet deep for some miles, and the restoration of the lines was a work of much difficulty and danger.—Civil and Military Gazette, Sept. 10.

THE PUNA SOLDIERS' PARK.—The Puna correspondent of the Bombay Gazette says that Major Trueman's plan for resuscitating the Soldiers' Garden here has been taken up by the Governor, and that Colonel Goodfellow is carrying out the instructions given by Sir Richard Temple personally for creating what is to be called the "Soldiers' Park" of Puna. The ground is no longer a wilderness. Flower beds having been marked out, and roads are being rapidly constructed in the portion of the land set aside as an ornamental garden. Over the rest of the area workpeople are busily engaged in clearing away the weeds, cutting the rank grass, lopping the trees, and generally creating order where only disorder reigned. A broad walk is being made along the bank of the canal from the Prince's Drive down to the nullah into which the water from the canal now overflows. There will be a carriage road parallel to this down the middle of the park, so that visitors can drive through it, or, if they prefer it, stop to walk about in the garden. One of the band stands which are always knocking about Puna has been brought here, and will be set up immediately. The grant for the park is only Rs. 2,500, which may be increased to Rs. 3,000 by the sale of the wood cut from the trees. This amount will not suffice to do all that is wanted, but it will give the park a start, and, as a standing establishment will be maintained henceforth to look after it—and it is estimated that in future years the returns from the garden land irrigated with the canal water will enable it to pay its way—we may look forward to seeing Sir Richard Temple's Swiss bridge over the canal built and other improvements effected next year.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM CYPRUS.—The Times of India reports the following arrivals of troops from Cyprus during the week:—H.M.'s ship Tamar, 2,034 tons, Capt. W. H. Liddell, arrived from Cyprus, which she left on Aug. 25, calling at Port Said on Aug. 27; Suez on Aug. 28; and Aden on Sept. 5. She brought 8 European and 15 native officers and 861 rank and file of H.M.'s 26th Bombay N.I., who were landed at Carnac Bunder. A pleasant voyage was experienced. The regiment goes to Ahmedabad. The transport steamship St. Osyth, 2,296 tons, Capt. B. McNabb, towing the ship Hospodar, 1,549 tons, Capt. R. K. Kelley, from Cyprus, Aug. 24, via Port Said, Suez, and Aden, with Government stores and troops. The St. Osyth brought the following troops:—687 officers and men of the 31st Punjab Infantry. The Hospodar brought the following troops:—Capt. Blakeley, R.A., Lieut. Downing, R.A., Surgeon Major Pennington, R.A., 67 non-commissioned officers and men, 94 native followers, and 58 horses of the F Battery 2nd Brigade Royal Artillery. The steamship Marina, 861 tons, Captain R. Ramsay, towing the ship Clydesdale, from Larnaka, which she left on Aug. 25, calling at Suez Aug. 30, and Aden Sept. 5. The Marina brought 253 officers and men of the 31st Bengal N.I., under the command of Major Tweedale, and Lieut. Ryland, and Surgeon Manson. After remaining outside the harbour on Tuesday night, the s.s. Macedonia and the s.s. Nankin anchored off the Carnac Bunder at 9 a.m. on Wednesday. The Macedonia brought 358 men, 86 followers, 5 horses, and 1 officer of the 13th Bengal N.I., and the Nankin 47 men and 24 followers of the 2nd Goorkhas, in charge of Capt. Hill, and the remaining half battalion of the 9th Bombay N.I., consisting of four officers and 397 men. The vessels left Cyprus respectively on the 25th and 26th August, calling at Suez and Aden, and a cheerful voyage was experienced the whole way. The 9th Bombay brought four sick and the 13th Bengal about as many. Two sepoy of the 13th died on the voyage. A day before leaving Cyprus a sepoy of the 13th, while at Baffo, levelled his gun at a comrade and shot him dead; another who ran up to the rescue would have probably shared the same fate had he had not succeeded in moving the muzzle off. As it was the gun was discharged and slightly grazed his shoulder. The culprit was brought down handcuffed, and will stand a court-martial at Agra. The troops landed at the Carnac Bunder during the afternoon in a heavy downpour of rain and received a warm greeting from their relatives and friends. The 9th Bombay shortly afterwards proceeded to their quarters behind the Crawford Markets; while the 2nd Goorkhas and the 13th Bengal left last night by special train to Jubbulpore, the former eventually for Dehra Doon and the latter for Agra. The hired transport steamship Suez, 1,390 tons, Commander J. Flint, from Cyprus, towing the hired transport ship Aros Bay, 1,412 tons, Commander G. B. Willes, from Cyprus via the Suez Canal. The Suez brought Colonel Blair, Sub-Lieut. Gordon, and Surgeon-Major Coleson, and 246 men of the 1st Bombay Lancers. The Aros Bay brought Captain Jones, Surgeon Constant, and 162 men and 79 horses of the 1st Bombay Lancers. The hired transport ship Brambletye, 1,495 tons, Commander M. Gibbs from Cyprus, in tow with transport steamship Macedonia, brought 135 men of the 1st Bombay Lancers, in charge of Lieut. Elliot.

The other hired transport Seaforth, 1,189 tons, Commander James Scott, which arrived in harbour on the same day in tow with transport steamship Nankin, from Cyprus, brought 123 men of the 1st Bombay Lancers in charge of Lieut. W. J. S. Jackson.

CEYLON.

COFFEE EXPORTS.—The shipments of coffee up to Sept. 10 amounted to 593,860 cwts., as compared with 899,148 cwts. at the same time last year.

SALE OF A COFFEE ESTATE.—The Ingestre Estate, in the Dickoya district, has been sold by the Honourable G. A. Talbot to Mr. W. G. Mackilligin and two partners for the sum of Rs. 160,000 cash. The property consists of 186½ acres coffee in full bearing; 40 acres two years old coffee; 4½ acres cinchona; 15 acres grass and 10 acres forest—total, 256 acres.—Ceylon Times.

COLOMBO WHARF AND WAREHOUSE COMPANY.—At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on Sept. 11, a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. for the half-year was approved of. The chairman and other speakers regarded the future prospects of the company as encouraging, more especially in consequence of Colombo being made a port of call for the mail steamers.—Ceylon Times.

AN ELEMENT OF BARBARISM.—In a breach of promise case recently tried at Colombo (damages laid at 50,000rs.) the counsel for the plaintiff, a Tamil maiden of sixteen, applied that her evidence might be taken by commission in her parents' residence, a mile distant, on the ground, as alleged by her father, that "she would not like to appear." Mr. Berwick, district judge, declined to "propagate, protect, and prolong such an element of barbarism." At the same time, all parties agreeing to a commission in the case of any English, Moorish, or other lady he would not interpose any objection.—Ceylon Times.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.—His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint C. M. Lushington, Esq., to be a Justice of the Peace for the district of Kurunegala; G. H. R. Willis, Esq., to be a Justice of the Peace for Avisawella district; and D. C. Wood, Esq., has been appointed Justice of the Peace and Deputy Coroner for the divisions of Udapalatta and Uda Bulatgama. Leave of absence from the 11th instant, having been granted to W. J. S. Boake, Esq., it is hereby notified that F. R. Ellis, Esq., has been appointed to act as Fiscal of the Central Province from that date and until the arrival of Mr. Conolly.—Gazette.

THE CEYLON COMMAND.—It is supposed that the "recall" of General Street, C.B., Commander-in-Chief in Ceylon, means nothing more than that Ceylon is to be reduced to a colonel's command. It is preposterous, says the Madras Times, that a general and an expensive staff should be maintained in a colony where the only military forces are a European regiment of infantry and three batteries of artillery, viz., one each at Colombo, Galle, and Trincomalee. There are no native troops in the island. At one time there were several regiments of Ceylon Rifles, but the last remaining one was disbanded in 1872 or 1873. The general's command ought to have been abolished at the same time. A good many of the old riflemen are now in the police, which numbers nearly fifteen hundred men.

THE BORNEO SCHEME.—The true story of the recent acquisition of territory in Borneo by Baron Overbeck and Mr. Dent, representing our English Association, is claimed to be told by the Ceylon Times, apparently on the authority of Mr. Dent, who was in Ceylon at the date of our advice. The rights over the territory were originally acquired by an American company, by whom they were assigned to the present possessors. The two representatives procured new and complete assignments from the Sultan of Bumia and Sooloo, both of whom claim jurisdiction in the north of Borneo, in the presence and with the approval of the Governor of Labuan. The sovereign and other rights of the large territory, 20,000 square miles, have been regularly acquired by the Association. Three establishments have been started, at Pappar and Tampasuk on the west, and at Sandacan on the east coast. The country extends north of a line drawn across the continent from Kimanis river to Sibuco river, say from 5.30 to 4.30 north latitude. It is interesting to know that this territory includes what the Sultan of Sooloo ceded to the East India Company in 1763, that being one of the conditions under which the British Admiral assisted in obtaining his release from imprisonment in Manila, and in reinstating him and his authority in Sooloo. The country is magnificently wooded, and contains vast tracts of alluvial soil, believed to be capable of profitable cultivation. The rivers are large, one of them having been ascended in a steamer for upwards of 200 miles. Labour is in scanty supply, though the hill tribes are said to be hardy, peaceable, and quite willing to work for hire; but it is thought the chief labour will have to be imported, probably from China, which is distant only a thousand miles.

It is reported that one of the Delhi princes has been appointed an extra assistant commissioner in the non-regulating districts of the North Western Provinces, and another of the princes as deputy-inspector in the Educational Department.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THE EFFECT OF OUR TRUE AFGHAN POLICY UPON THE PEOPLES OF INDIA.

THE most serious question Englishmen can put to themselves during the progress of the crisis on the Indian frontier is, What effect will a weak policy have on the peoples of India? There is another question intimately connected with the consideration of our true Afghan policy, and that is, What will be its effect upon the Indian nation? Both these questions, which equally bid us look into the future to discern what may be the outcome of our acts at the present moment, be they great, or be they little, are interrogatories that prudent men must always ask themselves when they are on the verge of events which must give the character to the history of the next generation. We are on the verge of such events in Afghanistan, and whether our policy be distinguished by statemanship and breadth of view, or by vacillation and utter want of purpose, we are alike preparing for ourselves a period that can easily be forecast.

In our article last week we dwelt upon the importance of our going into Afghanistan with a definite object before us. We regarded the matter simply as one of expedience in a military and political point of view, more especially with regard to our relations with Russia in Central Asia. But, after all, the real importance of the Afghan question is not as an external, but as an internal, affair. If the hostility or the friendship of the Afghan people were a matter of no value in the eyes of the Indian nation, Hindoo and Mussulman, then we might remain supremely indifferent to the affront Shere Ali has offered to us, or, to put it in the words of Lord Lawrence, we might "continue to bear with him." In short, if we could make up our minds on this point, there would be no necessity for us to trouble ourselves about trans-Indus questions at all. We might restore the Derajat and the Peshawur Valley to the Afghans at once, and we might look forward with just confidence to the appearance of the Cossack on the right bank of the Indus. But, in order to indulge in so Utopian a fancy, we must shut our eyes, not only to the teachings of past history, but also to the truths and facts of daily life. The Indian people have not forgotten the lessons of the past. They very clearly remember the succession of conquerors who have come from beyond the land of the mountains. The steady and apparently irresistible advance of Russia across the steppes and through the Khanates of Central Asia has kept alive the apprehension which has been a living force in Indian history since the days of Mahmoud of Ghizni and Mahomed of Ghor. That apprehension the persuasion of British strength has not allayed; the native of the plains of India still hugs his old belief that no rule can be permanent in Hindostan unless it embraces Afghanistan as well. Therefore, it may be said that the Afghan question is not one of foreign policy at all. We have not to look beyond the Oxus or to the rich valleys of Ferghana for a motive to inspire us with the determination that Shere Ali must be coerced and chastised. The motive is not to be found so much in the Russian cantonments on the borders of Bokhara as it is in the streets and the bazaars of our own Indian cities. It is when we look behind that we perceive reasons urging—nay, commanding us, to advance, and it is then that we magnify, perhaps, the motives which are undoubtedly to be found before us in the Bala Hissar of Cabul and the Council Chamber of Tashkent. The crisis which, at various periods, overtook every past rule in India has overtaken ours. We are brought face to face with that danger from Afghanistan and its neighbours which gave several dynasties to the throne of Delhi, and which made the Punjab for long an Afghan province. The peoples of India are on the tiptoe of expectation, and how we shall come out of the ordeal is the topic of the hour. But, although there is much agitation in the bosoms of our own Indian subjects, we have no suspicion of their loyalty so long as our arms are victorious, although our policy may be of the weakest kind. But it is different when we turn to the native States of India.

Attention has been called to the independent armies which are maintained by our Indian feudatories. Notice has been attracted to a danger which, once called attention to, becomes magnified unless it be promptly stamped out. The Indian princes have the same forces at their disposal that they had twelve months ago, but they are now put upon their guard. Their susceptibilities and their apprehension have been aroused by comments which are evidently intended to precede action. They are not one whit less powerful than they were, and they are three times as dangerous, because more likely to unite in order to avert a common overthrow. Before we have had time to put our house in order, or rather before we have availed ourselves of the ample time we have had given us for the dissolution of these armies, we are in the midst of an Afghan crisis which may become developed into one of still larger proportions with Russia. It is not to be supposed that the Mahratta Princes and the Nizam will readily acquiesce in a decree which forbids them to possess an armed force. Yet they cannot fail to have perceived the writing on the wall, that such an event is not far distant.

Will they, then, be as much influenced by a succès d'estime on the Afghan frontier as the less hostile and more easily managed inhabitants of our territory? It is not in human nature to assume that such will be the case. To overawe Central India at the same time that we boldly and irrevocably march into Cabul, will require a display of force that the present garrison of India is not capable of. But it will require more even than that. It will require the bold policy which the majority of Indian authorities approve, and which was sketched in our columns last week. The permanent annexation of Afghanistan, and the consequent change it would entail in the method of garrisoning India, would occasion the two immense advantages that we should, in the first place, have finally dispelled the Afghan danger, and that, in the second place, we should have secured strategical posts of the highest advantage. Only by coercing Shere Ali without a thought of shirking our duty, because it is attended by grave responsibility, can we hope to prevent an outbreak on the part of our Indian feudatories, and only by settling the Afghan question conclusively will it be possible for us to still "the thin small voice" of disaffection within our borders, which may any day become magnified to an irresistible roar in popular revolt. We have permitted the opportunity, which we should certainly have seized in 1870, after the publication of Lord Napier's report, to pass by for dealing with the independent armies before the Afghan crisis overtook us, and now we must rest content with reversing their natural order. The assertion that the Afghan question is one of internal policy serves to remind us of the financial aspect of the question, and how the concentration of our garrison might be attended with economy as well as an increase in military power. These advantages would be little as compared with the enormous benefit the whole Indian people would derive by the devotion of the ten millions sterling, now sunk annually by the Indian princes in unnecessary military armaments, to more useful purposes. The equilibrium of the Indian revenue is to be discovered in the capitals of Scindiah and his brother princes. These would be the effects of our true Afghan policy. We can stifle opposition, we can destroy Russian prestige, we can remove all danger from internal elements of discord, and we can take such measures afterwards as shall relieve India from all financial embarrassment by a brilliant campaign in Cabul, followed up by a brave and resolute policy. But to secure these in their entirety there must be no "trimming" in high quarters, and there is an immediate need for fresh European troops at Karachi and Bombay.

HOME NEWS.

MILITARY.—A detachment of the 5th Fusiliers left Berwick for Chatham on Wednesday morning previous to being sent to India in connection with the Afghan expedition.

BULLION.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Pekin is due at Southampton on the 14th inst., and brings £100,214, of which about £54,000 is in bar gold from Shanghai and Bombay, £27,000 is in gold coin from Yokohama, and £6,000 is in sovereigns from Madras.

NAVAL PRISON AT ADEN.—Aden will in future be a place to which naval prisoners can be consigned by ships employed in the Red Sea. Arrangements have been recently made to provide the necessary accommodation at the existing prison at Aden for the reception of seamen who commit themselves sufficiently gravely to merit close confinement in such warm quarters.—Army and Navy Gazette.

NEW P. AND O. STEAMERS.—The London and China Telegraph understands that the directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, with a view to the requirements of the new mail service, commencing in 1880, have contracted with Messrs. Caird and Co. for two steamers of 3,200 tons and 600-horse power nominal. The directors have also arranged for the refitting of eight of their steamers, in addition to the Indus, now undergoing repairs on the Clyde.

A BENGAL VETERAN.—The death is announced of Lieutenant-General John Liptrap, of the Bengal Infantry, at the age of eighty-two. He entered the Indian army in 1818, and served in the first Burmese war in 1824-25, the Afghan campaign of 1839-40, the Sutlej campaign of 1845-46, in the operations against the Sonthals in 1855, and during the Indian mutiny in 1857. He brought back the men of the 45th Native Infantry four different times when they mutinied, and was thanked in brigade orders for his daring bravery.

LIEUT. COL. DEEDES.—It should be known that, immediately after being gazetted Lieutenant-Colonel, Colonel Deedes applied to be seconded, but inasmuch as he had not been actually gazetted out when the news arrived of his battalion—the 2nd Battalion 60th Rifles—being warned for service, he at once voluntarily resigned his appointment of Private Secretary. The Secretary of State for War and his Royal Highness, however, considered that Colonel Deedes having been already designated as the new Assistant Under Secretary of State, it was for the good of the service that he should not surrender that appointment.—Army and Navy Gazette.

PARKES' MEMORIAL PRIZE ESSAY.—The subject selected for the Parkes' Memorial Prize Essay is, "On the Effects of Hygienic Measures in Arresting the Spread of Cholera." The prize is £100 in money and a gold medal. The competition is open to the medical officers of the Army, Navy, and Indian Services, of executive rank on full pay, with the exception of the assistant professors of the Army Medical School during their term of office. Essays are to be sent in to the committee of the fund, care of the Director General Army Medical Department, London, by Dec. 31, 1880.—Bombay Gazette.

COUNCIL DRAFTS.—In answer to an advertisement previously issued from the India Office very few Council drafts were tendered for yesterday. As far as we could hear, the Council would have allotted at 1s. 7½d.; but the number of tenders at that rate was so very small that it was resolved to make no allotment whatever. In the announcement issued last evening the Council state that tenders for bills to the amount of 40 lakhs of rupees will be received next Wednesday, and a certain amount of doubt seems to exist as to whether or not the Council will exercise their prerogative next week by offering for tender yesterday's unallotted bills, in addition to those since advertised. In some quarters, however, it is thought that no more than the 40 lakhs will be offered on the next occasion.—Times.

HUTTING FOR CYPRUS.—A wooden pavilion for Sir Garnet Wolseley, Governor of Cyprus, will form part of the hutting now in course of embarkation on board the Crayforth at Woolwich Arsenal. It will occupy three sides of a square, and each side will be 120ft. long. Most of the other material now being sent to the island is for the erection of officers' quarters, which will stand in spacious blocks. Two rooms, one 15ft. by 12ft., and the other 15ft. by 15ft., will be allotted to each officer, and somewhat superior accommodation is provided for the brigadier-general. Two non-commissioned officers and two sappers of the Royal Engineers will proceed to Cyprus with the hutting and superintend its erection, having received instruction in fitting the parts together in the contractors' yards at Westminster and Lambeth. Saturday next is named as the day for the ship's sailing, but yesterday morning, instead of five barge loads of timber arriving, as promised, only one reached the Arsenal, and the delay may cause the detention of the vessel until next week. Most of the huts for the men, the officers' mess room, and the hospital buildings have either reached the island or are on the way. The barrack huts will each accommodate twenty-four men.—Times.

HAVELOCK'S IRONSIDES.—Havelock was a "saint," as some jeeringly styled him, but he was a soldier, and had courage to brave more than jeers. He was shocked to find so little done for the spiritual welfare of soldiers, and he set to work to be a missionary in his own regiment. "Havelock's Ironsides" soon proved to the army that praying men were none the worse soldiers; when the "saints" got under arms the enemy was soon repulsed. The headquarters of his regiment the (13th) was at one time in one of the suburbs of Rangoon, in the very midst of temples and pagodas sacred to Buddha, and a little farther on was the grand pagoda of Gaudama. While all the revelry that is incident to a conquering host was going on, Havelock, seeing there was no chaplain with the British force, was able to draw away the men who were under his influence, for religious study, into one of the cloisters of the great pagoda. An officer passing round the temple "heard the sound of distant psalmody, and threading his way through the passages to the spot from which it proceeded, found himself in a small side chapel, with little images of Buddha, in the usual sitting posture, arranged round the room. A little oil lamp had been placed in the lap of each figure, and the pious soldiers of the 13th were standing up, with Havelock in the midst of them, singing a Christian hymn amidst these idolatrous associations. "It would be difficult," he says, "to imagine a more delightful or romantic episode in this scene of warfare and desolation."—From "Heroes of Britain in Peace and War," Part I.

DELHI AND LONDON BANK.—The half-yearly meeting of this company was held on the 9th inst., at 76, King William-street, City; D. H. Small, Esq., in the chair. The report stated that the directors proposed to devote £7,596 of the profits of the bank for the payment of a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, payable on or after the 22nd of October. The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said the accounts might be accepted as satisfactory, showing a slight increase in the general business of the bank, and they were enabled to declare the usual dividend. The recent unfortunate failure of the City of Glasgow Bank and of one of the old firms which had been so long connected with East Indian trade would, no doubt, have made some of the shareholders in this bank anxious to know whether they were implicated with them in any way, and it was his pleasing duty to inform them that they did not hold any of their acceptances. They regretted these failures, occurring as they did in the present state of trade, for, he said, they would undoubtedly exercise a weakening tendency upon the already restricted trade with the East. He intimated that they had succeeded in obtaining fresh offices in the new building erected on the site of the London Tavern in Bishopsgate-street. He had no doubt they would meet with the approval of the shareholders and prove advantageous to the bank. Colonel J. T. Smith, R.E., in seconding the motion, thought it was very satisfactory, in the present state of affairs, for them to show that the bank was not only safe, but also really prosperous. The report was unanimously adopted, and the usual complimentary vote terminated the proceedings.

COLONEL ALEXANDER ABERCROMBY NELSON, C.B., half-pay, late Depot Battalion, late Assistant Adjutant-General at Gibraltar, has been appointed to a brigade depot command, and replaces Colonel F. R. S. Flood, C.B., at Clonmel. Colonel Nelson joined the service in March, 1835, as an ensign in the 40th Regiment, and served as sub-assistant commissary-general in sole charge of the Bombay Army throughout the operations in Candahar and Afghanistan during 1841-42 under Sir William Nott (medal), and was present at the actions of Kale Sheekle, Nungie Keek, Ghuznee, and occupation of Cabul, and in all the affairs in which his regiment in the Candahar division was engaged in its progress through the Khoord Cabul, Tezeen, Jugdulluck, and Khyber Passes. Accompanied the Bombay troops under Colonel M. Stack from Ferozepore to effect a junction with the army under Sir Charles Napier in Scinde, and was present at the battle of Hyderabad (medal). Received the thanks of the Governor-General of India and also of the Bombay Government for the manner in which the duties of the Commissariat had been conducted. Served as aide-de-camp to Sir Thomas Vialant (his former commanding officer) in the action of Maharajpore, December 29, 1843, and had a horse shot under him (mentioned in despatches, bronze star). At the close of 1847 Captain Nelson retired on half-pay, joining the South Middlesex Militia for a short time in 1853-54. He was subsequently deputy-assistant adjutant-general at Portsmouth, and then went out to the Mauritius as assistant military secretary to General Breton, who commanded the troops until January, 1862. In August, 1861, Colonel Nelson was appointed town major at Guernsey, and he was next sent out to Jamaica as deputy adjutant-general, and on the outbreak of the rebellion in 1865 was appointed brigadier-general to command the troops in St. Thomas-in-the-East, receiving the thanks of the governor, and a vote, unanimously passed by the Jamaica House of Assembly, of 200 guineas for a testimonial in recognition of his services. He was promoted colonel in the army December 9, 1869, and half-pay lieutenant-colonel in June, 1877. From October, 1873, until the close of 1876, Colonel Nelson held the appointment of assistant adjutant-general at Gibraltar.—Naval and Military Gazette.

AFFAIRS IN CYPRUS.—From Cyprus, a new weekly journal now published in the island in English and Greek, we take the following items of news:—"The Land Commissioner's Court, a tribunal for regulating and investigating the titles of real estate, has already made great progress. It was stated that the Sultan intended to claim considerable estates as Crown property, but this statement has proved to be false. We are assured that His Majesty has sent over a person here, and that he wishes to purchase a large portion of the State lands, and that he has proposed to the English Government to establish a colony on such land of a large number of Mahomedan refugees from Bulgaria, who would be sent hither and established at the cost of the Turkish Government. Considering the large amount of money subscribed by England for these people, and the hardships they have already suffered, we trust that the English Government will be able to accede to the request, and that new Cyprus will prove itself as hospitable as any other part of Her Majesty's dominions. We are informed that the Court has already annulled several of the sales that were made just before the cession of the island. No one but the purchaser can, we think, object to this. We all know that, in every country in Europe, there are persons who have made fortunes by buying up land which they have, by some private means, discovered would shortly be required for some railway or public work. But then the prices given were usually tolerably fair; but in this island the case was mostly very different. Many of the people had been driven almost to despair by their burdens; in some cases even semi-official pressure was brought to bear upon them. In these circumstances, although the sale may have been legal in point of strict law, the Court would only perform an act of equity by rejecting the validity of some of these transactions. . . . Hitherto the mode in which the taxes were levied so hampered every kind of agricultural enterprise that landowners were forced to be content with, for the most part, grain crops, which suffered the least from the extortion and oppression of the tax-farmer. There are, however, many crops more suited to the climate which will pay much better, such as cotton and grapes. But these require capital, for which the first two or three years they will make no return. There is, therefore, a most urgent need of a good sound agricultural bank; such an institution, if it could enjoy some sort of charter from the Government, would obtain the confidence of all. At present there are plenty of usurers in the island who have always been ready to make advances; but farmers who have accepted their offers usually found themselves in the end so completely entangled that their land was soon lost to them, and if they were permitted to retain possession it was simply as tenants. Then, again, most of these usurers were farmers of the taxes, and used their twofold powers over their debtor in such a mode that now landholders are afraid to borrow, except in cases of the most dire necessity. It will take time to obtain their confidence. But a sound bank will soon have abundant field for safe investment."—Times.

LAMPLOUGH'S

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 18 3, in H. L. Lamplough's favour.
Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.
SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or billous sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor.

It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. ## ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1878.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, September 30; Madras and Allahabad, September 28; Calcutta, September 27.

THE report of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending September 17 are as follow:—General prospects in Madras continue to be fair. In Kurnool, Coimbatore, and some taluks of Malabar excessive rain has caused some slight injury to the crops; in other districts the rainfall has been moderate and sufficient. The numbers on relief works and gratuitously fed amounted to 98,569 and 60,518 respectively, being an increase of 529 and 1,520 as compared with the previous week. In Mysore prospects are very favourable, and prices show a downward tendency. There has been a further decrease in the number on relief works, while the number gratuitously relieved again shows a slight increase. In the Bombay Presidency excessive rain has fallen in a few places, and has caused some damage to the crops; locusts have also done injury in Sind; elsewhere crops are good. In the Central Provinces more rain is required in the eastern districts, while in some others excessive rain has injured millets, and a break is needed; prices are high, and cholera continues in several places. The rainfall in Berar has been heavy, and a break is wanted. In Central India ten inches of rain fell in Malwa in twenty-four hours, and has caused damage; prospects in Gwalior and Bundelkhand continue fair. In Rajputana the crops are generally good; locusts have been causing damage in parts. Rain has fallen in all the districts of Bengal, but more is still wanted in Pooree and Balasore, and parts of Midnapore and Shahabad. Damage has been caused in some places to amun crop on low lands by heavy rain and flood; general prospects, however, are very favourable. In Assam heavy rain continues, and some damage has been caused by floods. In Burma prospects have somewhat improved, but in most districts more rain is still needed. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh prospects continue favourable, as also in the Punjab. The fever usual at this season is prevalent in the last-named Province.

THE reports of the public health for the week ending Sept. 19 state that cholera is abating in Guzerat, Khandesh, the Konkan, and Deccan. Forty-four deaths occurred in Puna and the adjacent districts; eight in Satara. Fever and dysentery prevail in Kanara. In Chittagong, Backergunge, and Patna public health good, but fever is prevalent in Maldah, Hooghly, Sarun, Lohardugga, and Singhbhoom. Cholera in Cooch Behar, Hooghly, Sarun, and Gya, and very fatal in one village of Shahabad. In North West Province the fever usual at this season prevails generally. In Central Provinces cholera continues in several districts. In Arakan public health good, but fever and swellings of extremities were still prevalent. Cholera about Zeegong in Tharawaddy, and in Prome; thirty-five deaths in Tonk and district, but health generally good in other districts of British Burma. In Central India cholera in Nowgong, Gwalior, and Sutna; and in Rajputana, fifty deaths daily from cholera in Jodhpore, while fever prevails in Bickaneer, Meywar, Jhallawar, and Ulwar, but cholera is disappearing from Ajmere.

SINCE our last issue the telegraph has brought details of the interview between Major Cavagnari and Faiz Mahomed at Ali Musjid. The statement that the Afghan commander declared that he would have fired on the British officer but for old friendship resolves itself into a remark made by Faiz Mahomed that he himself was actuated by friendly feelings towards Major Cavagnari, in proof of which he pointed out that, instead of coming down to meet him, he might have ordered his men to fire on his party when it appeared, which exemplifies the Afghan notions of the inviolability of a flag of truce. The proposal for delay to give time for communications with Cabul being declined by Major Cavagnari, the Afghan grew warm, and declared the object of the British friendship was to stir up dissension in the Ameer's dominion by bribing "you and others," referring to the Khyberes. The hostility between these mountaineers and the Ameer appears to be established, but the Mohmunds seem to be wavering between the British and Afghan interest. A telegram from Peshawur of 19th states that their chief had arrived and tendered the allegiance of the whole tribe. Sundry reports are rife of the Ameer's state of preparation, his efforts to cause a Jihad to be proclaimed, which will attract the Wahabees to his standard, and the strengthening of Candahar, also of discussions at Cabul, where the Shiahhs refuse to support the Ameer. The Times' telegram of yesterday from Darjiling states that nothing is known of the nature of Shere Ali's reply to the Viceroy's missive which has been brought by Nawab Gholam Hussein Khan. It is good news to learn of the safe return of this brave and faithful old officer, a splendid example of Pathan fidelity, and of whom one of our best and bravest Punjab officers wrote:—"Gholam Hussein Khan is a perfect gentleman, with chivalrous ideas of honour, a peacemaker among his equals, kind and benevolent to those under him. In soldier-like spirit there is not probably his superior in the country." It is, however, reported that the Ameer is trying to effect a compromise, and will consent to come to Peshawur to meet the Viceroy; in the meantime using strenuous exertions to defend himself from the threatened attack.

THE latest military intelligence from India, furnished by the Times' telegram of yesterday, states that troops have been warned both in Calcutta and Bombay. In the latter place arrangements are being made for twenty-five special trains, carrying 5,000 troops and twenty-four guns, most of them for Mooltan. The regiments under orders include the 1st and 3rd Goorkhas, 8th Native Infantry, 9th Queen's, 2nd Battalion 16th Foot, 15th Hussars, and the 10th Bengal Lancers. As an illustration of the military ardour of the native troops it is reported that when Rattray's Sikhs, quartered near Calcutta, were informed on parade that they had received orders to proceed to the frontier, they cheered the intelligence to the echo with the wildest enthusiasm. Troops are being pushed on as fast as possible both for Thull and for Quetta, while large reserves are concentrating at Mooltan. It is anticipated now that there will be three columns of attack. The largest, consisting of upwards of 35,000 men, will be led by the Commander-in-Chief in person, and will make the main attack on Cabul by forcing the Khyber. The Thull column will co-operate by the Kuram route, while the Quetta column will take and hold Candahar. This, of course, is nothing more than report and inference drawn from the movements of troops. The military authorities are most anxious to guard against the publication of the intended lines of attack, as the Ameer is said to be kept perfectly advised through the means of spies of every publication of an intended movement. General Chamberlain is suffering from Peshawur fever, and will be unable, it is stated, to take the field. He will be enabled, nevertheless, to render valuable assistance in war counsels and general consultations as to strategic movements. Regiments from Lucknow and Jhansi have received notice to hold themselves in immediate readiness to move; the 9th Lancers, 10th Hussars, 72nd Highlanders, 85th Light Infantry, 24th Native Infantry, and a strong additional force of artillery have also received orders. At Rawul Pindi the 8th Foot, 13th Bengal Cavalry, 21st and 11th Native Infantry have been warned. Jamrood has been strongly fortified and reinforced by seven regiments and three batteries, including a 40-pounder battery. The road is to be thoroughly repaired from Peshawur to Jamrood, and the troops for Quetta from the North West Provinces and the Punjab are to be pushed on by the Indus Valley Railway to Khanpor, in the Bhawalpore State, about thirty miles below Mooltan; thence they will proceed some fifteen miles to Chachur, on the banks of the Indus, where a pontoon bridge will be established. This route is said to be much shorter than that by Mooltan and Dera Ghazi Khan. All men have been recalled to their regiments; sick men and women and children are ordered to proceed from Peshawur at once to Nowshera. The Rifle Brigade are ordered to Nowshera. Forts Michni, Abazai, and Shubkuddur are immediately to be reinforced by European infantry and Native cavalry, and troops have been moved out from Peshawur and encamped half-way to Jamrood in order to support that fort in the event of its being attacked by the Ameer's forces. The column of advance on Quetta is estimated at about 900 British and 3,100 Native soldiers, with 4,000 camp followers. The Native regiments are reported far short of this strength. All regiments take with them thirty days' supplies, and are described as fully and well equipped. All is reported now quiet at Quetta, but it is stated that Major Sandeman had been compelled to attack an Omurzae village with the 1st Punjab and a mountain battery, and that he had succeeded in capturing sixty-five horses, of the value of 20,000 rupees, and had brought in four headmen as hostages. This village is said, however, to be on debatable land, otherwise it would appear to indicate an unsettled, if not hostile, feeling. The field batteries from Hyderabad and Karachi have received immediate orders to proceed to Mooltan, and large depots are being formed at Mithankot and Rajanpur.

THE Maharajah of Alwar has volunteered to equip and maintain at his own expense a corps of camels and camel-drivers for service on the frontier. The Mhairwarra battalion has volunteered for frontier service, and their offer has been accepted by the Government. The following is the gazetted detail of the troops for the frontier operations:—Kuram Column, Major-General F. S. Roberts, V.C., C.B., commanding. Three batteries artillery, a squadron of 10th Hussars, 12th Bengal Cavalry, the 17th Foot, six regiments of Native Infantry. Mooltan Division, Lieutenant-General Donald Stewart, C.B., commanding. Eight batteries with siege train, 15th Hussars, two regiments of Bengal Cavalry, 59th and 60th Foot, and five Native regiments. Quetta Column, Major-General A. S. Biddulph, C.B., commanding. Two mountain and one field batteries, three regiments of native cavalry, the 18th Foot, and six regiments of native infantry. Sappers and engineers are attached to each column. The European troops ordered up to the North Western Frontier of India for service in the expected campaign in Afghanistan are stated to be:—Cavalry: 9th Lancers, 10th Hussars, and 15th Hussars. Horse Artillery: D, E, F, and I Troops A Brigade, A Troop B Brigade, H and I Troops C Brigade. Field Artillery: C, E, and G 3rd Brigade, C, E, and G 4th Brigade. Garrison Artillery: 13th and 16th 8th Brigade, 11th and 13th 9th Brigade, 5th, 6th, 8th, and 11th 11th Brigade. Infantry: 1-5th, 2-8th, 1-12th, 1-17th, 1-25th, 51st, 59th, 2-60th, 70th, 72nd, 81st, 85th, and 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade. The native troops will include, as far as our information at present extends—Cavalry: 8th, 12th, and 19th Bengal, 2nd and 5th Punjab. Infantry: 12th and 19th Bengal, 1st, 5th, and 29th Punjab, 30th Bombay, 12th and 19th Bengal, and 1st, 4th, and 5th Ghoorkhas.

THE Pioneer of the 2nd contains the following information supplied by the Military Department to the Press, which is noteworthy for comparison with the telegrams, and, above all, for the official comment with which it concludes:—"The force destined for the demonstration against Cabul will consist of the Quetta garrison, reinforced by 3,000 men. A mixed column, 4,000 strong to assemble at Thull. Both these immediately, and a reserve of 6,000 men to form at Mooltan or Sukkur early in November. General Roberts commands the Kohat column, with Lieutenant-Colonels A. H. Cobbe and J. A. Tytler as brigadiers of infantry, and Lieutenant Colonel H. H. Gough of cavalry; Major General Biddulph the Quetta column, with Colonels Appleyard and Nuttall, Bombay Staff Corps, as brigadiers of infantry. The cavalry brigade is not settled—probably Palliser or Fane. Major-General Stewart commands the reserve, with Colonel Baxter and Lieutenant-Colonel R. J. Hughes as brigadiers infantry. The entire force will be under the direction of Sir Neville Chamberlain. Lord William Beresford goes as Aide-de-Camp to General Roberts, whose staff will consist of Major Galbraith, 85th Foot, as Assistant Adjutant-General; Major Collett, Assistant Quartermaster-General, Captains Kennedy and Carr, 5th Punjab Cavalry, as Deputy Assistants Quartermaster-General; Lieutenant-Colonel A. E. Perkins, Chief Engineer; Lieutenants Spratt and Childers, Field Engineers; and Captain Wynne, 51st Foot, Field Telegraph Officer; Captains A. Scott, 4th Sikhs, Morton, 6th Foot, and Broome, 13th Bengal Cavalry are to be Majors of Brigade. General Biddulph's staff will comprise Major Wolseley as Assistant Adjutant-General; Captain R. G. Stewart as Assistant Quartermaster-General; and Captain Hanna and a Bombay officer as Deputy Assistants Quartermaster-General; Lieutenant Colonel Hitchens, Chief Engineer; Captain Bisset and Lieutenant M. Martin, Assistant Field Engineers; Captain H. M. Hutchinson, a Bombay officer, and Captain Abadie, 9th Lancers, Majors of Brigade. Colonel J. Hills will be Assistant Adjutant-General on General Stewart's Staff, and Captain E. F. Chapman one of his Assistant Quartermaster-Generals. The following troops go in addition to those announced:—F Battery A Brigade and 11th Battery 9th Brigade in command of Colonel A. H. Lindsay, with Lieutenant K. Stephenson as Adjutant; also 7th Company Sappers and Miners. These with the Kohat Column:—E Battery 4th Brigade, and No. 3 Peshawur Mountain Battery under Colonel C. Lemesurier, with Lieutenant Cruikshank as Adjutant, also 5th Company Sappers and Miners and 32nd Pioneers. These to Quetta:—A Battery B Brigade, G Battery 4th Brigade, 11th Battery 11th Brigade, also 5-11th R.A., 9-11th R.A., and one Garrison Battery from Madras, and one from Bombay with siege train. The above detail is liable to alteration, but its general accuracy may be trusted. Discredit all the wild rumours afloat about an advance upon Cabul. It is trusted that a strong demonstration may, by convincing the Ameer of his helplessness, bring him to his senses; and no such measure will be adopted save as a very last resort, if even then."

ITEMS of news, which indicate the secret working of the Russian-Afghan combination, are contained in a telegram from Berlin, Oct. 18. The St. Petersburg Ruski Mir says that General Stoletoff, on his return to Tashkent on Sept. 15, was accompanied by an Afghan Embassy, headed by Munshi Mahammed Hassan Khan, Shere Ali's Minister of the Interior. On Sept. 22 General Stoletoff left Tashkent for Livadia. The Afghan Minister remained at Tashkent, awaiting General Stoletoff's return from the Crimean Palace of the Czar. From a Tashkent letter in the Ruski Mir it appears that the general started on his mission to Cabul from Samarcand, where he had awaited instructions, on the 14th July. It is to be presumed, therefore, that the Russian Government telegraphed to him on the 13th, the very day the Treaty of Berlin was signed—in other words, that the mission to Afghanistan was a set-off to the treaty. The letter describes the mission as designed to "form direct commercial relations as well with Afghanistan as with India, and to express our gratitude to Shere Ali for his attitude towards Russia during the Russo-Turkish war." On the other hand, the Sultan has evinced his gratitude by despatching a letter to the Ameer of Afghanistan, calling upon him as a good Mussulman to come to an amicable arrangement with the English Government; while the Turkish journals declare that Shere Ali, by making war against England, the sole ally of Islam, would draw upon himself the censure, not only of all Mohammedan sovereigns, but of every Mussulman.

A CALCUTTA telegram, dated 17th inst., states that it is officially announced that the total amount of Five-and-a-Half per Cent. Rupee Stock tendered for conversion with the new Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Transfer Loan is Rs. 78,673,400, leaving Rs. 19,778,300 for redemption on May 1, 1879. Tenders for the balance of the new Transfer Loan will not be accepted below par.

THE most recent telegram from Burma states that the new King has been universally acknowledged, and has, in consequence, consented to reign constitutionally in a qualified sense, the supreme power being vested in the Ministers conjointly with the King. New oaths of allegiance have accordingly been taken in the Legislative Council.

A WELL-KNOWN principle of our régime in India forbids Government servants not merely to receive gratuities or even presents, but to take part in any trade transaction or derive emolument, other than the salaries of their offices, from any of the departmental expenditure. That sahibs gain nothing by the sometimes unwelcome process of improvement which they have to enforce, is a law inexplicable to the Oriental mind, which goes far to make the operation of our raj at least respected. Thus, when Government undertook the education of the people, officers of the Education Department were strictly prohibited from deriving any profit from the sale of books used in the various schools, and an instance of the infraction of this rule in the Presidency of Bombay was visited with dismissal from the service of the offending Director of Public Instruction. Notwithstanding this warning, we learn that another Director has been beneficially interested in the sale, not of one, but of many school books used in his department. Primers, reading-books, text-books, and even copies of the Khoran in Arabic, have been sold in thousands, from which the official Director of Public Instruction has derived emolument; thus not only violating the rule as to profits, but seriously jeopardising the reputation for religious impartiality which must be an inalienable characteristic of our government. Care seems to have been taken to prevent the proprietorship of some of these works being traced, as, by another infraction, not of Indian, but of English law, the title-page simply bears the statement of being printed in London, without any printer's or publisher's name. We are hardly able to credit the additional statement—that these practices, having come to the knowledge of the local Government, the official delinquent has not been deprived of his office, but simply compelled to disgorge his profits, while the Government continue on their own account the sale of these illegal publications.

IN a resolution on the agricultural prospects of the North West Provinces, Sir George Couper gives it as his opinion "that though, for various reasons—the long break that followed on the first fall of rain, the scarcity and badness of seed, the unwillingness of cultivators to sow while the character of the season was doubtful—the area under cultivation is below the average usually sown in the kharif, and of some crops, as rice, the out-turn must be deficient, there is no reason now to anticipate a general failure. On the contrary, if the weather continue favourable, there is good ground to hope that there will be a fair harvest of the coarser grains, which constitute the food of the poorer classes, the food-store of the country will be replenished, and prices will fall. In some districts where the distress from the drought of 1877 and the partial failure of the rabi of 1878 was greatest, it will probably be necessary to give relief until the kharif is ripe, and in a very few even to continue relief operations into the cold season; but there will not be any necessity for organising relief measures on so large a scale as seemed likely to be necessary when the weather was such that there was grave cause for fear that another kharif would be lost."

It is not calculated to make us proud of the past administration of the province of Behar, or, as we are now taught to call it, Bihâr, when we are told by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal that the existing condition of the ryots presents such features as "the loose system of zemindari accounts, the entire absence of leases and counterparts, the universal prevalence of illegal distraint, the oppression incident to the realisation of rents in kind, the practice of amalgamating holdings so as to destroy evidence of the continuous occupation," to say nothing of the tediousness and uncertainty of legal process. To prepare a scheme of legislative reform for these evils, "which prevent any possible development of prosperity," is the task proposed to a mixed committee of five official and non-official European and native gentlemen, well acquainted with the land system of Bihâr, who will prepare a draft bill, the provisions of which will tend to improve the system of zemindari accounts in connection with the obligations imposed on putwaries; to encourage or render compulsory interchange of pottahs and kaboolyuts; to insist on the use of counterfoil receipts; to cheapen registration; to discourage amalgamation of old and new holdings; to allow occupancy rights to be transferable by sale, and to create certain presumptions of law in favour of the ryot; to simplify and amend the law of distraint, and to make illegal distraint, or distraint of crops, specially punishable; to limit the right to enhance, and make illegal enhancement punishable; to make the demand of illegal cesses punishable; and to recognise and provide by law for the system of payment in kind, which obtains largely in the province. To these may be added the provision of a summary procedure as in the Bengal bill for the recovery of undisputed arrears of rent; the empowering of collectors to effect a settlement in certain disputed cases.

A CIRCULAR has been addressed to all magistrates and deputy-commissioners in the N.W.P. and Oudh, intimating that the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner does not think it advisable to make wholesale releases of prisoners at present while grain is still so dear, but that they should prepare at once lists of prisoners confined in the jails of their respective districts who might, in the terms of the order of the Government of India, be released as soon as grain becomes cheaper.

THE net excise revenue of the Bhagpore division rose from Rs. 6,59,158 in 1876-77 to Rs. 7,92,459 in the past year, being an increase of 20 per cent. The Commissioner considers this striking increase to be quite exceptional, and argues that it cannot be due to the general prosperity of the agricultural classes during the year, for the labouring class, who are the greatest consumers of intoxicating liquors and drugs, were not in easier circumstances than usual. It is true that the consumption of liquors and the drugs by the labouring classes is brought more to the notice of European officers, as they make no secret of their fondness for such articles. But it is a matter of universal experience that a prosperous agricultural year invariably leads to a larger consumption of intoxicants, and the Lieutenant Governor fears that indulgence of this kind is largely on the increase among respectable Hindoos of all classes, though it is only among the lower classes that it ordinarily attracts attention. The substitution of outstills for central distilleries came into force at the close of the year but has not been extended to the Sonthal Pergunnahs.

THE Maharajah of Cashmere has proposed to the British authorities to arrange measures in view of the famine in Cashmere for the more speedy importation of grain, and also to facilitate the emigration of those distressed Cashmires who may be unable to obtain support.

Two attacks upon the Vernacular Press Act have been made by two entirely different bodies, who agree, if not in asking the repeal of Act IX., at least in petitioning for such amendments as would materially lessen the powers of the Act. The British Indian Association concludes a very lengthy memorial by praying that if, from considerations of State policy, the Act cannot be repealed, "your Excellency in Council may be pleased, 1stly, to modify it by restricting its scope only to the offence of sedition by leaving the criminal intimidation of private individuals and public officers for extortion or other evil purposes to the operation of the ordinary law of the land; 2ndly, to omit the restrictive clauses relating to Oriental literature; and, 3rdly, to provide a fair judicial trial for all offences under the Act." With the Association's views the Committee of the Calcutta Christian Book and Tract Society seem to agree in the main, as they "are not aware of anything at present in the state of British India demanding such exceptional legislation, especially as regards religious books." The last clause refers to their particular grievance, as they "cannot shut their eyes to the fact that some of the tracts and books which, in the interest of truth, they must publish," might excite antipathy between persons of different castes, religions, or sects. They therefore pray that when the Vernacular Press Act is amended, "the words castes, religions, or sects be omitted from Clause A of Section 3 as far as it regards Section 10."

THE advice of that able and far-seeing statesman, Sir Bartle Frere, that our naval forces in Indian waters should be strengthened, was written some years ago, although the public only profited by its perusal last week. By a strange coincidence our last advices from Bombay state that serious piracies are reported in the Persian Gulf, the Turkish authorities being unable to control the Arabs. The British naval force will therefore probably be strengthened at once, especially as the British Government has, it will be remembered, undertaken the naval police of a large extent of these coasts for the protection of the very important commerce which exists with India.

OUR last issue contained a Government resolution acknowledging the great public services of Mr. Justice Markby, both on the Bench and as Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University. This was supplemented by two farewell addresses, one emanating from the Students' Association, and the other from the Pleaders of the High Court. The students testify to "the warm personal interest in all matters affecting education, the genuine sympathy with the educated people of the country, and the unceasing exertions in their behalf, which shall make your name fondly cherished and gratefully remembered." The address which the pleaders presented, enclosed in a silver casket, spoke in high terms of sincere eulogy of the manner in which for twelve years the retiring judge had discharged his official duties, which were fully endorsed in a sportive judgment delivered by the Acting Chief Justice, Mr. Jackson, who overruled his colleague's modest disclaimer. Space does not permit us to give in full either address or reply, but we cannot refrain from quoting Mr. Markby's allusion to the native bar, to elevate which he has done so much. "For that bar, notwithstanding difficulties and dangers which it would be unwise to ignore, and which it is impossible not to foresee, I predict a high future as one of the most useful institutions of the country."

SOME of our Indian contemporaries seem to have accepted as indisputable the statement made by the assassin of the late Mr. Cooper, that the Political Resident at Bhamo knew neither Hindustani nor Burmese. There is no need to vindicate the choice made by the superior authorities, which sent the lamented Pioneer of Commerce to fill for the second time the difficult post at Bhamo. But it is due to his many friends to record two facts bearing upon his acquaintance with vernacular tongues. First, when the Burmese Ambassadors were in this country some years ago, Mr. Cooper was able to converse with them in their own language, and this occurred previous to his first appointment. The second is, that his private letters, of a recent date, mentioned that he was studying Hindustani, and expected very shortly to pass the prescribed examination. These simple statements need no comment from us. The words of the Secretary of State's despatch, published in our last issue, are an honourable tribute to his public services, which will be gladly read by the numerous friends in England, India, and China who knew and loved the brave, generous, and warm-hearted T. T. Cooper.

SUNDRY officious friends of India at home, who are wont to picture a grasping Government stripping, under the name of assessment, the poor cultivator of the returns of his labour, may read with profit the remarks made by Hon. Mr. Gibbs at a recent meeting of the Bombay Legislative Council. He called attention to the fact that one of the vernacular papers lamented that the assessment which is put on land generally is so excessively high, and suggested to Government to have mercy on the ryots, and in future to be content with taking not more than one-fourth portion of the gross produce. "Well," said the hon. member, "that is rather ridiculous, because the Government have never, in any single case, taken so much as one-fourth. I have been making inquiries from the Hon. Colonel Anderson, who has charge of the records of what is called the crop experiments, taken every year in all parts of the Presidency, in order to try and find out what proportion the assessment actually bears to the gross produce of the land; and I believe it may be said that, assuming ordinary cultivation, the maximum portion of the gross produce taken as assessment is one-seventh, and this is exceptional, and the minimum is one-fortieth, or in isolated cases, for the common grains, even less. I think it is as well that these facts should be made known, because, as has been often observed, there is great misunderstanding on this subject of the Government assessment on the land. In a case chosen specially this year, as being as poor and careless a form of cultivation as could be found—salt, rice, and land in Canara—the gross produce is valued at Rs. 13, while the assessment was Rs. 2½."

REMARKING on the correspondence reporting the submission of the Bunerwal tribe, and the details of the settlement effected with them, the Secretary of State expresses his opinion that Major Cavagnari deserves credit for the foresight and ability displayed by him in the affair, and considers that the services of Captain Warburton, the Jaghirdar of Ismaila, and the native officials concerned are deserving of commendation.

THE preliminary report of the Select Committee on the bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to stamps and court fees, together with the bill as settled by them, has been published in the Gazette of India. The original intention of combining in one enactment the law relating to general stamps and that relating to court fees has been abandoned. The provisions common to the two laws were few in number, and the trouble of finding a given item would have been increased by the amalgamation, to the great inconvenience of busy men. Further, the subject of court fees was not ripe for immediate treatment, and persistence in the original intention would consequently have involved unnecessary delay in the enactment of the new law for general stamps. The bill as now settled deals, therefore, with the latter only. Among the more important of the changes, we note that the duties on bills of exchange and promissory notes, which it was proposed to raise some 50 per cent., are maintained at the old rates. The duties on marine policies of insurance are also kept at the former rates, and those on other policies are raised 50 per cent. only, instead of 75 per cent. The minimum rate of two annas is continued as regards bonds for amounts not exceeding ten rupees, while the duties on bonds and conveyances for amounts above Rs. 1,000 are to ascend by steps of Rs. 2-8 and Rs. 5, instead of Rs. 5 and Rs. 10, with the effect of maintaining the existing rates of duty on amounts ranging between Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 10,000. The proposal to take duty on receipts between ten and twenty rupees has been abandoned, and receipts for money paid without consideration are exempted. The duty payable on articles of clerkship is reduced from Rs. 500 to Rs. 250; while, on the other hand, bought and sold notes and enrolments of vakils are added to the schedule, and the stamp on articles of association is raised from fifteen to twenty-five rupees.

AN interesting letter on the subject of the sufferings of the Mecca pilgrims will be found in another page. With reference to the prospects of bettering the condition of these poor devotees the Bombay Gazette informs us that Lord Salisbury has suggested to the Secretary of State the advisability of sending from India an enlightened Moslem doctor to Mecca during the approaching pilgrimage season, to report fully on the sanitary condition of the pilgrims at that place. It is believed that this proposal, if carried out, would place the Home Government in a better position to make the proper representations at Constantinople and Alexandria than is now the case, when the Egyptian authorities shelter themselves, as regards the imposition of quarantines, behind the alleged inefficiency of the Turkish authorities. Such a step might go far towards remedying present evils, and may be of great benefit to Indian pilgrims.

THE draft of a bill, to be styled "The Indian Merchant Shipping Bill of 1878," is under the consideration of the Government of India, and copies of it have been submitted to the Port Commissioners and other local authorities for their opinion. It is contemplated that the Act shall come into force from January 1, 1879, and it will empower the local Government, on the receipt of any complaint which may lead to the belief that a British ship is unsafe, to provisionally order the detention of such ship for the purpose of being surveyed, a written statement of the grounds of such detention being forthwith served on the master of such ship. The power to appoint a surveyor to report on the ship will rest with the Government, and the master or owner will have the option of nominating an assessor to accompany the surveyor. In cases when the surveyor and assessor agree that the ship should be detained or released, the local Government shall cause the ship to be detained or released accordingly, and the owner or master shall have no appeal; but if the surveyor and assessor differ in their report, the local Government may act as if the requisition had not been made, and the owner or master shall have such appeal as the Act will provide. The local Government will be empowered to appoint detaining officers for the better execution of the Act. At each port there will also be a court of survey, empanelled in a manner similar to the Marine Courts, with whom will be vested the final power to release or detain vessels. Provision is also made for the costs of detention, and damages incidental to the wrongful detention of a ship, with supplementary provision for enforcing the detention of a ship, penalty for proceeding to sea after detention, delegation of power to Port Commissioners in Calcutta, and various other clauses.

THE new Larnaca journal, Cyprus, says "that on Wednesday, the 19th ult., an English auction took place in this town. Mr. Meddows was the auctioneer. We mention the fact as we believe this was the first English auction ever held in the island."

CYPRUS.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

NICOSIA, OCT. 9.—The creation of Executive and Legislative Councils for the Island of Cyprus is notified to-day in Turkish and Greek placards in the streets of Nicosia. The following members are to constitute the respective councils:—Executive Council: Major Gen. W. Payn, C.B., Col. G. R. Greaves, C.B., Mr. G. W. Kellner, C.S.I., Mr. C. A. Cookson. The same gentlemen, with the addition of the following non-official members, constitute the Legislative Council: Mustafa Fuad Effendi, Richard Mattei, Esq. (of Larnaca), George Glykus (of Nicosia). The questions of a new tariff, law, current coinage, and stamps will be among the first to be considered.

It is satisfactory to be able to report that the customs have already yielded about £17,000 for the last two months, and there is no reason to fear that there will be any falling off during the current year. When we consider that under Turkish administration they yielded but £22,000 per annum we may look with some confidence to the revenue returns. Indeed, if this be taken as a sample, we need not fear a surplus wherewith to pay our bill to Turkey.

The police force is now thoroughly organised, and is composed of a very fine body of men. They number in all over 500, of whom 150 are mounted. In Larnaca they are already on duty, and if they do not give entire satisfaction the fault lies on the side of zeal.

Apropos of Larnaca, the activity to which I referred in my first letter is taking solid shape, and has already received recognition from the Government. There is to be a real Mayor and Town Council there—the latter to consist of twelve persons, six of whom will be chosen by the Government, who retain a discretionary power of removal should the experiment not prove satisfactory. The Municipality have already taken active steps for the rebuilding of the sea wall, the repair and lighting of the streets, the development of a proper system of drainage, and the supply of water. Not least among these improvements will rank the new quay, which is rapidly progressing. Larnaca, as you know, possesses a newspaper entitled Cyprus, published weekly in Greek and English—it is now making arrangements for races, to be held annually at a place called St. George, close by the town, on which occasion there will be an important horse fair. We are also to have steeplechases at Nicosia shortly.

The 101st Regiment left the island on the evening of the 7th for Halifax in the troopship Orontes. Both officers and men were very popular at Larnaca, and their departure is much regretted. By the courteous permission of Colonel Delafosse the band used to play every evening. There are now left here the 42nd (Black Watch), who are scattered about the island, some at Baffo, the main body at Kyrenia, and the 71st H.L.I., who are at Matthiadi, the new brigade headquarters under General Payn, C.B., where the huts are being rapidly erected, the old encampment at Dali (Idalion) having been broken up. The fever that still prevails, and which has been supplemented by an outbreak of ague, has now reached its highest point, but there is no reason to suppose that the sickness will increase or continue at its present high rate. The weather is, and has been for the last three weeks, more like early June weather in England when it is fine. No rain has fallen since the 19th Sept. Apart from any question of the men having lived too freely, the blame rests mainly with the Government. Instead of taking such precautions as are invariably taken in India and other hot climates, the very opposite policy was adopted. No rest was afforded the troops on arrival. They were landed in a hurry and sent at once up country in heavy marching order, on scant rations, and under a burning sun. The fever soon made its appearance, but the warning was neglected. The men have all along been allowed to expose themselves to the sun and dews as if they had been in England. Something, of course, may be urged for the Government on the plea of necessity, but not much. As it is, those who have escaped a more or less severe attack of illness may be counted on the fingers, and nearly a score of fine fellows have found a premature grave in Cyprus. Utterly false conclusions have in consequence been drawn as to the climate from these statistics, dwelt upon with such undue emphasis by the enemies of the Government. I would advise those who wish the truth to consult Mr. Lang's article in Macmillan for September. His account of the climate is both just and moderate in tone, and is the more worthy of attention from its being the result of long personal experience.

I hear that a considerable sum of money has been voted by the Government for the construction of military roads between Matthiadi, Larnaca, and Nicosia, and for the further improvement of the highway between the capital and Larnaca. The latter is already in very fair condition owing to the work done by the Bengal Sappers.

Lieut. Kitchener, who is favourably known by his survey of Asia Minor, and by the new map of Palestine which he has just completed, has arrived, and is about to commence the survey of this island. Mr. Hepworth Dixon, the author, who came with him with the intention of accompanying the expedition, met with a fall from his horse in riding over to the villa of Major di Cesnola, the American Consul, but was not seriously hurt. He is at present staying there, and report says that he intends to write a book about Cyprus. He is now without a host, Major di Cesnola having been arrested for making excavations in search of antiquities, contrary to the express orders of the Government. Mr. Wood, of Ephesus fame, is also here prospecting, and has, I believe, not only scented the Temple of Venus, but also discovered the agora that supplied the ancient Chittim.

The Governor-General in Council is pleased to direct that the duty on all still wines imported into British India shall henceforth be one rupee per imperial gallon, or six quart bottles.

The quantity of cotton shipped from ports in Sind to foreign or external ports during the month of August was 1,885 bales, or 7,38,864 lb. (1,154 candies and 304 lb.) valued at Rs. 1,83,650.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

HISTORY OF THE INDIAN MUTINY.*

No one who reads these pages can regret that, instead of taking up the narrative of the great Indian Mutiny from the point where Sir John Kaye left it unfinished, Colonel Malleon has chosen to "ignore the third volume and to take up the story from the end of the second." It is proverbially a difficult task to continue a history, but, when the subject involved so many clashing interests, it was hardly in the nature of things that any one could be found to carry on the unfinished work and complete the edifice according to the plan of the original architect. The reasons which compelled Colonel Malleon to treat the third volume as unwritten, to pull down, so to speak, so much of his predecessor's building, are given in a manly and straightforward manner in the preface. Differing strongly as to the conduct of the then Government, he could only have chosen one of two courses—either to attempt a totally independent work, or proceed, as requested, with Sir John Kaye's history, and effect a junction where he found it possible. The result is that he has given us a deeply interesting record, which no one who commences the perusal will leave unfinished, and which even those who may differ from the author in opinion on debatable points must commend for its power of grouping dramatically the facts gathered together with obvious care and industry, and its effective word-painting, even though excess of colouring be sometimes chargeable. The author necessarily has found himself hampered by the necessity of adhering as much as possible to the general scheme of Sir John Kaye's work. The deviation therefrom, which has included in this volume the story of the first relief of Lakhnao, or Lucknow, to use the familiar name, and postponed to the subsequent portion the capture of Delhi, or Dehli, is fully justified. The reader feels that the narrative of the reconquest is better postponed, and rises from the perusal of this story of the four months' agony and doubt, chequered with partial successes, with a feeling of expectancy for that chapter which shall narrate the peripeteia of the rebels and the restoration of the English dominion. While, however, we think no one can dispute the superior effectiveness of the rearrangement of the various episodes, it must have been foreseen that the bold expression of opinion, different from those of his predecessor, would awaken a clamour of open dissent, or arouse secret anger, which would vent itself in captious criticism. Our author evidently fears not one or the other, and with no stinted measure deals out praise or blame as seems good to him. But his praise and blame are always supported by good reasoning, which, if not always convincing, demonstrates a thoroughness of purpose and an earnest desire to be just. At the same time, the reader must feel that the strong feelings of a passionate period should be toned down in an historical work, which should aim at being an enduring record of the events of an epoch in our history. Looking back, we desire to learn the secret causes, as well as the ebullitions of the volcanic fires which threatened to wrap our Empire in ruin, and to have exhibited in their due relative positions the men who either succeeded in checking, or those whose inertness, indecision, or incapacity to appreciate the real state of affairs assisted the progress of the conflagration. Colonel Malleon brings out strongly the errors of a policy which had aroused disaffection and revolt, whether in dealing with a single ruler, as in Jhansi, or with classes as in Oudh, and he pitilessly exposes the "teigning confidence," alternating with panic, that marked the first dealings with the mutineers. His portraits of the chief actors, too, are lifelike, even if they sometimes occupy too much canvas. We read with deeply-stirred feelings his descriptions, brief but pathetic, of the sufferings of the innocent victims of ruthless treachery, or indignation with the pusillanimity of some whom the great struggle revealed as unfit, while we gladly hail the due meed of praise awarded to calm wisdom in council and dauntless heroism in the field. At the same time we are apt to think of "the infinitely little" if personal controversies are thrust into disproportionate prominence, even though our sympathies are enlisted on the side of the writer; thus we cannot help feeling that too much space is accorded to the advocacy of the claims of Mr. Tayler; while, as a necessary consequence of this, too great prominence is given to the conduct of Mr. Money. We fully concur in the opinion so ably maintained by Colonel Malleon, that the Patna Commissioner deserved far other treatment. Sir John Kaye has recorded his opinion that the orders issued by Mr. Tayler were not of a character to merit the condemnation which Government passed on them. The proofs of Mr. Tayler's sagacity with regard to the Wahabi conspirators which later years have given would fully justify an authoritative confirmation of the opinion, "Time has shown that he was right," quoted on p. 121. Colonel Malleon is a right fearless and outspoken champion, and we hope that a second edition will contain a brief acknowledgment of success of his cause, in the place of the somewhat protracted appeal on behalf of his client. Some of the critics of these pages have taken great exception to the so-called grandiloquence of description as applied to combats where but a few, numerically speaking, were engaged on the one side.

* "History of the Indian Mutiny, 1857-58." Commencing from the Close of the Second Volume of Sir John Kaye's "History of the Sepoy War." By Colonel G. B. MALLEON, C.S.I. Vol. I. London: William H. Allen and Co.

Somehow we have yet to learn that no enthusiasm must be called for except for grand armies; that heroism is to be an attribute only of multitudes. "Our own Correspondent" would have lavished a wealth of words on Thermopylæ had such a being been there to record the triumphant defeat of the "three hundred." The defence and relief of Arah, and the attacks and repulses of the leaguers of Lakhnao, are not topics which the historian can treat as though they were but incidents in a campaign. If Colonel Malleon seems at times to employ almost a poetic license in the use of epithets and imagery, it seems by no means misplaced, as we read his clear and heart-stirring narrative of the first siege of the Residency, which he modestly styles an imperfect history. It is necessary to follow the progress of the mutiny in Oudh, as detailed in Book IX., thoroughly to appreciate the truth of the following observations:—"It is not too much to assert that the siege of the Residency kept in Oudh for five months immense masses of the regular army, troops who, but for that defence, would have been employed either in overrunning the North West or in reinforcing the garrison of Dehli. That defence was, in a word, necessary to the maintenance of the hold of England on India." Such was the military value of the heroic defence—in recording which surely no words are able to do full justice to the patience and courage, of the steadfast endurance and dauntless bravery, of the European defenders, or the unswerving fidelity of the native portion of the little garrison whose labours and dangers are so graphically depicted in the pages before us. Colonel Malleon is a strict purist in Indian orthography, and we have no doubt that every accent over each vowel is right, but we submit with all deference that English readers must be somewhat disconcerted by the novel nomenclature. The Colonel is a more rigid precisian than Dr. Hunter, whose corrected list of names has been approved by Government, but cannot as yet be said to form a standard for public use. In many English homes hearts still throb and eyes moisten at the names of Cawnpore and Lucknow; is it well to puzzle the eager reader with Lakhnao and Kāhnpur, even though the latter spelling does justice to the eponymic claims of Krishna? We think that, in a work which ought to be a standard book of reference in every library, such names, at least, as have become "familiar as household words" might have been retained in their inaccurate but too well-known form. We would further suggest that a glossary should be complete, which cannot be said of that furnished in the commencement of the volume.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE ROMAN-URDŪ JOURNAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I am sure that the "serious import" of the extended use of the Roman character in India will plead successfully with you for a little more space to enable me to relieve somewhat the mind of your correspondent, "W.," and the minds of those who think with him.

If "W." will again read my remarks with care, he will find that I am in no fair sense an advocate of the thing he dreads. My sympathies, like his, are purely scholastic; but, because I am penetrated with the necessity for maintaining the native characters for scholastic, literary, antiquarian, and other such purposes, I am not prepared to shut my eyes resolutely to the advantages which a cheap and legible character would confer on the administration and popular education of India.

I have not descended from "a pinnacle of philology," for, in fact, I was never on one, having expressly stated that the matter in question "has nothing whatever to do with philology." It need be, I could argue the matter philologically, socially, and politically. Philologically, I agree with "W."; the weight of evidence is crushingly against the Roman character. Socially, the advantage lies the other way, for the Roman character would be productive of great social benefit. Politically, any interference with such matters demands serious consideration, and therefore neutrality is, at present, the prudent course for Government.

I am afraid "W." is not of a logical turn of mind, or he would not have penned his remarks about the powers of letters. My statement that "the mass of mankind are familiar with only one language, and one set of phonetic principles," was clearly this, that if the now sadly ignorant villagers of India were cheaply and expeditiously taught to read and write their own languages in Roman characters, it would be perfectly immaterial to them that in Europe, or elsewhere, the same marks were used to express somewhat different sounds.

But, in truth, why need we trouble our heads with the different nationalities of Europe? India belongs to England and is governed by Englishmen; the two languages, English and Urdū, are brought face to face, and the real question at issue is which of the two characters is the more practically useful, that of Englishmen or those now in use in India.

Historically, "W." is as much at fault as he is logically. For the Arabic alphabet now used, with accessory dots, to represent Urdū is as foreign to that language as the Roman character itself. It was imposed on the country by Mohammedan conquerors in recent times, and is far less suited to represent Urdū sounds than the Roman character to which "W." objects. I could easily write in Arabic letters hundreds of Urdû words which no person in the world could pronounce correctly by mere inspection of the characters. Much the same is the case with Persian, a language with which, it seems, "W." is acquainted. Here also a Semitic alphabet was imposed upon a Aryan people at the sword's point. Would "W." go so far in his advocacy of "native" characters as to prefer to read his Persian in its native Pahlavi, or "Zend," dresses? Does it not seem as though "W." thought that if Arabs impose their alphabet upon Persia, it is a good and advantageous change; if Persians impose their adopted and adapted alphabet upon India, it is excellent and proper; but if Englishmen ask that Indians may not be restrained from voluntarily adopting the character which has proved an unspeakable blessing to the most intellectual nations of the earth, their desire is held to be an outrage and an absurdity?

With respect to comparative costliness, it is clear that Messrs. Allen and Co. enjoy exceptional advantages for the production of Eastern books; "but one swallow does not make a summer."

"W." may rest assured that the Persian classic upon which he is engaged can be published in Arabic letters without a sigh or a protest from anyone who wishes to see the millions of utterly ignorant peasants of India acquire some amount of useful knowledge by the adoption of the cheap and legible Roman character.—Yours, &c.,
FREDERIC PINCOTT.

PILGRIMS TO MECCA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Referring to the announcement that our Government have taken notice of the treatment of pilgrims to Mecca, perhaps you will not consider a few facts that came under my observation out of place in your columns. In the winter of 1876 I was chief officer of a British steamer, and we loaded a full cargo of cotton and cotton-seed at Alexandria for England. The vessel was quite full, and the hatches battened down. We then learned that we were to take about 400 Arabs on deck, pilgrims returning from Mecca to Algiers. These poor people complained bitterly of the extortion to which they had been subjected throughout the length of their travels, and now they were bundled on our deck without shelter of any kind for a winter's passage down the Mediterranean. We encountered nothing but bad westerly gales, the ship at times making only two knots an hour, and throwing water all over her. The sight of the misery of these poor people—men, women, and children—I shall never forget. We made a long passage, owing to the heavy weather, and the people were on board twelve days. We did all we could for them, the captain, officers, and engineers giving up all our rooms to them, and squeezing together in a small deck saloon. The crew, too, took as many as they could stow down into their fore-castle, while as many as we thought safe were allowed into the bunkers on top of the coal. In spite of all this the exposure was so great that many died—on an average, about four or five a day. I noticed that the bodies of the dead were very much emaciated, and their galled frames told that a pilgrimage to Mecca, in spite of modern facilities of travel, is an undertaking that few but Mohammedans would care to face. Observation has taught me that a Mohammedan will save up for years to go on this journey, and that they start with ample means to secure the necessary accommodation under ordinary circumstances. I hope that the British Government will find out where the fault lies; that in the present day the pilgrimage should be the last journey of so many British subjects, as well as others.—I am, Sir, yours truly,
C. B.

THE "PIONEER" ON THE SALT TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Pioneer in the article referred to in your number of Oct. 5 may argue that a salt tax of Rs. 2.8 per maund is not excessive; but when it is considered that such a rate is equal to more than 500 per cent on the value of Indian salt, and that the recent increase in the duty from Rs. 1.13 to Rs. 2.8 has added £500,000 to the burdens of the wretched famine-stricken populations of Madras and Bombay, there can be no difficulty in forming an idea of the amount of suffering which the new salt tax has inflicted in those unfortunate provinces. It is a delusion to say that the people of India pay no other tax but the salt duty, when the land whence they derive their food and the other necessities of life is taxed to an extent unknown in any other civilised country, and when the severity of the land tax is further enhanced by the blind policy of periodical revisions calculated most effectually to check agriculture and perpetuate the wretched and helpless condition of the people.—I am, sir, your obedient servant,
J. DACOSTA.

RADICAL CHANGES IN THE RELATIONS OF THE ARMIES OF NATIVE FEUDATORIES TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

EVERY politician who has closely examined the conditions necessary to the welfare of the Indian Empire must have entertained serious doubts about the advisability of allowing native feudatories to keep up large armies which, presuming that their raison d'être is to protect the States to which they belong from attack, are worse than useless, inasmuch as, while the British Government has undertaken to protect all India, they are a grievous burden upon the labouring classes, a refuge for lazy scoundrelism, and a constant temptation to princes whose ambition happens to be greater than their perception of the fact that their wisest course is to identify themselves in all things with the interests of the paramount Power. Successive Governments of India, in the endeavour to carry out the Queen's Proclamation to the letter, have shrunk from interfering with the practice of native chiefs annually squandering large sums of money upon their armies, although they have not been without a suspicion that independent armies scattered over India were not unlike so much dynamite which might explode with any accident. There are philanthropists who hold that these detached congeries of fighting men ought not to be interfered with because interference would practically be equivalent to casting a slur upon the loyalty of native princes. But what is the use of these native armies? What enemy has any native State to fear? Take Gwalior, Indore, Baroda, or Hyderabad, for instance; for the repulse of what outside foe is it necessary for these places to keep the enormous standing armies they do? If it is English troops that are feared, then the chiefs are not showing that confidence in English honour which they are in the habit of professing, and the Government of India is unwise to permit military systems to exist which are created ostensibly to oppose its decrees. If it is not English troops that are feared, then what is it? India is in a condition of perfect peace, and there is no enemy abroad that we are aware of that is threatening to annex the protected principalities of the country. Such being the case, we ask again what is the use of these native armies? It may be replied that they preserve order among the people, but police could do that. It may be said that they are necessary to support the dignity of the chiefs to which they belong; but surely it is not necessary that the industrial populations of native States should be ground down to the earth by levies and taxation merely to support great armies for the personal glorification of this or that chief. It has been urged that the armies of the native States of India are really so many reserves for the imperial purposes of England, and that on at least one occasion already they have rendered good service to English rule. So long, however, as a native army is kept wholly apart from British troops, it cannot be looked upon confidently as a reserve; because the isolation breeds completely different political ideas in the two descriptions of troops. The soldier in a native State, if he happens to have a soul above his pay, fancies himself wholly attached to the interest of that State and an enemy to English power; and his political sympathies are known to be trained by intriguers who constantly endeavour to inculcate the idea that there will come a day when native States will be able to declare their complete independence, and when the English will be driven out of the country. The cultivation of ideas like these is not calculated to make any sound statesman in the Government of India believe that in an emergency the mercenaries of native States could be relied upon as willing champions of the cause of England; on the contrary, it is calculated to make every native mercenary consider whether any emergency in the career of British rule in India might not be his opportunity for restoring those "good old times" which were the curse of the people and the harvest-time for military adventurers, panders, and leviators of black mail. Although it is true that in 1857 England did receive some assistance from the troops of the native States, yet that was owing to the mere accident of certain chiefs having the sense to see that English power must eventually triumph over the mutiny, and shaping their policy accordingly. And although England did receive this partial assistance, it is notorious that the very fact that certain native States possessed considerable armies which might break out in open rebellion cramped her movements, and made her realise that she would have felt safer if there had been no armies at all in native States. Disaffection among her own troops she could deal with promptly, with the assurance of ultimate success; but the position of affairs was not rendered so clear when it was known there were scattered throughout every part of India independent armies which might naturally be expected to become so many foci of rebellion, and that no concentrated movement could be made in any one direction without the probability of a rising taking place in another. Although we trust that India may never see a repetition of the horrors of 1857, yet it would be madness for any English statesman to shut his eyes to the fact that they may occur again, and that the same painful uncertainty as to which scale the armies of the great native States would throw their swords in—whether in that of "Home rule" or in that of English rule—would again have to be experienced, and perhaps not with such satisfactory results. Some people are in the habit of laughing at native armies, and describing them as a ragamuffinly horde with whom even Falstaff's Coventry warriors might compare favourably; but these are simply foolish optimists, for in addition to the fact that certain native armies are wonderfully well drilled and equipped (Scindiah's, for instance, and a part of the Nizam's, the Gaekwar's, and Holkar's), there are probably not fewer than 350,000 foreign troops in India, and much bloodshed would take place and vast danger be incurred before such a large number of men could be subdued. We see no reason why this bloodshed, this danger of unsettling the whole Indian Empire again, should be risked for the sake of fearing to wound the susceptibilities of chiefs the safety of whose States is already guaranteed by England, and who therefore need no great armies of their own.—Bombay Gazette.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

FEVER IN FEROZEPUR.—The fever reported in the Ferozepore district is still exceedingly severe. In some instances the courts have had to be closed.

THE TONGHOO SCANDAL.—With reference to the notorious case at Tonghoo, the Pioneer states that the case, which was to have been heard by the Commissioner of Tenasserim, has been compromised, the complainant agreeing to accept Rs. 4,000, in lieu of the Rs. 10,000 originally claimed.

BURDWAN.—A Durbar was recently held at Burdwan by Mr. Pellew, the officiating commissioner of Burdwan, for the investiture of Rancee Horooosondaree, of Searsole, Raneeungee, with the title of Maharanee, and of Rajah Bissessur Malia, her eldest son, with the title of Rajah Bahadoor.—Indian Daily News.

THE MAHARAJAH OF SHUSANG.—The Governor-General in Council is said to have approved of the terms proposed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, offering to the Maharajah of Shusang, in settlement of his claims to certain rights in the Garo Hills, which he has been deprived of under Act XXII. of 1869, an estate in the Mymensing district, at a cost of about Rs. 1,50,000.—Indian Daily News.

MEETINGS OF COMPANIES.—The following meetings of limited companies have been held at Calcutta:—Sept. 11, the India General Steam Navigation Company, when a dividend of 8 per cent., or Rs. 80 per share, was declared. On Sept. 14, the Sungoo River Tea Company; report approved. Sept. 16, the Oriental Jute Manufacturing Company; resolved, that Rs. 4,000 be placed to credit of insurance fund, Rs. 11,000 to reserve fund, and balance of profit Rs. 15,860-3, be carried forward.—Englishman.

MR. COLVIN'S TOMB.—At the instance of the Government of the North West Provinces and Oudh, arrangements have been made, through the Secretary of State, for the payment of about Rs. 2,300 to Messrs. F. P. Baber and Co., London, on account of the charges in preparing and despatching from England portions of a tomb now in course of construction at the Agra Fort to the memory of the late Mr. Colvin, Lieutenant-Governor of the North West Provinces.—Indian Daily News.

STORM AT CALCUTTA.—Calcutta was visited on the 22nd ult. by a storm, almost amounting to a small cyclone, which passed up from the head of the bay in a north-west direction. The greatest velocity of wind was 33 miles an hour at 9 a.m., after which it blew for an hour at 24 to 30 miles. 6.28 inches of rain fell, of which about one-half fell between 7.30 and 8.30 a.m. Not much damage, however, was done in the town, but the reports had not been received from the out stations.

FRAUDS ON THE "PIONEER."—The Delhi Gazette says that at a recent investigation of the accounts of the Pioneer newspaper, the accountant, Uma Churn Ghose (a trusted servant), it was ascertained, had falsified the accounts to the extent of some thousands. The culprit is non est, though the police have particulars of the case. They have been as yet unsuccessful in tracing him. The paper is keeping the matter quiet, and perhaps awaiting the arrival of the manager, who is absent in England.—Friend of India.

EMPRESS OF INDIA MILLS.—About 2,000 persons assembled on the 14th ult. at the Empress Cotton Mills, Shampore, twelve miles below Calcutta, to witness the ceremony of "christening" the recently-imported engines, which are capable of driving 50,000 spindles, although present machinery only comprises 20,160. A party of 300 visitors went down the river from Calcutta to Shampore to take part in the proceedings, which included the presentation of a diamond ring, valued at over Rs. 1,000, to Mr. Watson, the manager, as a testimonial from the directors.

DEATHS OF TWO IRRIGATION OFFICERS.—From Midnapore the death is reported of Mr. R. Dempsey, temporary overseer, attached to the Cossye Division of the Irrigation Department. While engaged erecting the under-sluices of a canal, a defective link in a chain happening to give way, he was precipitated into the river and drowned. The death is reported of Mr. J. Campbell, executive engineer in charge of the Brahmini-Byturnee Division, with head-quarters at Cuttack. Mr. Campbell was returning from a tour of inspection, when he fell overboard from his bholia and was drowned. Mr. R. H. Rhind, executive engineer, attached to the South Western Circle of the Irrigation Department, has been ordered off to Cuttack to take charge of Mr. Campbell's office.—Pioneer.

SHOCKING VIOLENCE TO A NATIVE.—A native named Sheikh Culloo was killed in Calcutta on Sunday, the 22nd ult., by direct violence being used to him while he was suffering from fever. The man was in the service of a Mr. Rooney, and while lying asleep on a hackery near his master's house, a number of boys turned the cart over. One of these, named Montey White, was caught and punished by Culloo. William White, the lad's father, dragged Culloo into his house, bolting the door to prevent any one following. What occurred is not exactly known, but upon the door being opened Mr. Rooney found the man lying gasping, with blood upon his clothes.

Culloo was removed, but died in a few minutes. The police have arrested White and his mother, who is said to have assaulted the deceased in the street.—Pioneer.

BURMESE COAL.—Some experiments with Burma coal made on the Rangoon State Railway appear to have been very successful, for the locomotive superintendent telegraphed to the chief engineer as follows:—"Excellent results with Burma coal. Will compare favourably with English coal. Train worked to this with only Burma coal." The coal in question comes from near Prome. According to a Rangoon paper coal has been found in large quantities, or which thirty tons were sent down to Rangoon, and appeared in every way equal to the imported English article. The thirty tons referred to were obtained from the surface, and, judging by appearances, it is thought the supply is practically unlimited. It is believed that the railway can be supplied at about Rs. 8 a-ton, whereas now they are paying Rs. 19.—Bombay Gazette.

THE BURMA COMMISSION.—The Rangoon correspondent of the Pioneer says there has been a complete "move all around" in the Burma Commission. These moves are tedious and costly, but occasionally they cannot be avoided, and the present one, caused by the departure of Colonel Ardagh, late Commissioner of Tenasserim, could not have been helped. Mr. de Courcy Ireland comes to Rangoon as deputy commissioner, Mr. Macrae, deputy commissioner, goes from Hmradah to Moulmein, and is relieved by Mr. Weideman, assistant commissioner. Colonel Sladen goes home, and Major Strut, secretary to the chief commissioner, gets the Arakan commissionership, his place being taken, it is said, by Colonel Plant, who was to have come to the Rangoon district as deputy commissioner. Major Spearman remains here to complete the compilation of the Gazetteer of British Burma, and then, it is believed, goes to Prome.

THE BACKERGUNGE JAIL OUTBREAK.—The late inquiry into the outbreak at the Backergunge Jail has, says the Indian Daily News, resulted in entirely exonerating the police for the action they took during the escape of the prisoners. The crowded state of the jail, there being some 720 prisoners at the time, about 300 beyond the proper complement, is in a measure held to excuse the laxity of discipline which enabled the gang of desperadoes to effect an escape. That the prisoners should have been allowed so to accumulate is primarily the fault of the police administration in not supplying escorts to draft the prisoners away; but, as there were really no police available for this service, the charge cannot lie departmentally. One result of the inquiry has been the reinforcement of the police force in the Backergunge district, which enjoys the unenviable notoriety of being more prolific in crime than almost any district under his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor's sway.

LA MARTINIÈRE.—The forty-fourth Founder's Day of the Martinière School was celebrated on the 13th ult., when 140 boys and ninety girls duly assembled to carry out the instructions contained in the will of General Martin, who directed that each anniversary of his death should be kept as a holiday, that a sermon should be preached to the children of the institution, that a medal should be given to the most deserving boy and girl, and that they should all have a public dinner, during which a toast was to be drunk to his memory. The president of the day was the Hon. Louis Jackson, who announced that the silver medal for good conduct was awarded to Francis Smith, of the sixth form, and that a prize given by himself to the boy distinguished for the qualities of manliness, good temper, truthfulness, and obedience had been gained by William Marshall, of the upper fifth form. The silver medal for the girls was awarded to Miss Edith West, the president's prize and a certificate fell to the share of Miss Amy Dickson, and several certificates were awarded to other girls.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR N. W. PROVINCES.—The movements of the Lieutenant Governor for the coming cold weather are now approximately arranged. He will leave Nynce Tal for Lucknow at the end of October. From Lucknow he sets out on a tour, joining a "flying" camp at Cawnpore about Nov. 26. He will march via Oraie, Jhansi, Lullutpore, Nowgong, Banda, Humeerpore, and back to Cawnpore about the middle of January. The reason for the tour is that the fiscal condition of the country, which is well known to be in a most unsatisfactory condition, is to be considered, and the local officers are to be consulted. Moreover, two canals from the Kane and Betwah are talked of, and the projects call for his Honour's personal supervision. As far as the programme is settled at present, the camp should be at Calpee on Dec. 1; Oraie, Dec. 30; Jhansi, Dec. 12; Lullutpore, Dec. 21; Nowgong, Dec. 30; Banda, Jan. 7; Humeerpore, Jan. 12; Cawnpore, Jan. 16. But these dates are, of course, liable to alteration.—Indian Daily News.

MADRAS.

WHEAT CROPS IN MADRAS PRESIDENCY.—The Board of Revenue, in a letter which has been forwarded to the Government of India, says that wheat cultivation is very limited in this Presidency, the area devoted to this crop being about 23,000 acres out of a total cultivated area of upwards of 22,000,000 acres. The cultivation is chiefly carried on in Kurnool, Bellary, Nilgiris, Coimbatore, Cuddapah, and Kistna.—Madras Times.

BANGALORE.—A Bangalore paper gives currency to a rumour that the Mysore Government, being unable to repay the loan advanced by the Government of India for famine relief operations in this province, the Madras Government have offered to do so on the condition that Bangalore be made over to Madras. We are further informed that the offer has been accepted, and that the transfer will shortly be effected. In that case the seat of the Mysore administration will probably be shortly removed to Mysore.—Indian Daily News.

THE NAVAPOOCHI.—Locusts have entirely disappeared in Coimbatore, but the green beetle "Navapoochi" is beginning to cause damage in a few places. Mr. Scanlan from Karur reports that in Malacovil, a hamlet of Nadanthi, he examined a field of cholum three months old, rather stunted, and a portion dried up; some revived with the late rains; nearly every bunch in the field was full of the green insect known as the "Nava." From one bunch he shook out about fifty. The owner said this was the state of all the surrounding fields, and they did not expect more than one-eighth of what they ought to get out of them. Happily the ravages of this insect are not experienced in as many villages as they were at one time.—Indian Daily News.

PROGRESS OF THE HARBOUR WORKS.—Our readers may like to have a little information about the progress of these works. The north pier is now 1,040 feet from the point where concrete block-work commenced in December 1876. Of this length, 684 feet have been added in 1878. Since the 1st of July of this year the advance of the north pier has been 264 lineal feet. The end of the block-work is at this date 563 feet beyond the end of the iron pier, and the work is steadily progressing, 64 blocks having been already set this month. The south pier has been much delayed by sand in the foundations, and is still further delayed by an accident to the titan crane, which it has taken some time to repair. Since the first block was set at the south pier in November 1878, the work has been extended 547 feet, of which length 472 feet have been built in 1878. Since the 1st July, 1878, the length advanced has only been 91 feet, but a greater rate of progress will soon be achieved. The end of the block-work at the south pier is now four feet beyond the head of the iron pier. The depth of water at low water above the rubble base of the pier, is at the north pier 22½ feet, and at the south pier 16½ feet.—Madras Mail.

THE BELLARY COTTON CROP.—A novel experiment in cotton cultivation is now being carried out in the Bellary district. Owing to scarcity of labour after the famine many of the cotton plants which bore last season's crop have been left in the ground, instead of being pulled up, as is customary. The ryot farms on the supposition that his cotton plants are only good for one season's crop, and that they ought to be removed before the ground is prepared for cholum. The Bellary ryots are now puzzled to see the old plants in a state of vigorous growth. After the splendid rain the district has lately received, the country is everywhere covered with pasturage, and the old cotton plants have sprung into new life, and are putting forth new leaf and new flower, while the young plants which are intended to produce next season's crop are only just shooting out of the ground. There are, between Adoni and Goundacul, hundreds of acres under cotton cultivation either with the new or the old crops. The ryots are now anxiously asking themselves if these old plants of last year are going to yield a second crop of cotton? If they do, a "wrinkle" will have been gained in the knowledge of cotton culture which may have an important bearing on the future supplies of the staple, while it is tolerably certain that next year's crop will be a bumper one.—Indian Daily News.

THE ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.—The following orders on the subject of the carrying out in the Madras Ordnance Department of the recommendations of the Special Ordnance Commission, pending the settlement of the general question of Ordnance establishments, have been issued by the Government of India. The scale merely of establishments as recommended to be carried into effect at present, but no change in the rates of pay, which are reserved for future consideration. Until the work of the reduction and disposal of stores in the depots at Trichinopoly, Cannanore, Thayetmyo, and Tonghoo can be effected, the establishments attached thereto will remain as they are at present. There being no further changes to be made at Rangoon, the reduction in the establishment of the magazine to be carried out at once. The designations of the different classes of establishments to remain unaltered for the present. The rates of pay for the native Ordnance establishment to remain the same until further orders. The rates of pay for sergeants having been raised under recent orders store sergeants will draw the new rates with staff pay as usual. The recommendation for the substitution of an armourer sergeant for a master armourer in the Rangoon Ordnance establishment not to be carried out, but the latter retained.—Madras Times.

BOMBAY.

RIFLE CHAMPIONSHIP.—The championship medal at the Bombay Presidency Central Rifle Meeting, held at Puna last week, has been won by Private Turner, 2nd Queen's Regiment.—Gazette.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY FRAUDS.—Mr. Bedford, late traffic inspector on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, the chief prisoner in the Sholapur Railway frauds case, has addressed an appeal to the Great Indian Peninsula Railway directors against his dismissal from their service notwithstanding his complete acquittal by the court of the charges preferred against him.—Gazette.

MUNICIPAL LOAN.—The Bombay Municipal Corporation have obtained permission to raise a loan of twenty-seven lakhs of rupees (£270,000) to proceed with the construction of new drainage works for the city.—Gazette.

Mr. Charles Cheyne, engineer-in-chief of the Neemuch State Railway, having completed his fifty-fifth year, has obtained six months' notice from the Government of India to retire. He will be succeeded by Mr. Horace Bell, the present engineer-in-chief of the Scindia State Railway.—Bombay Gazette.

WANTAGE SISTERS.—The Governor of Bombay (Sir Richard Temple), in a speech at Puna lately, advocated the employment of members of the Wantage Sisterhood in charge of Church of England girls' schools in India. A school of this character in Puna has recently been placed in charge of two Wantage sisters.—Gazette.

VERNACULAR HOSPITAL SCHOOL.—The Government has determined to remove the Vernacular school for the training of hospital assistants from the Grant Medical College at Bombay to the Sassoon Hospital at Puna, and the change will be made on November 1. As the Sassoon Hospital makes up beds for 150 patients, besides giving out-door relief to nearly as many more, it seems a wise decision to utilise the facilities for teaching which it provides, and it is said to be in contemplation to attach a similar school to the hospital at Ahmedabad.—Bombay Gazette.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT MAZAGON.—On the 18th Sept. a fatal accident took place at Mazagon, which occasioned the death of Mr. Edward Thomas Catherall, the custodian of the Elephanta Caves, and by which his son, a lad about eleven or twelve years of age, was seriously injured. It appears that the deceased came on leave from Elephanta to Bombay, and on the day named, when it was his intention to return to Elephanta, he called at the office of Mr. A. F. Morris, the Nautical Assistant, Bombay Defences, at Mazagon, and obtained a boat belonging to that department. Catherall and his son having got into it, the tindal ordered the sail to be hoisted, and when the yard holding it was raised about twelve feet it gave way and in its fall struck Catherall on the head, killing him on the spot, at the same time severely injuring his son, who was sitting by the side of his father.—Pioneer.

OPENING OF THE SOLDIERS' INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION AT PUNA.—This exhibition was opened on September 17, when the number and variety of the exhibits surprised the visitors. No fewer than eight Queen's regiments and twelve regiments of Native Infantry have contributed, besides the Royal Artillery, Sappers and Miners, Quartermaster-General's Department, &c. The catalogue consists of sixty-two pages, filled with the numbers and names of articles of carpentry, cabinet and joiners' turning and fancy wood-work, furniture, ironmongery, cutlery, saddlery, boots and shoes, and almost every article that can be thought of. The things exhibited by the women and children were chiefly useful articles for ladies' and children's wardrobes. Some of the native work was most creditable. There is a well-filled section of drawing, painting, and etching, also some good models and plans. Those who take a warm interest in the industrial development attempted by soldiers will find, with more than ordinary pleasure, that the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition of 1878 is something like a true index of the progress already made in that direction.—Bombay Gazette.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—The Legislative Council met at Puna on Friday, the 13th ult., when it passed the Cotton Frauds Bill as amended in accordance with the representations of the Government of India, after first, second, and third readings. It was opposed by the Hon. Mr. Goculdas and the Hon. Mr. Balfour only. The former gentleman objected in principle to the bill. Mr. Balfour would not raise the question of principle; accepting that as settled already, he considered it useless to raise it again. But he suggested that a clause be inserted limiting the operation of the Act to three years. The Hon. Mr. Ravenscroft, who introduced the bill, objected to limit the operation of it, urging that it was open to Government at any time to repeal it if found working unsatisfactorily. Two other bills, one introducing compulsory vaccination into Kurrachee, the other legalising the levying of fees for the use of Government blunders at that port and providing for the expenditure of the money so realised, passed their first reading and were referred to select committees for report. The Hon. Mr. Ashburner obtained permission to introduce a bill for the relief of indebted agriculturists in the Puna, Sattara, Sholapore, and Ahmednagar districts. The objects of the bill were to convert the ryots' payment to a reasonable rate of interest only when interest was payable by them, provided all past payments were properly carried to their credit, and prohibiting their being made liable for compound interest; also to extend the benefit of the old Hindoo law dam doput to all classes of agriculturists, and limiting the liability of agriculturists in respect of ancestral debts. The bill is being drafted and will be published shortly.—Bombay Gazette.

LOSS OF THE "QUEEN ANNE."—The steamer Queen Anne, that left the port of Calcutta on Sept. 25, was totally wrecked the following morning on the Fulta Sand. The vessel, when the flood came in, broke away from her anchorage at Fisherman's point and capsized on the Sand. One passenger, four stokers, and a boy were drowned.—Indian Daily News.

THE NORTH-WESTERN FRONTIER OF INDIA.

NO. I.

Two of the most important papers in illustration of the omnipresent question of the Afghans and their Ameer are certainly the two lengthy letters which have so lately been laid before us in the Times from Sir J. Stephen and Sir Bartle Frere. They are, of course, valuable from the authority and ability of the writers, but they are most pre-eminently valuable from the evidence they bear of being the result of a cautious experience and a very mature judgment. Neither are they the worse for not touching much upon the possible or probable strategics of the possible or probable war. These are matters upon which there is sure to be both plenty of sound opinion and plenty of useful discussion. What both the writers look to is not so much the special action that we have to take up on the special call of the moment, but the more permanent, constant, and irrepressible question as to the sufficiency or the insufficiency of our frontier. Wars occur but occasionally, and treaties are made and unmade; but there is always a frontier, and often a very permanent one.

There is always more than one frontier to a country, in the same way that there is always more than one side to a square; so that the frontier in general is one thing, the frontier in detail another. But there are frontiers and frontiers. There is the frontier that we get from a well-placed line of fortresses and from the aptitude of the garrisons that defend them. This is a frontier of man's making; and, if we are in possession of the ground, we can make or unmake, or shift it at any time. But there are other sorts of frontiers, which are by no means so manageable; and this is because they are not of man's making, but of Nature's. The mountains and the rocks, and sometimes the snow-drift and the glacier, constitute these; and very effective they are. But it is only the holder that benefits by them; nor can they be made or changed at will.

Between these two elements, and generally connected with the latter, comes the character of the occupant populations. Are they friendly or hostile? If friendly, what is the value of their friendship? If hostile, what are the dangers involved in their hostility? Are the motives that determine this permanent or alterable? Are these things that we mend or mar; attend to or neglect?

Upon this point the frontier of India which is the most important is the North Western. It is here where we have the vast mountain ranges of the Hindu-koh, the Pamir, the Belut-tagh, and the Zarafshan ranges; here, too, where the two great rivers—the Oxus and the Yaxarte—are either traced to their sources, or, at least, to the higher and more impracticable parts of their water systems. So far, then, as rocks and rivers go, this is not merely a frontier, but the frontier which, should a war break out, would be the special bone of contention between the two would-be sovereigns of Afghanistan. We know this in England, and it is known in Russia; and the meeting of the "Kosak and the Sepoy on the Oxus" is a bye-word in both countries. There is no doubt about this. There may be still a minority who believe that in the districts of Balkh, Bameean, the Hazareh country, and of Dardistan, such a thing as a neutral ground is practicable; but the prevalent doctrine, which is likewise the sounder one, is that, between two powerful and civilised nations, intervening blocks of barbarism (or even comparative rudeness) are impossibilities. And, if this be the case, what is more incumbent upon each of the rival Powers than to get not only a strong hold upon the debatable land, but a timely one?

There are not fewer than four factors in this question of boundary or demarcation; and that, independent of the parties, who, in one sense of the word, have the most interest in the matter—i.e., the occupants of the disputed districts. There are, of course, Russia, England, and Afghanistan, whose objects, claims, and pretensions may be read by those who run. It is with these that the immediate question and the nearest parts of the possible frontiers are most closely connected. But we shall certainly do wrong if, with the change which, since the death of Jacob Khan has taken place in Kashgaria, we neglect either the presence of the Chinese upon their old territory in Chinese Turkestan, or the perseverance and energy with which they effected the reconquest. There is much in this that requires very careful attention, and much that looks more like a triangular duel than a triple alliance; for the Turks of Kashgar may probably be divided as to whether they had better be supported by Russia against China, or by China against Russia. This is a matter upon which the Kashgar Turks themselves must be either decided or doubtful. It is well worth the consideration of statesmen whether their dubiety on this point might not be ended in a way satisfactory to ourselves if it was made clear that our support would be given to China, at the same time that our influence would be used to prevent revengeful or tyrannical oppression of the Chinese Mohammedans. Our past policy of friendship, on one side, for China with the Imperial Government, and our friendly relations on the other with successful rebels against the Peking authorities, must have resulted in a want of confidence, on the part both of Turks and Chinese in Kashgar, which we should do well to seize the present opportunity of removing. But this is a digression. The present relations of Turks and Chinese is the first case we have of the complication of creed and race; and it is by no means the last.

We are still on the Chinese frontier; on the boundaries, however, of Tibet rather than Turkestan, and it is Little Tibet, Bultestan, or the parts about Iskardo, that most closely and directly touch our frontier. The Bultestanis are Tibetan in language, Mohommedan in creed, and to a greater extent than the true Bhots of Tibet imbued with Persian civilisation. But, nimum vicina Cremona, they are liable to pressure on both sides. There are the Turks of Kashgar, who, if they are not national, are either Russian or Chinese; and on the south there is the Maharaja of Cashmir, who has got his own consent, and that of the Indian Government, to extend his frontier both northwards and westwards. The Tibetan element, however, of the parts along our frontier is one of the least ethnological importance. Still it must be recognised.

Far more important is the Persian; indeed, its importance is very nearly paramount and exclusive. But the full appreciation of the term Persian, in its extended meanings and bearing, would lead us beyond the limits of this introductory article.

MILITARY FURLONGHS.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published in the Gazette of India, in continuation of G. G. O. No. 837, dated Aug. 4, 1876:—"India Office, London, July 18, 1878. To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council. My Lord,—In the Marquis of Salisbury's military despatch No. 148, of June 15, 1876, you were informed that it had been decided to assimilate, with some exceptions, the rates of pay drawn by officers of the Indian cadres of Royal Artillery, while on leave in this country, from brigades serving in India, to the rates drawn by officers of the old Royal Artillery. I have now decided to place the officers of the Indian cadres of Royal Engineers on the same footing in respect to their English pay. The rates will be assimilated generally to the rates drawn by officers of the old Royal Engineers, making exception, however, in favour of the grades of officers hitherto drawing higher pay under Indian regulations. This change will have effect from April 1, 1878.—I have, &c. (Signed) CRANBROOK. P.S.—The above rates of furlough pay will also be issued in India, in substitution of those promulgated in G. G. O. No. 538, of 1872."

It is notified in G. O. by the Commander-in-Chief as follows (vide Gazette of India, Sept. 14):—Paragraph 136, Section 12, Bombay

Army Regulations, is reconstructed as follows:—Furlough or leave taken in or out of India for wounds or illness contracted by service in the field, which require the immediate departure of an officer, is allowed to count as service for pension to a maximum extent of eighteen months; each case will be separately considered by the Secretary of State for India with reference to the time to be allowed, and must be supported by the opinion of a medical committee, accompanied by the opinions thereon of the Commander-in-Chief and Government.

With a view to assimilating the rules for travelling allowances of chaplains with those of other public servants, the Governor General in Council is pleased to cancel the portion quoted below of Rule 1 in the notification of the Government of India in this department, No. 1,653, dated Aug. 7, 1868: "Provided that on return from furlough or any other leave a chaplain will join his station at his own expense. If his appointment has been changed during his absence, he will draw travelling allowance for the excess distance, if any, between his old and new station from the Presidency at the rates above mentioned."

HOME NEWS.

INDIA OFFICE (Oct. 14).—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Lieut.-General Henry James Warre, C.B., to be a Member of the Council of the Governor of Bombay.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.—Permission has been granted to the Government of India to detain any of the batteries of artillery under orders to embark for England on the 30th inst. and 22nd prox. whose services may be required in the present crisis. Already it has been arranged that H, J, and K Batteries Royal Horse Artillery shall be held back.—Globe.

The Eastern Telegraph Company announce the extension of their submarine system to Cyprus. This company's recent extensions to Besika Bay, Crete, Constantinople, and Cyprus have been established by agreement with Her Majesty's Government, and are worked throughout by telegraphists under the company's control.

Colonel the Right Hon. F. A. Stanley, Secretary of State for War, left London on Saturday for Paris, and to-morrow proceeds to Cyprus. The First Lord of the Admiralty comes to town this morning, and is expected to leave by the mail this evening to join the Secretary of State for War, and accompany him to Malta and Cyprus. We understand that Sir George Elliott, M.P., who is largely interested in the docks at Alexandria, has been invited to accompany the First Lord on his visit to our new island.

THE NEW FALL IN SILVER.—On October 16 no transactions in refined bar silver were entered into, as it was fully anticipated that there would be a drop in the price obtained by the India Council for their bills. The buyers, few in number, were consequently very unwilling to operate, and the market presented a very dull appearance. In the afternoon, as soon as the result of the allotment of Council draft was known, the market became completely disorganised, and at the close it was impossible to obtain a reliable quotation, as no business of any sort had been done during any part of the day. In present circumstances, with a complete absence of demand and an extremely low rate for India bills, there is no hopeful or redeeming feature of any kind to be seen, and although the market value of fine bars has been falling throughout the past week it is feared that before long a further fall will occur. The market for Mexican dollars has been equally stagnant and weak.

H. M.'s TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The Serapis, Indian troopship p, Capt. Davidson, has left Portsmouth for Bombay. She takes out the C Battery of the C Brigade Royal Horse Artillery, for Sialkot; the O Battery 5th Brigade, Royal Artillery, for Cawnpore; and the H, I, and K Batteries for Saugor and Bangalore; and drafts for the A Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery; and the 1st, 2nd, 5th, and 9th Brigades Royal Artillery. The following are the names of the officers who take passage out:—Lieuts. Hervey and Waterfield and Vet. Surg. G. G. G. Royal Horse Artillery; Col. Evans, Lieut. Col. Wortsley, Betty, and Anderson, Quartermaster Hambley, Majors Hawkins and Boyle, Capt. Gordon and Hewet, Lieuts. Bannantine and Campbell, Capt. Sharp and Hardy, Lieut. Dunsterville, Capt. Lake and Crofton, Lieuts. Guise and Crofton, Major Le Marchant, Capt. Dunnage and Barlow, Lieuts. Stirling and Burrows, Capt. Taylor and Davies, Lieuts. Molesworth, Majors Roberts, Murray, and Davidson, Lieuts. Earle and Miller, Major Ommanney and Capt. Graves, all belonging to the Royal Artillery; Lieuts. Beecher, 9th Foot; Medley, 12th Foot; Shubrick, 13th Foot; Griffiths, 17th Foot; Eardley-Wilmot, 34th Foot; Boulton, 4th Battalion 60th Rifles; Thomson, 85th Foot; Hope and Taylor, 25th Foot; Cornish, Robinson, and Twyman, 33rd Foot; Clarke, Stewart, and Williams, 43rd Foot; Kreyer, 51st Foot; Farrington, 63rd Foot; Parkin, 65th Foot; Fagan, Gompertz, Hight, Lloyd, O'Donoghue, and Tuile, 67th Foot; Kenyon Slaney, 68th Foot; Smith and Waldron, 70th Foot; Paymaster Elliott, 1st Foot; Capt. Slade, 10th Hussars; Surgs.-Major Bourke, Ferginson, and Wright, and Surgs. Gallwey, Powell, Ellis, Routh, and Nixon, of the Army Medical Department. The Serapis is timed to arrive in Bombay on Nov. 22, and will leave Bombay on Dec. 6, arriving at Portsmouth on Jan. 8.

INDIA COUNCIL DRAFTS.—The depressed state of the Indian exchanges and the extreme difficulty which the Council experiences in disposing of its drafts cause people to think of the usual remedy—a fresh loan. Obviously the Council must find a better market for its paper soon, or it must borrow, for its obligations due here have to be met. At no distant date we fear it will have to borrow, and the mention of fresh borrowing raises the question, What effect will the recent policy of the Bank of England in lending on India debentures have upon Indian credit? As is well known, the Bank of England decided a short time ago to exact a margin from borrowers upon the security of India debentures. The opportuneness of the step was very questionable, but there can be no doubt that the Bank of England has a perfect right to exact a margin. As it had not heretofore done so, however, the calculation of this margin was never an element in estimating Indian credit. Now that it has become so, will the Indian Government be able to place a loan on the market at the same price or with the same facility as heretofore? We very much doubt it, and it is somewhat surprising that the India Council has taken no cognisance of a step which may seriously interfere with that free borrowing so long a necessity for Indian finance. The usual weekly advertisement from the India Office on Wednesday stated that a further amount of bills to the value of forty lacs of rupees will be offered for tender next Wednesday, of which not more than 16,00,000 will be apportioned to Bombay. It is stated, in addition, that the power vested in the Council of adding any previously unallotted balance to the current amount will not be exercised next week. The tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £114,000, at an average rate of 18.7024d.; to Bombay, £100,000, at an average rate of 18.7d.; and to Madras, £1,370, at an average rate of 18.725d. Tenders on all Presidencies at 18.7d. and above will receive in full. No allotment was made last week, but compared with the results of the allotment a fortnight ago there is to-day a fall of from 2½ to 2¾ per cent. On the 2nd inst. the Council, after submitting to a reduction in the price, were able to sell the whole of the 40 lacs advertised for tender, but to-day, out of a similar amount, they have only been able to get rid of about 21½ lacs of rupees, representing a nominal value of £215,000. There is thus an unsold balance of close upon £185,000, or 18½ lacs of rupees.—Times, Oct. 17.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—The half-yearly general meeting was held on the 17th inst. at the bank, Threadneedle-street; Mr. George Arbuthnot presiding. At the request of the chairman, Mr. Patrick Campbell, the chief manager, read the half-yearly accounts and balance-sheet. The total liabilities amounted to £21,636,254, the principal being—bills of exchange in circulation not bearing interest £6,810,841, cash deposited not bearing interest £3,926,142, cash deposited bearing interest £8,283,680, and due to shareholders £1,919,387. The principal assets were—coin and bullion £2,386,748, due from other banks £837,141, Government securities £1,812,964, and notes and other bills discounted, or other debts due to the corporation, excluding those abandoned as bad, £16,186,295. A shareholder thought the proprietors ought to be furnished with copies of the accounts, as it was difficult to follow the items as they were read. The chairman, in reply, said it had never been the custom since the establishment of the corporation to present a statement of the accounts in October. By the charter the directors were not bound to have a meeting at all in October, only it had hitherto been usual to have such meeting for the purpose of declaring a dividend, which was also left to the discretion of the board. He then declared an interim dividend of £1 5s. per share for the half-year ending June 30 last, to be paid on and after November 1, tax free. They were, he said, well able to declare this dividend, as the shareholders would have heard from the statement which had been read. The amount of profit undivided on December 31 last was £5,758, and the net profit for the half-year, after defraying current charges and providing for bad and doubtful debts, was £85,481, making a total of £91,240. The amount required to pay the interim dividend of £1 5s. per share—or at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum—was £75,000, leaving a balance of £16,240 to be carried forward to next half-year. He hoped, if they had as good a result during the current half-year, that they would be able to give the same dividend, and have a moderate sum over to carry to the reserve fund to begin replacing what they were obliged to take from it. There was really nothing special to tell the shareholders, but he should imagine that their minds were all a good deal occupied with the unhappy event which had occurred in Scotland—the failure of the City of Glasgow Bank, the other consequent failures, and how this bank had been affected. An event of this kind could not occur without the Indian banks being affected, and the Oriental Bank Corporation had between India and Ceylon about £71,000 of bills drawn under marginal credits for the Bank of Glasgow, for which that bank was of course responsible, and they also had recourse to the Eastern houses, so that between the two they had not the slightest doubt that they would receive every penny; and although there might be a temporary delay, it was usual in such cases to pay 5 per cent. interest, which they hoped to receive. They had another bill for £1,200 on another house, but there was a good drawer behind it. They could not tell what might happen, but, from the best examination of their bills, they did not see any reason at present to apprehend any loss. He hoped that what he had said would be regarded as satisfactory by the shareholders. He had no resolution to propose, his duty being simply to declare the interim dividend. A shareholder asked if the directors had got to the bottom of “all the irregularities connected with the branches.” The chairman, in reply, said he knew nothing special about “irregularities,” but they had written off all that required to be written off; they had also made provision, and they hoped to get something back. They did not know of a single penny further. It was quite right that the item of bills discounted amounted to £16,186,000. A shareholder observed that this showed an increase of £2,000,000. The proceedings then terminated.

DEPRECIATION OF SILVER.—In connection with the depreciation of silver, a question of some importance to Indian bank shareholders deserves an answer. It is quite likely, indeed probable, that these banks all make provision in their accounts for the fall in the value of bullion, writing the amount of that fall off from half-year to half-year as it occurs. It would be very satisfactory, however, to all concerned to have a distinct assurance upon that point, and we are somewhat surprised that it has not been raised at any of the recent bank meetings. For example, the Oriental Bank Corporation has in its possession coin and bullion to the value of £2,387,000, a large proportion of which is, no doubt, silver. Is this silver valued at its actual market price or at the nominal currency value which it may bear in the East? According as this question is answered will the managers of such banks approve themselves prudent or the reverse, for the aggregate of the loss on the silver held by them would amount to a considerable dividend were it necessary to face it some day all at once.

The following letter gives a satisfactory reply to the above query:—“Oriental Bank Corporation, London, E.C., Oct. 18. Sir,—Referring to the remarks in your City Article of to-day, I beg to say that silver in the treasury of an Eastern bank is part of the local assets kept there expressly to meet local engagements, being primarily and properly applicable to that purpose in the same currency, without being subject to variation according to the rate of exchange between that place and any other. But after thus providing for local engagements, it is our rule that any working balance due and liable to recall from one of our branches to another, or to London, should be converted at each half-yearly balance at the current rate of exchange then ruling.—I remain, your obedient servant, P. CAMPBELL, Chief Manager.”—Times.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Hysteria, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 18th July, 1864.

THE report of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending Sept. 24 is as follows:—In Madras general prospects remain favourable; unseasonable rain has fallen in South Kanara, and in Malabar it has continued to be excessive. In Godavery and Tanjore some damage has been caused by floods. The number—98,738—on relief works shows the slight increase of 169; but the number—58,574—gratuitously relieved exhibits a decrease of 1,944. In Mysore the crops are progressing well and prices are still falling. The numbers on relief works again show a decrease, and there is also now a diminution in the number receiving gratuitous relief. In the Bombay Presidency the Sind floods are subsiding, the crops have been somewhat damaged by excessive rain in parts of Guzerat, the Deccan, Kanara, and Konkan, but prospects are on the whole good. With the exception of jowar in the southern districts and Nimar, the prospects of the kharif crops in the central provinces are generally good; the harvesting of the lesser millets has commenced; high prices still prevail, and cholera is increasing in Wardha, but is said to be decreasing elsewhere, though it is still present in many districts. Excessive rainfall continues in Berar, and is injuring crops in the lowlands. In Central India, notwithstanding the continuance of heavy rain in Malwa, prospects are fair; elsewhere they continue favourable. Cholera has been sharp in Gwalior, but is now abating. Prospects in Rajputana are generally satisfactory, but more rain is needed at Ulwur and Bickaneer. Nearly all the districts of Bengal have received rain during the week, but more is wanted in a few places. In parts of Bengal proper the winter rice on low lands has suffered from heavy rain and flood, and in West Manbhoom insects have greatly injured the autumn crops; general prospects, however, remain favourable. Prospects in Assam are promising. In Burma prospects have improved everywhere, with the exception of a part of the Henzada and Prome districts, and Thayetmyo. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh, and also in the Punjab, prospects continue good.

THE reports of the public health for the week ending Sept. 24 are:—In Sind fever prevalent in Shikarpur; in Guzerat, public health good in Ahmedabad; cholera in parts of Broach; and fever in Ahmed and Ankleswar; in Khandesh, cholera cases, 65; deaths, 30; in Puna and district, 13 deaths; 62 in Ahmednagar; 8 in Satara; cholera subsiding in Dharwar; in Kanara fever and dysentery prevalent; also in Wadhwan; and 44 deaths in Baroda. Bengal: health good in Backergunge; in 24-Pergunnahs, much fever; and Yessore much sickness; in Pubna, health good; in Maldah, fever prevalent, and in Lohardugga; also with cholera in Sarun; and with many deaths from dysentery in Singhbhoom; cholera in Hooghly and Gya, but diminishing in Hazaribagh; in Balasore, a bad outbreak of rinderpest among cattle; in Punjab, the usual autumn fever is general. In Central Provinces, cholera increasing in Wardha, and decreasing in other districts. In Arakan, no cholera; a few cases in Rangoon; 32 in Prome and district; in Tenasserim, health good. Central India: cholera has been sharp in Gwalior, but abating. Rajputana: fever prevailed in Bickaneer, Meywar, Tonk, and Jeypore; and severe at Ajmere and Ulwur.

A REPORT from Allahabad states, under date Oct. 5 ult.:—"All the crops along the line from Bombay to here in prime condition, and, if no rain falls, the cotton will be ready for ginning next month. The jowari is damaged here and there, but generally bumper crops are expected."

THE telegraphic weather reports, which were at first only sanctioned experimentally for three months, have now been sanctioned permanently, and more satisfactory arrangements are being made by Mr. Elliott for their continuance.

THE mail news as to the Afghan crisis is necessarily old, the chief contribution to our knowledge being the informal plebiscite, so to speak, by the voices of the English and native press in favour of measures of punishment for the past and coercion of the Ameer for the future. The most prevalent idea is that Candahar will be occupied, as affording good winter quarters. The Times' correspondent in yesterday's telegram says:—"There can be no doubt that the despatch of a few regiments of English troops would prove of incalculable moral effect at the present time. The feudatories have all exhibited the utmost possible loyalty, but there can be no reasonable ground for concealing the fact that they, in a great measure, regard the present issue as a momentous struggle for pre-eminence between Russia and England. The despatch of Indian troops to Malta evoked a curiously profound throb of loyalty throughout the whole of India, and the reason was that India was made to feel, for the first time, that she was an essential ingredient of strength in the Imperial policy. If, now that a serious Indian war is threatening, England were, in her turn, at once to send English troops in support of India, the belief would be at once created that English sympathy and English resources were being dealt out with a liberal hand, while the prestige and power of the Indian Government would be almost infinitely increased. The condition of the political atmosphere is at present highly satisfactory, as is evidenced by the enthusiastic manner in which the Punjab feudatories have come forward with proffers of service. The Rajahs of Puteela, Jheend, Narbah, Kapoorthulla, and Fureedkote have each and all placed their troops at the disposal of the Government for active service wheresoever required. The Nawab of Bhawalpore has not only offered his troops, but the whole resources of his State, and has made a pressing request to be allowed to take the field in person. In addition to these offers, requests for service are stated to have poured in from numerous chiefs of lesser dignity from all parts of the Punjab. The Viceroy is said to have heartily welcomed the proposals, and to entertain a scheme for utilising a contingent formed from these forces. The existing feeling among all the native troops, the Sikhs especially, is most enthusiastic. It is reported that the Lalpoora Mohmands, whose chief is father-in-law to Yakoob Khan, and controls a territory extending north and west of the Khyber Pass, have taken the British side against the Ameer. The border tribes assembled at Ali Musjid are reported to have been dispersed, sickness having broken out among the Ameer's troops. The latter have failed to punish the Afridis, and in one instance only were they enabled successfully to burn a Zakha Khel village, but little or no harm beyond. The Khan, with his family, have been compelled since to seek protection in Peshawur. It would have appeared at one time as if Shere Ali contemplated making a hostile raid on Peshawur. His advanced troops marched within four miles of Jumrood. The garrison at that time was very weak, but it has now been greatly strengthened, and is well able to repel any hostile advance. A party of the guides have lately made a successful reconnaissance up the Khyber Pass. They succeeded in reaching the top of a hill within three miles of Ali Musjid. They report that Ali Musjid is defended with eleven guns. A large camp will shortly be formed of 6,000 troops at Hassan Abdal, under General Maude, commander of the reserve of the Peshawur force. The latest telegraphic news from Mooltan states that arrangements for General Biddulph's force are approaching completion. Six months' supplies will be forwarded by the end of October. The advance force will be enabled to make a forward movement if required by the end of November. The road to Quetta is quiet. The Khan of Khelat is quite prepared to render every assistance to facilitate the march of troops for Quetta. Preparations to concentrate General Stewart's force at Mithun Kote are being made. Colonel Sankey is engaged in surveying the river 50 miles above Sukkur. Major St. John proceeds to Quetta at once on political duty. A telegraphic office has been opened at May, in the Upper Bolan Pass, 38 miles from Quetta. The first convoy of commissariat stores, consisting of about 6,000 camels, has started. A railway is to be immediately constructed from Khanpoor, on the Indus Valley Railway, to Chachar, in order to expedite the passage of troops. The Government of India will make Lahore its headquarters during the coming winter, and the Foreign Office has received orders to form a camp there. Sir Neville Chamberlain exercises a general supervision over the military preparations, and will not return yet to Madras. At home it is understood that instructions have been sent out for an advance upon Candahar and Ali Musjid, which places will be occupied as winter quarters, for which purpose the former is well suited; but that no further movement will take place till the spring.

THE St. Petersburg press has declared that the real purpose of General Stolietoff's mission was to tie England's hands on the Bosphorus, and that Russia must help Shere Ali to "defend the passes," on the maintenance of which depends the "to be or not to be" of our (Russian) position in Asia. Two years ago Colonel Veniutoff described the Ameer as "a vassal of England in whose hands it was dangerous to leave Badakshan, Kunduz, and Balkh." Eleven years ago the same Ameer wrote to the Munshi of the British Government: "Your Government are great people." "If occasion should arise to require any service performed in this direction, God willing it shall be done." Now the Ameer is the ally of Russia, and, according to the Peace Society and some other English politicians, an independent prince, whose exclusive fastidiousness we are bound to respect. He has requited us as Afsal Khan in 1866 requited Lord Lawrence, whose letters he transmitted to Tashkent, and declared the Russians to be his real and only friends. We must take security for the future, and, if needs be, fight, at the present, to protect our millions of Indian subjects from the intrigues and invasions which may be deemed needful to secure Russian interests in Central Asia and on the Bosphorus. It may, however, be hoped that this necessity will be averted, and that Russia will yield to the united counsels of England, France, and Austria. Our envoy will probably set out this week for Paris and Vienna bearing with him an ultimatum as regards the Eastern Question to be presented to the Court of St. Petersburg.

THE disturbances in Seistan, on the Perso-Afghan frontier, in which England is bound to intervene in terms of the Treaty of 1857, concluded just after the last Persian war, will, in the first instance, be dealt with by the Foreign Office at home. A Berlin telegram says the Persian Government is moving troops for its suppression. Persia announces her neutrality in the Afghan quarrel, and would like Germany to act as arbitrator.

A TELEGRAM, of which the following is a copy, was received on October 25 at the War Office from Sir Garnet Wolseley:—"Have just visited 42nd and 71st Regiments; both in capital spirits and in good health; the men well fed; those in hospital are nearly all very slight cases. All sick doing well. Hutting going on satisfactorily. Climate extremely pleasant now; no rain of importance yet." The First Lord of the Admiralty and the Secretary for War have sailed from Naples in the Himalaya, en route for Cyprus.

THE importance, or rather necessity, of constructing a permanent bridge over the Indus is urged by the Pioneer, as without it our military position beyond that river must remain very defective. In the cold season, from October to May, the river is spanned by a bridge of about forty boats at Attock, which serves for the support of Nowshera and Peshawur: and another of about thirty boats at Khushalghur, for Kohat. If in order, these bridges are adequate for the movement of troops towards the frontier, but are necessarily liable to damage by sudden floods;

thus last winter the bridge at Attock was carried away, and it took three days for six ferry-boats to transport one British infantry regiment. Pontooning, except when the water is very low, would be extremely difficult, as the anchors would not hold in the hard slate bed, and the current at Attock runs sometimes sixteen or eighteen miles an hour.

TOUCHING the present communications and supplies, a Rawul Pindi correspondent says that the boat bridges at Kushalghur and Nowshera have been restored, and an attempt made to put up that Attock; but a crate collided with the bridge, and carried away the superstructure, with the loss of a few lives. The breaches in the Punjab Railway, caused by the overflow of the Benye and Beas, were repaired, and the line was fit for traffic on 3rd inst. The Government have issued orders for the railway between Jhelum and Rawul Pindi to be completed in three months, which is considered almost an impossibility. Stores were being daily forwarded from Allahabad arsenal to Mooltan and Kohat, but delay was experienced by the prevalence of fever at Ferozepur, where the arsenal workmen were all disabled; the latest reports stated the fever to be abating, but it was severe at Amritsur.

GREAT indignation is felt by the officers and men of the Bombay Army at the composition of the force detailed to advance on Quetta, and the appropriation of command and staff by the Bengal Army. The Sind frontier has always been guarded by Bombay troops, and the Bombay journals maintain that the force which is to proceed to Quetta should be chiefly composed of Bombay troops instead of only one brigade being furnished from that Presidency, and that the command and staff appointments should have been bestowed on the officers of the Bombay Army. The neglect of their displaying this "generous spirit" is called a blot on the otherwise carefully matured arrangements of the authorities at Simla.

THE departure of Sir Charles W. D. Staveley, late Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Presidency, has called forth from the Bombay Gazette a eulogium which must have been well deserved. Not only the directly military duties pertaining to his office are particularised as having been diligently discharged, but his Excellency's deep interest in the formation of a volunteer corps for Bombay is recorded. Of minor but important matters concerning the welfare of the soldiers, it is to Sir Charles's honour that he "has identified himself with the soldiers' amusements and pastimes," while the education of the native army and of the sons and daughters of the soldiers has been taken up warmly by the Chief, assisted by Lady Staveley, who, "ever foremost in works of usefulness and charity, established in her own compound a native school for boys and girls. A scheme for the reorganisation of the native army, proposed by the retiring Chief, must await our next issue. We have now only room to quote our contemporary's words:—"It is to us a pleasure as well as a duty to echo the testimony and deliberate judgment of the officers and men of this army as a whole, that the retiring Chief carries with him from the shores of Hindustan a large amount of good wishes. Nor do we exaggerate the general opinion entertained regarding his Excellency's services when we add that every branch of the combatant departments, as well as the civil-military establishments, exhibit to-day marked improvement; and that the tenure of office by the late Chief closes with honour after an administration of success."

GRAVE charges are being made against the Government of the Maharajah of Kashmir in respect to the management of the famine which is at present causing extreme suffering in that territory. An up-country newspaper contains a statement that the sole aim of the Maharajah's Government is to employ the famine as a means of enriching itself (by buying up all the grain procurable and retailing it at enormous prices), and that its "only pronounced action has been to prevent public or private charity from selling grain at reasonable rates." We learn that Dr.

THE fears of an outbreak at Mandalay, arising out of confusion consequent on the old King's death and possible disputes among the thirty-six princes who might claim the throne, are fully described in the Rangoon papers. Additional guards were sent to Bhamo and Mandalay to protect the residencies, built of teak and enclosed by bamboo palisades, which are really indefensible, and the Irrawaddy gunboat, with a reinforcement of fifty marines, was ordered up the river, but hitherto all has been quiet.

THE probabilities of troubles at Mandalay, which may render necessary the peacemaking interference of the authorities of British Burma, are much exercising the Indian journals. A useful suggestion is thrown out by the Englishman, which points out that the shortest sea and land route combined is from Calcutta to Akyab, which might be done in thirty-six hours fast steaming, and a railway or trunk road from Akyab to Mandalay, 200 miles as the crow flies. The opinions of the officers who have served in the hill tracts of Arakan go to show that "they are not aware of any difficulties which would surpass the skill of our railway engineers, the Yomadong Hills notwithstanding. The plan savours very plainly of a hankering after the annexation of Burma, which would doubtless result upon any internecine conflict in that kingdom, and, however distasteful to the Woots, would probably confer real benefits on the gentle and industrious Burmese population. But a more desirable state of things is what yesterday's telegram announces, the attitude of the new king and his Ministers towards the British Government is infinitely more conciliatory than in the last reign.

THE Bishop of Calcutta narrowly escaped being robbed by a gang of dacoits (highway thieves) while travelling through Maharajah Scindia's territory on a visitation tour. The driver of his lordship's camel carriage and another servant were severely beaten, and the robbers then turned their attention towards the carriage, the inmates of which they prodded with their pointed sticks through the iron air gratings, placing them, as the chaplain describes it, in a "ludicrous and disagreeable position." The rogues, however, decamped suddenly, it is supposed because they found from the voices of the bishop and his chaplain that there were Englishmen inside, and concluded from this that the occupants would be well armed.

A GOVERNMENT minute on a test census taken in Mysore, with a view to ascertaining the famine mortality, has been published. Mr. Elliott, the famine commissioner, considers that 1,100,000 out of a population of 5,207,074 represents the loss caused by the famine; a loss of 50,000 may have been due to diminution of births. The chief commissioner, Mr. Gordon, does not assume a higher figure than 700,000 from the mortality from all causes during the famine.

THE pressure of the famine in Madras, which is causing even the well-to-do classes to sell or hypothecate their lands, can be gauged by the statistics furnished in the report of the Registration Department. The number of registrations for '77-78 amounted to 289,059, being 38,183 in excess of '76-77, the largest increase being found in the worst famine districts, North Arcot showing 61.8 per cent. The sales exceeded those of the previous year by 10,578, and the mortgages by 21,567. The transactions in which the value was stated amounted to Rs. 54,67,244, being 71 lakhs in excess of the previous year, and the value of lands sold or mortgaged exhibits an increase of 55 lakhs. Lands, however, frequently change hands for value without any other formality than a transfer of the puttah in the collector's book. The financial results showed receipts Rs. 4,45,681, and expenditure Rs. 3,29,449, giving a surplus of Rs. 1,16,031. The rate of expenditure was 73.9, as against 79.4 in the previous year, when the figures were: receipts Rs. 3,92,193, expenditure Rs. 3,11,503, and surplus Rs. 80,502.

MINUTES by Sir Richard Temple and the Hons. J. Gibbs and L. R. Ashburner have been published in the Bombay papers on the report of the Sanitary Commissioner, showing the mortality in the nine affected districts of the Bombay Presidency during the famine. The number of deaths in 1877, according to the official returns, was 436,302, as compared to an average annual mortality for the previous years of 277,166.

THE annual report of the Judicial Administration (Criminal) of the Central Provinces for 1877 exhibits an increase of 802 cases of offence in the number returned for the preceding year. In eleven districts crime increased; in eight it decreased. In Sambalpur the increase was very marked, there being 1,935 offences reported in 1876, and 3,223 in 1877. The increase is ascribed to better reporting of offences, and to offences being now brought before the magistrate for settlement which were formerly illegally decided by landholders. There was also an increase in the graver classes of offences—such as offences against persons and property, and a large increase in offences against property without violence—asccribed to the poverty and want induced by the famine and the high prices of grain.

THE Government of India have come to the conclusion that there is no evidence in Indian experience that quarantine regulations produce any beneficial results, and it is proposed, in lieu of the present quarantine regulations, which are held to derange trade and often cause inconvenience and pecuniary loss to shipowners, passengers, and traders, and are apt to expose to additional danger the healthy passengers on board detained vessels, to organise a system of medical inspection for all vessels arriving in port. Under this system interference with trade and with persons not suffering from any epidemic disease will be avoided, and persons who are found to be so suffering will be sent at once to the nearest hospital, unless they or their friends can afford to procure adequate care for them elsewhere. To meet possible special cases of vessels arriving from the Persian Gulf with the plague on board provisional quarantine restrictions will be sanctioned for Bombay.

THE Indian Government and local administrations have recently been in correspondence about earthquakes. Mr. Pogson, of Madras, wrote a learned note on Seistology as applied to the Southern Presidency, and proposals are gradually taking shape for recording the labourings and tremblings of the earth at different stations over India. Some remarks on the subject by Mr. Blanford are published in the "Transactions of the Asiatic Society." Mr. Blanford points out that earthquake shocks are more prevalent in the great river plains than in other parts of India. Assam, the Himalayas, Sind, and Kutch are more subject to earthquakes than the peninsula; and "the countries which have, at a geologically recent date, undergone great disturbances, are far more affected than those which have remained comparatively undisturbed." Mr. Blanford suggests that, by a process of compression, the Himalayas, the Suleiman and other ranges west of the Indus, and the mountains of Assam are perhaps being elevated.

THE review of the commercial operations of the port of Calcutta, which is prefixed to the report of the accounts of the sea-borne trade of the Presidency of Bengal for 1877-8, states that the value of the foreign trade amounted to 55 crores of rupees, and that of the country trade to 17 crores, showing an increase of  $9\frac{1}{2}$  crores and  $4\frac{1}{2}$  crores respectively over the value of the trade in the previous year. The foreign increase is made up of an advance of 5 crores in imports, about equally divided between merchandise and treasure, and  $4\frac{1}{2}$  crores in exports of merchandise. Of imports from foreign countries, treasure accounts for nearly 5 crores,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  of silver and nearly  $\frac{1}{2}$  crore of gold, the importation of which latter had fallen to 20 lakhs in the previous year. Merchandise amounted to over  $19\frac{1}{2}$  crores, an increase of 270 lakhs over the previous year, due, as to 218 lakhs, to heavier shipments of cotton twist and piece goods from England, "for want of a better market elsewhere." The other principal increases in imports were in liquors (11 lakhs), metals, mineral oil, silks, raw and manufactured, umbrellas, drugs and spices, provisions, and apparel and woollen goods. Railway plant, salt, and China tea all showed a falling off, while coal was slightly greater in quantity but less in value. There was a large decrease in the exports of treasure, which amounted during the past two years to 10 lakhs and 4½ lakhs respectively, compared with 75 lakhs in the two previous years, the flow of cheap silver being into Calcutta. The exports of merchandise increased by 4½ crores in value, the principal increases being in linseed, raw jute, indigo, wheat, rice, jute, bags, castor oil, raw skins, myrabolams, and teel seed; while there were decreases in the shipments of raw cotton, sugar, lac, raw silk and silk piece-goods, jute cloth, dressed skins, cutch and ginger. The Collector of Customs remarks that "the fall in the exchange between India and Europe, consequent on the great depreciation in the value of silver, was extremely favourable to exports from this country, as it enabled shippers to purchase with the silver that was obtainable cheap in Europe, the staples of India, where silver forms the current coin, and there is no restriction on coinage on private account. Under these circumstances the great increase in exports may be considered to a certain extent as exceptional, due rather to the state of the money market than indicative of a steady expansion of trade; and a decline in exports may be looked for, caused by a rise in the prices of food grains and other staples." Exports of sugar fell off to the extent of 30 per cent. in quantity, but tea showed an increase of five and a-half millions of pounds. The Collector remarks on this, "that, moreover, owing to high prices in former years, there has been a great tendency in manufacture to sacrifice quality for quantity. This, in the face of a large competing crop from China, depressed the value of any tea in the manufacture of which quality had not been amply attended to, and the general result has been that, although the export of tea has shown an increase in quantity, the pecuniary result has been far from satisfactory, and the advices from home insist strongly upon the vital necessity of very careful manufacture in respect of quality if Indian tea is to compete successfully with China tea in the London market."

THE Bombay Chamber of Commerce has sent a memorial to the Secretary of State for India enumerating objections to the proposed Marmagao-Bellary Railway. The memorialists are alarmed at the probability that if the railway is carried out as projected the trade of the Southern Mahratta country will be hampered by duties levied on it in passing through Portuguese territory and through the Portuguese port of Marmagao. It is strange, they contend, that a concession of the kind granted by Lord Cranbrook should have been made without an arrangement being first concluded between the Government of India and the Portuguese Government, exempting all merchandise passing over the line from duties, or at any rate equalising such duties with those levied in British territory, and declaring Marmagao a free port.

THE East Indian Railway Volunteer Corps is now the largest organisation of the kind in the country. It numbers 951 members, grouped into 15 companies and 28 detachments, and it has 24 rifle ranges. For drill and instructive purposes the line, about 1,500 miles long, is divided into 12 districts, each in charge of a fully qualified sergeant instructor. The men are most willing, in the majority of cases, indeed, quite enthusiastic, in their drill; and the issue of the Martini-Henry rifle has added much to their efficiency, the perfect accuracy of the small-bore weapon greatly raising the average of the shooting. The new uniform of the corps, rifle-green in colour, is expected to be ready for the cold weather, and the men will then have a more soldierly, well set-up appearance. The value of a thousand effective volunteers, of whom 12 per cent. are marksmen, as a unit in the armaments of India is, we are sure, fully appreciated by the military authorities.

A PROPOSAL is afloat to buy out the rights and interests of zemindars and ryots in the trees they may have planted along roadsides. Considering the mileage of the roads which intersect even the smallest district, the proposal does not recommend itself as likely to be of advantage to the cause of arboriculture. If trees are planted 30ft. apart, about 350 will be required for each mile of road, to be planted on both sides. There must be few, if any, districts with less than 200 miles of road, first and second class. If it costs, at a moderate computation, four annas to plant one tree, we attain the respectable total of Rs. 17,500 for each district. Now the grant for arboriculture is at the outside Rs. 500 per district. It would take, therefore, thirty-five years for avenues to be planted along all the roads. This is, of course, an outside calculation, but it is evidently bad policy to discourage those to whom tree-planting is a duty as well as a pleasure, from assisting in a work now recognised as most important. If zemindars and cultivators were allowed to plant trees with due restrictions as to kind, position, and nurture, the privilege of taking the fruit and dead wood would be but a small return for so great a benefit. It is needless to say that any attempt to buy out existing rights would result in vexatious litigation, and cost a sum of money out of all proportion to the supposed advantages to be gained.

A LETTER on the subject of the reduction or withdrawal of the ecclesiastical subsidies in Ceylon has been addressed by Archdeacon Mathew to the Governor in reply to a demand for statistics as to the civil servants who profit by the ministrations of the clergy and catechists, in which he says that the large majority of the congregations of the Establishment are natives of the island. That of St. Peter's Church, Colombo, is the only one in which the majority are English; in Holy Trinity, Colombo, all are Burghers; in Kandy, Galle, and Jaftna the large majority are Burghers; in St. Paul's, Colombo, all are Portuguese; while the three Singhalese and the Tamil chaplaincies speak for themselves. Nine of the sixteen clergy, and all the catechists, are natives of the island, and most of these minister only in the native tongues. "It will thus, I think, be evident that the benefits of the Establishment are enjoyed in by far the largest proportion by the Burghers of the principal towns, and by the old-established Singhalese congregations in the Western Provinces; in short, by those who enjoyed the benefits of an Establishment under the Dutch Government. And I venture to submit, Sir, that these, who receive no pay from the Crown, but have lost, except in so far as we continue it, the Establishment which they formerly enjoyed under the Dutch, are the very classes who deserve the tenderest consideration in this matter at the hands of Her Majesty's Government."

TWENTY-FIVE native students gave in their names at a meeting recently held in Calcutta as "willing to sign the pledge," not against liquor-drinking, but against early marriage. The following is the wording of this curious document:—"Deeply impressed with the pernicious character of the custom of child-marriage, and with the evils that have followed in its train, convinced of the solemn duty I owe to myself and to my countrymen to discourage, so far as may lie in my humble power, a custom so hurtful to students—so prejudicial to the best interests of my countrymen at large—I hereby solemnly declare that I will not marry, nor allow myself to be given in marriage, till I have completed the age of twenty-one years, my present age being——."

The Rangoon Gazette says that an opposition line of steamers to the British India Company has been established to run between Calcutta and Rangoon, and Rangoon and Madras. The agents in Rangoon are Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot, and Co., and the first steamer of the line, the Cyrene, has already arrived there.

FROM CABUL TO BAMIAN.

CONTRIBUTED BY LIEUT.-GENERAL KAYE.

SEPT. 12, 1839.—Marched in progress to Bamian. Encamped about two miles east of Kila Kazi, distant from Cabul some eight or nine miles. We went through the city by a different road from that which we pursued on the 9th of this month, when we arrived at Cabul. The streets narrow in some places, and difficult for the passage of guns.

14th.—Urghundi, 11 miles.—The village is situated at the base of hills about a mile north of the Ghuzni road, which we left about two miles before reaching camp. An execrable road over stones and boulders. One of the guns overturned in a stony nullah. A gradual ascent from Kila Kazi. Grass in no great quantity. Clover cultivated. The ghaut leading to Maidan bears S. 20 deg. W.

15th.—Rustum Khail, 8 miles.—At the distance of about a mile from camp our road led between two hills, that on the left being but a small one. After a short distance we commenced the ascent, and about a mile of rough, stony road brought us to the summit of the pass. Thence for about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles we followed a track along the brow of the hill over undulating ground. The descent into the valley of the Cabul river was at first abrupt and rocky, with a bad hillside precipice. Camp in the valley about  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles from the commencement of descent. The road the whole march execrable, especially the ascent and descent. In the former large loose stones, and in some instances rocks, rendered the task extremely harassing to the horses, as the footing was insecure, and the wheels were frequently jammed among the rocks. Eight horses were harnessed this march, but still in many places we were obliged to use drag ropes. In the descent, or rather the first part of it, the four leaders were taken out, and the wheels locked, but it was also necessary to hold on by drag ropes, as, in five instances, the lock chains snapped, and the horses were then unable to hold back the carriage. One of the guns was upset over the hillside from this cause. Our course during the ascent W., except for a short pull at the summit, when it was south of W. Along the top of the pass N.W., and the descent into camp W.N.W. Hills right and left, the two extremities of those on the left bearing W.N.W. and S.S.E. The Cabul river flows between us, and the range just mentioned, passing round its eastern point into the Maidan Valley. The valley at this place, not above a mile broad, appears to narrow ahead, and is terminated by a bold range of hills. We started to-day at  $5\frac{1}{2}$  a.m.; last carriage arrived in camp  $12\frac{1}{2}$  p.m. Grass plentiful but not good. At the summit of the pass we met Captain G. Thomson, chief engineer, who reports the passes ahead impracticable for guns. 16th.—Halted.

17th.—Julraiz, ten miles.—We continued our route about W.N.W. along the valley of the Cabul river. The road occasionally sweeping along the slope of the northern range, which now and again approached more closely the bank of the stream. The road generally rough and stony; the valley highly cultivated and richly sprinkled with villages; willows and poplars shade the banks of the river and brooks. Clover is cultivated, but at present it is very young. The hills on the left here take a bend towards W.S.W., and apparently mingle with the range ahead. Plenty of long grass.

18th.—Sir-i-Chushmeh, ten miles.—The valley narrowed as we proceeded, and our road (if such it could be called) frequently crossed the river, and wound now on one bank, now on the other. At about four miles from Julraiz the valley was scarcely broader than the bed of the stream, huge rocks rising precipitously on either hand; here all trace of a road was lost for a time, and we travelled in the rocky channel of the river, which was shallow but rapid. It was a bad road, the entire march rough and stony, and sometimes we were compelled to leave it and pass across the fields. Plenty of green turf near camp, but grass too short to cut. Purchased boosa (chopped straw) for the horses.

19th.—Camp, Oonai Pass, nine miles.—We continued to wind through the valley by a better road than that of yesterday. At about the third mile the glen took a turn to the right; the approach to this part of the valley guarded by a small fort, picturesquely situated on a slight eminence beneath the lofty hills to the right. Hence the ascent became exceeding steep, and the hills closed in upon us, so that occasionally our road ran up the slopes; but there was no difficulty till about the sixth mile, when the route became rocky. At the eighth mile, or thereabouts, two steep pulls up; drag ropes in request, as the horses were jaded with the march, which was a heavy one from the dead pull on the collar. Camp irregularly formed between the hills at a short distance beyond the last pull up. We ascended near 2,000 ft. this march. Elevation above sea rather under 10,000 ft. The mountain air very cold; there was ice on the ground when the head of the column arrived. Every inch of land between the hills is cultivated, except in places where the soil of the valley is too much encumbered by rock. Several forts situated on the hill sides. Passed the village of Oonai about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles distant. Long, bad grass procurable on the hill sides. Purchased boosa and lucerne for the horses.

20th.—Oonai Pass, second day.—In this day's march we surmounted four kotuls, and encamped on some table land with a slight inclination towards the west; distance only  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles, but it was a march of labour. We reached the base of first ascent about a mile from old camp; here the hills closed in, the valley terminated, and a low but steep eminence presented itself. The leading guns were unlimbered, eight horses taking up the limber, and the guns being drawn up by hand. We had a working party of 400 men of the Goorkha regiment, and some sixty Hazarehs, hired by our Cafila Bashee. The remainder of the carriages made the ascent entire, without any unlimbering, the Goorkhas assisting at the drag ropes. The descent was short, but steep; all horses, except those in the pole, taken out, wheels locked, and drag ropes to hold on. The second ascent was longer and steeper than the first; indeed, so steep as to render the horses of no use, they had no secure foothold; the guns and wagons were consequently unlimbered and drawn up separately by hand. There was scarcely any descent, and the third ascent was slight and rather a continuation of the second. Up it most of the carriages passed without any assistance; a long but gradual descent followed, where it was only necessary to lock wheels. At the fourth ascent no manual assistance was required, as it was not so steep as any of the others. We have reached the highest point of the pass, and are encamped at an elevation of 11,400 ft. above the sea level. The Koh-i-Baba (18,000) is visible, the centre peak bearing W.N.W.; a considerable quantity of snow on the ridges of this mountain, even at some distance below the summit. Around us nothing is to be seen but a succession of bleak and barren hills; there are certainly a few patches of cultivation to the south in some recesses of the hills below us, but not a tree or bush visible. In the distance ahead the loftier range (in which are the passes of Hajeejuk and Irak) bounds the view. Long grass, but bad. A small quantity of boosa procured.

21st.—Oonai Pass, third day. Camp near Youatt, 2 miles.—Immediately after leaving camp a steep descent, with some awkward bends, presented itself. Only four horses put in, wheels locked, and a party of Hazarehs holding on by drag ropes. After this we had to surmount an ascent longer and steeper than any of those in yesterday's march. The four leaders were put in in each carriage, and, with the help of the drag ropes, the ascent was accomplished. From the summit the road led by a gradual descent to Youatt or Yort, situated in a hollow among the hills. We have now got clear of the Oonai Pass, but have still severe work before us. No grass procurable, though there are plenty of grass swamps here. Boosa purchased and some long straw (of wild oats or barley) brought in. Many of the crops still uncut.

22nd.—Gurdun Dewaal on the Helmund river,  $6\frac{1}{2}$  miles.—The road led along by the base of a high hill on our left, and passed over four of its spurs, some of these rather steep, and at three of the descents we had to lock wheels. No manual assistance required. After about five miles we turned suddenly to the right and passed down a glen, the hills on either side rising like walls; a considerable descent this part of the march. This continued about a mile, when we emerged into the valley of the Helmund, crossed the river, and encamped on the western, or right bank. The valley is narrow, but every available spot of ground is utilised for cultivation; but the banks of the river, here a shallow stream, are entirely destitute of wood; grass tolerably plentiful near the water. Yesterday we had received from Cabul orders to halt; but Yort could provide us with neither grain nor forage, so we moved on to this place, which is more productive. The Envoy's letters were to the effect that Captain G. Thomson, the chief engineer, had reported the passes impracticable for wheels; and that therefore three of the guns and all the wagons were to be sent back to Cabul under a subaltern; that three elephants would be sent for the transport of the remaining three guns (dismounted), their ammunition boxes being carried on camels; and that two  $5\frac{1}{2}$  in. mortars and one three-pounder gun would be sent out to reinforce the Artillery. Captain W. E. Hay, commanding Goorkha Regiment, and also the detachment, requested discretionary powers, which were, however, refused; but on account of a favourable report of the Irak Pass, which was made by Lieutenants W. Broadfoot (of the Goorkha Regiment), and Murray Mackenzie (commanding 4th Troop 3rd Brigade Horse Artillery), who had been sent in advance to examine the road, permission to take the troop forward was at length granted. Letter received on Sept. 29: Commander-in-chief directs that, should forage be scarce, the troop return to headquarters.

30th.—Siah Kilah, seven miles. Our road quitted the Helmund immediately at its junction with a small rapid stream called Siah Sung. We then proceeded up the valley, or rather defile, through which the rivulet flows. The stream meanders much, and the valley is very narrow, the hills rising abruptly on either side. We crossed the rivulet some twenty or thirty times; it is shallow and rapid, with a rough, stony bed. It is called Siah Sung from a "black rock," which near the close of the march stretches across the defile, leaving but a narrow passage for the stream. We were obliged in consequence to ascend the hill on our left. The slope was somewhat steep, and about 200 yards in length. Although eight horses were in the help of drag ropes was necessary. At this point of the valley another defile branches towards the west, and through the opening Koh-i-Baba was visible W. 15 deg. S. The hills enclosing the valley to the W. form a continuation to the slopes of this mountain. Encamped on the high ground above the valley. Very little cultivation; grass plentiful. A rather rough road altogether; ascent not great.

October 1.—Kahzar, six miles.—We continued our course on the high ground for about one mile and a-half, and then descended into the valley to avoid some ravines, the beds of small streams flowing from the Koh-i-Baba. The road, which we followed in the valley, was generally good, but occasionally rough, and we had to cross the stream several times. At one place, about two miles from Siah Kila, the eastern slope shot down close to the bed of the stream. In rounding this point a wagon was upset into the rivulet; however, by clearing away some of the stones, a practicable road was soon formed. After about a mile or more in the valley, we again left it, on account of swampy ground, by a rather steep ascent, and a nice bit of marsh by way of commencement. A descent almost immediately followed into one of the ravines before mentioned; and the opposite ascent being steep and stony, we again turned into the valley, which soon, however, became more confined, and we once more took to the upper ground. On approaching Kahzar, a steep ascent led up to the fort. The abrupt bank on the left was to-day for some distance lower than previously, and the Koh-i-Baba swept down in one continuous slope from the eastern peak (which alone is visible from this ground). But from the point where we again descended into the valley a somewhat lofty hill intervened, and shut out from our view the lower part of the mountain, and along the side of this hill the worst track led. The bank on the right, formed by lofty, precipitous hills; Koh-i-Baba bears S.S.W. Much snow on this face of the mountain. Our course to-day and yesterday about N.W.; the sinuosities of the valley being generally N.N.W. and W.N.W. The ascent to-day greater than that of yesterday. Crossed one bit of boggy ground at a gallop. Grass plentiful. Road to Kaloo Pass branches off by a valley to the left.

2nd.—Irak Pass.—Five and a-half miles to the foot of the ghaut (about north of Cahzar; windings of valley being N.E., N., and N.N.W.) The valley no longer confined by abrupt banks, but the lofty spurs of the mountains sweep down on either side. We took a line of our own, crossing the brook frequently, the ground diversified with swamp and rock. At the foot of the ascent is the source of the Siah Sung stream, on the banks of which we had marched the three last days; and around the spring a considerable quantity of last year's snow still lay. This was about 1,000 feet below the summit of the pass (bearing due west) which has an elevation of 13,000 feet above sea level. Subsequently we found snow in larger quantity at the western base of the mountain, and also at some distance down the glen of the Ab-i-Irak. The passage of the pass by guns and wagons occupied the whole day, until after night had commenced. It was mostly accomplished by manual labour, horses taken out, and pieces unlimbered. We had a working party of 400 Hazareh mountaineers, and the Horse Artillery Troopers—(the men who rode and who worked the guns of Native H. A. were styled "Troopers.")—and Syces (native grooms) took up some carriages. The Hazarehs were cheerful and hard working, very friendly in those days, but generally struck work towards sunset. The road (a good one, made by Lieut. Broadfoot) led round the shoulder of the Irak mountain, the ascent being generally at an angle of 25 deg., and in some places even steeper (between 30 deg. and 40 deg.), and in length about  $1\frac{1}{4}$  miles. By 11 a.m. six of the carriages had reached the summit; the horses of one subdivision took up No. 6 limber, the team of that gun being an especial good one. The remaining carriages soon followed, and in the afternoon we passed the twelve carriages down to the valley below. The descent was steeper, but not quite so long as the ascent.

3rd.—Camp in the valley of the Ab-i-Irak,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  miles from the western base of the mountain. The Hazarehs joined us again in the morning, and the transport of our impedimenta (baggage, stores, &c.) recommenced, and by 9 a.m. the ghaut was clear and all had joined the battery at the western base and its escort. The march was then resumed. Our road led by a narrow, stony valley, watered by a small stream, called the Ab-i-Irak. Direction of our march generally N.N.W. Very lofty hills on each side of camp, a most inhospitable valley, where the sun sets to those within it at 3 p.m. and does not rise till 9 a.m. Forage scarce.

4th.—Mian-i-Irak, 4 miles. Road continued along the valley, which is rugged and stony. A most rapid descent the whole way, with some very steep drops, exceedingly unpleasant from the dangerous nature of the road. The Irak mountain itself is tolerably smooth and free from rock, but as we descended the hills became rugged and precipitous, and, during this march, they rose perpendicularly some 2,000 ft., like solid walls of stone. Several accidents in this short march, from the snapping of lock chains and overturn of a carriage in a nasty descent close to camp; fortunately no one materially hurt. Our camp was formed in a part of the valley more open than it had previously been. The hills here of no great elevation; all the flat land cultivated; crops only just reaped; many forts and ruins, and some caves in the hill side. Here we again saw trees and a few stunted willows, the first we had seen since leaving Oonai. Trout, exactly like those of England, and of a good size, caught in the stream here. (There are trout of the English species in all the streams flowing to the north, but none in those which take their rise south of the Hindu-Koosh range.) Long dry grass stored in the caves. The direction of our march was generally to the north, but latterly west. The mortars and three-pounder gun joined us at this ground.

5th.—Zohauk, six miles.—Continued our route along the valley, well cultivated, and tolerably broad, for about two miles, towards the north, when we turned off abruptly to the west, leaving the Ab-i-Irak, and entering a passage through some low hills. We had not proceeded far when we were brought up by the Kuski Ghaut, passing over a low hill, a spur from the high range. Though the height was not great the ascent was excessively steep, far more so than that of Irak. Some 200 Hazarehs, the Goorkha regiment, and a dismounted party of Christie's Horse took up the carriages. The labour was very great, and it was not till 2 or 3 p.m. that the last carriage reached the summit. The horses took some of the limbers up one part of the ascent, but the commencement and last part of the ride were far too steep for them, the latter in particular, the slope of which was at about 45 deg., and here, although we unlimbered, it required about 150 men to take up a single part of a carriage. We brought an elephant up, but he was of very little aid. About half-a-mile of table land, with a dangerous precipice on the right, led us to the descent, when it was necessary again to unhorse. The working parties were tired, and many left us; thus the descent occupied a long time, the last carriage did not reach the bottom till some time after sunset. A narrow ravine, with a stony bed, followed, and led us to another ghaut; this passed over an insignificant hill, yet it was sufficiently steep to prevent our jaded horses from surmounting it; and as the Hazarehs here left us we had no alternative but to park the guns in the ravine, though the encamping ground was only half-a-mile distant. We had been more than twelve hours in accomplishing this short march.

6th.—The Hazarehs joined us in the morning, and we soon passed our guns over the obstacle. The descent was steep and stony, and at its foot we crossed the Kaloo river and encamped on its left bank. Zohauk is a ruined fortress on the summit of a rock, with perpendicular scarps, situated at the gorge of the defile leading from Kaloo, where it joins the Bamian Valley, in which we encamped. The valley here runs W.S.W., and is about a quarter of a mile broad, and well cultivated, the hills by no means so lofty as those which enclosed us at Ab-i-Irak.

7th.—Bamian, 9 miles to the Great Image.—We marched along the banks of the Bamian river, which we crossed often; the streams flow from the west, and the Kaloo river joins it at Zohauk. The valley stony in places, and often boggy, but we had no occasion to complain of the road, it being much better than any we had passed over lately. The valley is about a mile broad at Bamian, and well cultivated, but presents now a desolate appearance, as the crops have all been cut, and the few trees which enliven the scene have put on a wintry garb. Snow fell in the night, and the southern hills are capped with snow; a few flakes fell in the valley. Many caves in the face of the rock near the Images, like a gigantic warren. Forage scarce. The first heavy fall of snow occurred on Oct. 15. Subsequently the rivers froze hard. In Jan. the thermometer fell to 12 degrees below zero. At the end of Feb. the river ice broke in centre; melted next month. Last fall of snow on May 3.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PORT SAID.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As a master mariner, and having made several voyages through the Suez Canal, I should like to draw attention to the excessive nuisance that the swarm of bumboats of Port Said prove to shipping. During a steamer's stay at the port the officers are generally busy about their several duties, and unable to stand sentry all over the ship, the decks are crowded with men coaling the ship, and, of course, for a time there is more or less confusion; during this time the men are supplied with a poison that is capable of rendering them helpless in half an hour, and when the ship is ready to start it frequently happens that a lot of the men are incapably drunk. I have made a voyage of six months with the same crew without a single case of drunken men on board, and considered that I had a steady, respectable lot of men. On passing through Port Said, however, homeward bound, although the ship was there only three hours, when we were ready to start not one sober hand could be found, many of them being perfectly helpless. It may be supposed that these boats could be easily kept away; but, even if the officers had nothing else to do, I doubt if they could succeed altogether in preventing the stuff being smuggled on board. Considering this to be a source of danger to life and property, I imagine, Sir, that it only requires to be generally known to be remedied.—I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

A MASTER MARINER.

London, Oct. 24.

Typhoid fever is, we learn, prevalent amongst the 60th Rifles at Agra. There have also been some cases of cholera in the fort there.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

RUSSIA AND CABUL.

PERHAPS there may be no necessity for war with Russia over this affair, because Russia is a Power which has great skill in backing down when fairly convinced that threats are serious. But it would be impossible to misunderstand the politics of this crisis more completely than by supposing it merely a case for chastising a semi-barbarous potentate who has given an insolent reception to courteous advances from the British Government. That view of the complication is a sound one as far as it goes, but it goes a very little way. The insolence of the Ameer must, of course, be punished. The British Government owes that, not to its own dignity, in the lowest sense of the phrase—not because it can care, as the Ameer himself might care, for the incense of respect from inferiors—but to the Princes of Asia generally. It would not be fair to them, that, while feeling themselves constrained to defer to the British Government as the paramount Power in this part of the world, they should see one of their number enhancing his own importance among credulous subjects by showing disrespect for British ascendancy. So the Ameer undoubtedly has to be punished for what has lately passed. But the more important task before the British Government is the exaction of some guarantee from Russia that no treacherous intrigues shall be attempted again in the neutral territory between her dominions and the Queen's. It would be too much, one would think, for the patience of the Russophile party itself, if the tactics employed to undermine the Turkish Power were revived in a new shape as a mode of attacking British supremacy in India. But the despatch of an embassy to Cabul by the Russians is nothing less than an attempt at such a revival. The Russian Government may be used to breaking its word, but it is too subtle in its diplomacy to forget its promises. It must certainly remember the assurances it gave only a few years back that it would not interfere in any way with Cabul; that it regarded Afghanistan as outside the sphere of its action. This embassy is, therefore, something worse than an encroachment, something worse than an attack on British interests; it is a living breach of faith; its presence in Cabul is the accomplished dishonour of the Sovereign it represents. And while the English papers may be right enough in saying that the treatment of the Ameer should be left to the Indian Government, the English Government will be dreadfully mismanaging matters if it rests satisfied with the measures the Indian Government may undertake. The precise nature of the guarantees that ought to be taken from Russia would be a subject for later consideration; but it is to be hoped neither Government nor public opinion at home will forget that, whatever bloodshed and trouble may now be incurred, the Russians are responsible for it—wholly responsible. The Ameer is more or less of a savage, so far at any rate as to be unable to comprehend public affairs in their true bearings; but he would have been managed by the Indian Government, if they had not been interfered with, skilfully enough to have been saved from the worst consequences of his own stupidity. He would have been allowed no opportunity of blundering, as he has blundered under the influence of Russia, into the delivery of an insult to the British Government which nothing but an invasion of his territory can redress. Afghan affairs have been mismanaged in the past, though indecision at home has been mainly responsible for such mismanagement. But latterly they have been in a fair way to be well managed, and it is Russia, and only Russia, which has dragged us into the necessity of making war with Afghanistan. It would not, merely be weak, it would be stupid, of the British Government not to take this opportunity of inflicting on Russia, as an Asiatic Power, some humiliation which would be at once a penalty and a pledge for the future.—Pioneer.

GOVERNMENT BOOKSELLING.—No less than twenty-two pages of the last Government Gazette of the Central Provinces are taken up with a list of books, maps, slates, slate pencils, &c., for sale at the Government book depot at Nagpur. A contemporary says: "As the books include works of poetry, novels, and well-known standard works in history, science, mathematics, &c., such as are advertised by booksellers throughout India, this is a direct interference with trade which the Government ought not to allow. As an attraction to purchasers, a discount of 7 per cent. is allowed on purchases to the amount of Rs. 25 and upwards, provided the amount is paid within six months."—Indian Daily News.

FEVER IN MALDAH.—Last autumn there occurred an outbreak of malarious fever in Maldah, which is said to have lasted from the beginning of September to the end of January, and to have affected no less than one thousand villages, or nearly two-fifths of the entire district, and to have caused 22,000 deaths.

THE INDUS AND THE RAILWAY TRAFFIC.—The troubles of the traffic officers of the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railways are not confined to the breaks in the Jullunder district. The bunder at Sher Shah is now high and dry, the river having betaken itself bodily to the opposite bank, a couple of miles across. Fortunately a small creek remains accessible to country craft, and the goods are thus transferred to where the steamers are moored on the Muzaffurgurh side of the river. The traffic manager has discovered a fairly satisfactory new bund some six miles above Sher Shah, but rather than lay a temporary line to the spot it would be well to wait until the river has renounced its present playful humours.—Civil and Military Gazette.

CAMP OF EXERCISE OF THE HYDERABAD CONTINGENT.—We learn that it has been arranged to hold a camp of exercise of the Hyderabad contingent troops at Aurungabad on or about the 14th December next. The troops who are to move to other stations are to join their respective stations via Aurungabad, viz.:—2nd Infantry H.C. to leave Jaulna, December 6; 4th ditto to leave Hingolee, November 24; 5th ditto remain at Aurungabad; 6th ditto to leave Ellichpore, November 15; No. 2 Battery Artillery, H.C., stationed at Aurungabad; 3rd Cavalry, ditto. The 1st Cavalry, H.C., under the command of Major Farrington, will probably take part. Brigadier General T. Wright, C.B., commanding the Hyderabad contingent, will arrive at Aurungabad on or about the 10th December next; the operations will last ten days, after which General Wright will proceed on what will be his last tour of inspection to all the military contingent stations, as he vacates the command early next year. A small camp of exercise was held at Aurungabad in January, 1875; the one that is to take place this year will be on a much larger scale. It is expected that Sir Richard Meade will also be present. The ground for the camp, we hear, is to be near the impregnable fort of Doulatabad.

CHARGE AGAINST AN INDIAN NAVAL OFFICER.—Mr. Harry Robson Jones, second officer of the Government steamer Undaunted has been committed for trial on a charge of having caused the death of one Monosib, a hulasee, on the 18th ult., when the vessel was about sixty miles from Saugor, proceeding up to Calcutta. It is stated that the officer struck the deceased and caused him to fall overboard.—Times of India.

Her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess of Hesse has contributed £15 to the Indian Girls' Scholarship Fund.

FLOODS IN SYLHET.—Heavy floods in the southern and western portion of the Sylhet district have destroyed some of the rice crop. The dhan in the lowlands of Nowgong has also been greatly damaged.—Times of India.

BACKERGUNGE.—The people of Backergunge are the most violent and reckless of human life of all the people of Bengal. That district has always enjoyed an unenviable notoriety for crimes of lawless violence, and of 25 cases of riot with murder, which occurred in the division during 1877, 12 were in Backergunge. In murders, also, it led the way (59 out of 116), and the same in culpable homicide (23 out of 64). Dacoity also increased, and altogether the district was in a most unsatisfactory state. Its condition has formed the subject of special correspondence, and measures have been adopted with the view of strengthening the criminal administration which have already commenced to show favourable results. In Dukkin Shahbazzpore a curious phase of crime developed itself in the form of illegal force resorted to in order to coerce those widows who had survived the cyclone into marriage with the assailants. So many more women than men had been drowned that difficulties naturally arose, which the temper of the Backergunge peasant led him to solve in his usual violent way.—Friend of India.

HUMAN SACRIFICES IN MAINPURI.—A murder of a very uncommon kind is reported from Mainpuri. A young teli left his house about midnight to get some medicine for his father. The next morning his dead body was found in a well near two small Hindu temples. He had been disembowelled, and this led to the suspicion that it was no ordinary case of robbery and murder. The temples were examined by the police, and in one of them pools of blood were found and also a small piece of entrail. There could scarcely be a doubt that the man had been offered up a sacrifice in the temple, an old custom which it was fondly hoped had been quite suppressed. A strict inquiry was made, and a native police inspector arrested five men, three of whom readily confessed. The murderers intended to cleanse the temple from the blood stains and to make it appear that thieves had rifled the body and thrown it into the well. Such sacrificial murders have, according to Dr. Chevers, cropped up from time to time even during the last twenty or thirty years, the goddess Kali being generally honoured with a human victim. The usual practice is to decapitate the unlucky person who may have been seized and then present the head at the shrine. It was even said that the Rajah of Jeypore, when succeeding his father in 1860-61, offered up a human sacrifice, but the story is not confirmed. The investigation of the present case may perhaps prove that the custom is by no means obsolete, as men are often found near temples murdered apparently in a very objectless way.—Times of India.

The committee appointed by Government to inquire into the effect of the present system of appointing natives to the public service on the attendance of students in art colleges consists of Mr. Pedder, president; Mr. Moore, collector of Sattara, and formerly educational inspector in Sind; Mr. Kirkham, acting educational inspector, central division; and Mr. Forrest, acting professor in the Puna College. The committee has already, we understand, had several sittings.

A "store-verifier" for all State railways, with the rank and pay of a storekeeper, first grade, has been appointed as a tentative measure by the Government of India.—Times of India.

EMIGRANTS.—During 1877-78, 18,488 emigrants were despatched from Calcutta to British and foreign colonies, while the number of admissions into the depots was 22,544. The Mauritius depot always stands first or second in the mortality list, which may be partly due to the fact that one of the chief fields of recruitment for that colony is Behar, where the classes who resort to emigration are generally the least adapted for the purpose, being sickly and often capricious and discontented.—Times of India.

DROWNING IN THE HOOGHLY.—The deaths of seamen by drowning in the river Hooghly during 1877 numbered fifty-nine, of whom forty-one were Europeans. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is of opinion that sailors should not be permitted to embark for their ships in this dangerous river after dark, and instructions have been given to the police to lock up men incapable of taking care of themselves till the following morning, besides warning the captains of the risk of employing men in painting the sides of ships without taking proper precautions for their safety.—Times of India.

SUICIDE OF CAPTAIN KING.—Captain King, post officer of Akryab, committed suicide on 30th ult. by shooting himself through the head with a revolver. The cause is as yet unknown.—Times of India.

MADRAS.

Major Balmer left Madras Oct. 5 for Bangalore, on three months' sick leave. Major Hicks will act as commissioner of police for Madras during Major Balmer's absence.

The Rev. R. J. Brandom, LL.D., has been appointed a junior chaplain on the Madras Establishment, and the Rev. W. F. Archibald an assistant chaplain of the Church of Scotland.—Madras Times.

THE LATE LIEUTENANT STOKES.—We regret to record the death, on Sept. 28, at the Madras Lunatic Asylum, from acute mania, of Lieutenant William Edward Stokes, of the King's 14th Hussars, aged twenty-five years. The deceased, before having become insane, was brought down from Bangalore a few days ago in order to be sent home. His remains were interred in St. Mary's burial ground.—Madras Times.

GUINDY PARK, A CATTLE BREEDING DEPOT.—The Madras Government is resolved to encourage the Agricultural College and Experimental Farm in every possible way. Orders have been sent to construct temporary sheds for the accommodation of the extra class at the college, and the work has been taken in hand by the Range Officer at the Mount. The plans and estimates for the new college buildings, which were temporarily shelved, have been called for. But the most encouraging feature is the offer made by his Grace the Governor of Guindy Park to the tax authorities as a cattle-breeding depot. There is, we are persuaded, a great future for efforts in the direction of an improved breed of cattle and sheep, and his Grace, with his usual shrewdness, has learned 'he want, and is disposed to afford facilities for its supply. In the event of Guindy Park being utilised as a cattle-breeding depot, the appropriation of the waste land intervening between it and the Sydapet Farm for the cultivation of fodder would seem almost a necessity. During the dry months the whole of Guindy Park would hardly supply enough of natural pasture to keep a herd of imported cattle in condition. The experiment on the Neilgherries, carried out simultaneously with Mr. Robertson's at Guindy, would do much to supply a long-felt want in Southern India.—South of India Observer.

THE 25TH REGIMENT MADRAS N.I.—The Acting Commander of the Forces has much satisfaction in recording in General Orders his appreciation of the soldierlike spirit evinced by all ranks of the 25th Regiment of Madras Infantry, including the volunteers from the 15th Regiment, when it was ordered for field service in Europe. The General Officer commanding the Provinces of Malabar and Canara reported that the embarkation of the 25th Regiment at Cannanore was conducted in the most orderly manner, without any confusion whatever, notwithstanding the presence on the beach of the sepoy's families. While at Malta, his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief remarked upon the steadiness of the men at drill. Both while stationed in Malta and Cyprus, the reports of good behaviour and good health of the 25th Regiment have been most satisfactory. Lieutenant General Elmhirst is well aware that soldiers of the Native Army are what the British officers make them, and therefore it is with every confidence that the Acting Commander of the Forces congratulates Colonel Gib, and the officers serving under him, for the credit that the 25th Regiment have brought upon the Madras Army by their exemplary conduct during the late expedition.

THE EUROPEAN PENSIONERS' COMMITTEE.—With the sanction of Government a committee, composed as under, will assemble at such time and place as the president may appoint, for the purpose of reporting upon the condition of European pensioners in the Madras Presidency:—President: Lieut. Col. Cochrane, V.C., 43rd Foot; Members: Major Briggs, Staff Corps, Cantonment Magistrate St. Thomas Mount, and Major Hamilton, 21st Foot, Commandant Poonamallee.—Madras Times.

THE PROPOSED PALGHAT DINDIGUL RAILWAY.—We understand that in view to the construction of a branch line of railway to connect Dindigul with some point on the Madras Railway to the west of Erode, the collectors of Coimbatore, Malabar, and Madura were asked by Government to state their opinions the results which may be expected to follow and the route which should be adopted. It appears that the goods traffic has not been diverted to any considerable extent by the opening of the southern extension of the S. I. Railway line to Dindigul and Madura. There is a large weekly market at Pollachy, where 10,000 persons attend, besides 1,300 pack bullocks and 800 carts. The annual teast and mart at Pulni also attract vast crowds from the western coast, and a considerable passenger traffic is anticipated. The collector of Coimbatore seems to think that a metre gauge tramway would suffice, and that the line should run from Pothanore or Madakarry through Pollachy and Oodumulpetta to Pulni, a bridge being required over the Ambravathi. The collector of Malabar thinks the line should run through the town of Palghat to Pollachy, thence via Oodumulpetta and Pulni to Dindigul. The sub-collector of Madura appears to be of opinion that a good case can be made out for the line as far as passenger traffic is concerned; and as regards goods traffic he anticipates a stimulus to the trade between Madura and the west coast. A trade in salt between Tinnevely and the south of Coimbatore is likely to be developed. He recommends the route from Dindigul to Pulni and thence to the Ambravathi river. We believe that the Revenue Board incline to concur generally in the conclusions entertained by the sub-collector of Madura, and advocate a line through Pulni, Oodumulpetta, and Pollachy, and thence by Rolangod and Palghat to the Palghat Railway station on the South West line. The construction of such a railway would bring the Annamalais into close connection with the plains, and should have no small effect towards opening those hills to European enterprise.—Madras Mail.

CHOLERA AT NEGAPATAM.—Owing to the large number of Roman Catholic pilgrims who have flocked to Negapatam, en route to Valanganny, for the great festival there, cholera has broken out, and many have fallen victims to this dire epidemic.—Indian Daily News.

The Madras journals announce the death, on Oct. 4, of the Rev. Benil Brissart, aged sixty-one years, a priest of the Pondicherry vicariate and member of the Missions Etrangères. His health had been undermined by his labours in famine relief at Salem.

MADRAS PRISONS.—The jail report for 1877 shows a total of prisoners 85,044, more than double the number of the previous year. This increase of crime was consequent on the famine. Of 2,274 convicts released on Jan. 1 only one or two returned. His Grace the Governor in Council notes with pleasure the favourable mention made by the Inspector-General of his staff generally and of certain officers in particular. He gladly acknowledges the zeal and vigilance shown by the department during an unprecedentedly trying year.—Madras Times.

NEW TAXATION FOR MADRAS.—An act of the Governor of Fort St. George in Council, which received the assent of the Viceroy on Sept. 7, provides that the municipality of Madras, after April 1, 1879, shall pay a quota not to exceed 50 per cent. of the total cost of the police force other than the marine. In every town subject to the Towns Improvement Act the municipal commissioners shall contribute a sum not exceeding 75 per cent. of the cost of the police force then employed.

VIZAGAPATAM SCHOOL.—It has been decided to close the Crown Children's School of the European veterans at Vizagapatam. The fees of the children transferred to other schools will be paid by Government.—Madras Times.

BOMBAY.

COTTON CROPS.—A telegram on the state of the cotton crops in the Central Provinces and the Berars, from the assistant-commissioner in charge of cotton statistics, dated Akola, Sept. 28, have been circulated by the Secretary of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce. "Wurdha and Nerbudda Valley report less favourable; heavy rain in Berar, and lowland crop less promising; upland crops excellent; general estimate 12 annas crop."—Bombay Gazette.

The Oomraotee correspondent of the Bombay Gazette writes:—"The mortality in Berar is so serious and increasing month by month, that I wonder attention has not been directed to it. To show the alarming state of things, I give the mortuary register for the month of June last. Let it be noted that there were upwards of 14,000 deaths in May last; in June 20,530 out of a population of 2,184,945, which occurred in the following six districts:—

	Deaths.	Births.	Population.
Bassim ... ..	6,734	780	208,905
Akola ... ..	4,010	1,539	480,657
Oomraotee ... ..	3,046	1,092	496,379
Woon ... ..	2,366	957	343,426
Booldana ... ..	2,649	1,161	365,779
Ellichpore ... ..	1,725	536	237,799
Total ... ..	20,530	6,055	2,184,945

This astounding mortality should be speedily inquired into. In the month under report the deaths occurred from the following diseases:—From fever 8,853, cholera 6,504, bowel complaints 1,675, small-pox 836, suicides 10, wounding 5, accidental 120, snake-bites 27, other causes 2,500; total, 20,530.

DEPARTURE OF H.M.S. TAMAR.—This transport, Captain W. H. Liddell, 2,034 tons, sailed on Sept. 23 for England, with the following officers and their families:—Lieut. and Mrs. Lyster and child, of the 24th N.I.; Quartermaster and Mrs. Costelloe and four children, of the 43rd Regt. L.I.; Captain and Mrs. Mansergh, of the 2-17th Regt.; the Hon. Captain J. Stewart, of the 12th Lancers; Dr. Burke, and Conductor Kennedy, of the Ordnance Department.—Bombay Gazette.

THE DHOND MANMAD RAILWAY.—We learn that the bridging of the Dhond Manmad Railway will not be commenced this year. The portion of this line from Nuggur to Dhond will reopen for traffic from the 15th proximo, and from Nov. 1 through traffic, Manmad to Dhond, will be resumed.—Bombay Gazette.

STORM AT BOMBAY.—During an Elephas storm which burst over Bombay on Sept. 30, over thirty native boats, laden with sugar, iron, &c., were lost in the harbour; only one life, however, as far as known, was lost. The P. and O. steamer Sinai, got aground while leaving the Mazagon dock.—Times of India.

THE HEIR TO THE NOWANAGAR GADI.—The Bombay Gazette tells us that the youth who was selected and approved, only a few months ago, as the heir to the Nowanagar gadi, died at Jamnagar a few days ago. The deceased was the son of Jalamsingjee, nephew to the present chief.

SIMLA WATERWORKS.—One effect of the preparations for war with Cabul has been to put a stop to the work on the Simla waterworks, for the men of the 23rd Pioneers, who were engaged upon them, have all left to join the headquarters of their regiment.

SPECIE IMPORTED.—During the first eight months of this year the value of gold imported was Rs. 1,20,00,581, and of that exported Rs. 45,05,081, and the value of silver imported was Rs. 4,08,90,386, and of that exported Rs. 73,30,542. This leaves a balance in favour of both metals imported of Rs. 4,10,55,544.

HYDROPHOBIA.—A paragraph in the Indian Tribune says that an elephant belonging to the Cooch Behar States was lately bitten by a mad dog, and the animal shortly afterwards showed all the symptoms of hydrophobia and has since died.

The following is the result of the opium sale held at the Calcutta Government sale-room on the 27th ult.:

	Chests.	Highest.	Lowest.	Average.	Proceeds.
Behar ... ..	2,500	1,285	1,275	1,280-0-9	32,00,125
Benares ... ..	2,000	1,190	1,180	1,184-5-2	23,68,650

BOMBAY BATTERIES.—It is satisfactory to learn that orders have been issued by the Home Government for the supply, with carriages, platforms, and racers, of the eight 12-5 inch 38-ton guns required for the two batteries proposed to be erected at Mahaluxmee and Colaba Points, Bombay.—Pioneer.

THE MONSOON.—The monsoon has been attended in Bombay by the most tremendous rainfall known for many years. Since the 21st June, when the monsoon of 1878 burst in Bombay, upwards of 116 inches have fallen. Last year there were between 60 and 70 inches.

THE INDIAN CONTINGENT.—The efficiency and expedition with which the Bombay Government carried out their arrangements for the despatch of the Indian troops to Malta have received the special recognition of the Admiralty.—Times of India.

FAILURE OF MESSRS. NICOL AND CO.—The failure of Messrs. Nicol and Co. for a very large sum has caused a great sensation in Bombay. Messrs. Nicol and Co. sent a circular to their Bombay creditors calling a meeting. At this meeting it was decided that the firm should go into liquidation, and a committee and two liquidators were appointed. There was quite a panic in the share market when it became known that Nicol and Co. had suspended payment, and Bombay Bank shares and those of the Mofussil Company, and others in which Messrs. Nicol and Co. were supposed to be concerned, fell rapidly. Fortunately the panic lasted but a short time, and people were reassured when it was discovered that there was no truth in the rumours in circulation regarding the stability of other mercantile firms in Bombay.—Times of India.

COURT OF INQUIRY.—In the recent Court of Inquiry, sitting at Kirkee, to examine the accounts of Major T. H. R. Cruickshank, late officiating commandant of sappers and miners, it was reported that there were certain defalcations, and consequently Major Cruickshank was ordered from Malta to return to Kirkee, where he had proceeded with the sappers and miners. The court of inquiry minutely examined the account books and exonerated the major from all blame. They concluded their remarks by saying that the system of keeping accounts was very irregular, which caused Major Cruickshank to be censured by His Excellency Sir Charles Staveley, the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army.—Times of India.

ARRIVAL OF A TRANSPORT.—The hired transport s.s. Bengal, 1,338 tons, Captain J. Rowley, arrived in harbour on Sept. 30 from Cyprus, towing the hired transport ship Citadel, with 465 men and officers of the 2nd Goorkha Regiment. The Citadel, 1,363 tons, Captain M'Gee, brought 131 men of the 1st Bombay Lancers.—Bombay Gazette.

BOMBAY MUNICIPAL BUDGET.—The budget estimates of the Bombay Municipality for 1879 show an anticipated increase of income of a lakh of rupees (£10,000), and it is calculated that at the close of next year there will be a surplus of Rs. 4,57,270 (£45,727) in hand.

The leave of absence to Europe, on medical certificate, granted to the Right Rev. Dr. L. G. Mylne, Bishop of Bombay, has been extended by the Secretary of State for India by two months.

THE NORTH-WESTERN FRONTIER OF INDIA.

NO. II.

It is on the parts to the north of Cashmir, along the south-eastern bend of the Indus, and very nearly along the seventy-fifth degree of longitude, that the boundary between the Tibetan, the Turk, and the Persian languages divides, at least, three different nationalities; and that in a country where the physical conditions are as important as the political. It has, at present, not much to do with Afghanistan and its Ameer, but a great deal to do with the Maharajah of Cashmir, and the ruler of Kashgar, whoever he may eventually be. It is not very easy to state exactly where the northern extension of Cashmir ends. It is certain, however, that it has been going on for some time—from a Russian point of view with the connivance of England, and, probably, at her instigation. Be this, however, as it may, it is the business of England to regulate it, and not let it give umbrage to the Powers that be, or may be, in Kashgar.

There is no fear of this for the parts between the Cashmirian boundary and the Indus—i.e., parts about Astor, or Istoor, and Chilas—for these belong to the Dard districts, which lead to Chitral and to the Hindu Kush. Gilgit, moreover, to the north of the Indus, is in the same category. It is on the lower waters of an affluent of the Indus—the Gilgit River—that this district lies; but on the upper part of its course there is a remarkable, and almost a mysterious, change in the ethnology.

In Yassin, on the same river as Gilgit and with a common frontier, whatever may be the case in the blood or descent of the natives, there is a decided difference in habits and in language. This has a few words in common with Dard dialects, and a few with the Tibetan and the Turk. But it is, conspicuously, a language per se; for there is no other class or family to which it can be referred. There are not many who speak it, nor does it cover much ground. But its geographical position is important. It lies (as has already been stated) along the upper course of the Gilgit River, which falls into the Indus; while the mountain chain in which it rises is the water-shed between the Indus and the Oxus, Moorcroft is the first traveller who drew attention to this people. There are two divisions of them, separated by a feeder of the Gilgit River, the Hunzas and the Nagars; these latter being supposed to be the milder and more peaceable division. As a whole, however, the Kanjuti (for this is their denomination) are predatory, unscrupulous, bold, active, and formidable to their neighbours on both sides. Nor is this all. The Rajah of Cashmir has attempted to reduce them, and has failed in his attempt.

Such is the first, and it will not be the last, of these outlying, eccentric, and independent populations which vary and complicate the policy of the different portions of the Indian frontier. In this direction they lie on the extremity of any probable frontier, for beyond the mountains of their northern boundary we are in on the drainage of the Khoten, Yarkend, and Kashgar Rivers, and in a district which we would not annex if we could. But up to this the extension of the Cashmirian boundary seems advisable. The Cashmirian, or northern frontier, however, is notably of less importance than the Afghan, or Western; and, even here, the question is not so much concerning Cabul as a frontier to India, as one concerning certain districts that must be considered as the frontiers to Cabul.

India may be invaded by Russia, and for Russia; but this by no means implies that it will be invaded either from Russia itself or from any integral part of the Russian Empire. It may be conquered, after a manner, from Bokhara or Kokand, or Khiva—but not directly; not by any Russian army which has traversed the five or four degrees of latitude which at present divide the two frontiers. The conquest by Baber, which established the empire of the Great Mogul, was undoubtedly one from Ferghana or Kokand; but for all this, no Russian army marched from Khokand to the Indus. India was conquered from Afghanistan; and Afghanistan was, pro tanto and pro hac vice, Mogulised by the presence of the King of Ferghana, at the head of an army. But this army he found on the Indian frontier and there he joined it. It may have been Afghan. It was certainly Turk to a great extent; but the Turks in it were like the present English in India. Not a regiment marched direct from Ferghana, or even from Bokhara. There is no doubt on this point. We know little about the preparations for it from Baber's autobiography. But this we know—viz., that on the parts north of the Cabul he crossed the mountains with a few friends and followers, and found an army for him in Afghanistan ready for the invasion. Moreover, as he was at that time in close alliance with the Shah of Persia, it is probable that it consisted more of Afghans than Turks, and more of Persians than either—or, perhaps, both. For anything like marches and counter marches, mountain passes, practicable or impracticable rivers, commissariat departments, and the like, the autobiography of the great founder of the Mogul Empire in India tells us little more than a diary of an ordinary commercial traveller—indeed, not so much.

Afghanistan itself is by no means a country in which the population is either notably mixed in blood or diversified in its manners and customs. Of course, there are some exceptions to the rule; but they are comparatively unimportant. There are several Persian settlements in the country, and in these the Persian language is spoken. The occupants of such districts are called by the Afghans Deegauns, and sometimes Tajiks, sometimes Parsis. Of the tribes among the Afghans and their sub-tribes the name is Legion; some being more peaceful and amenable to their rulers than others—or, rather, less warlike, and not quite so lawless. But, taken as a whole, Afghanistan is a country of an average uniform character; and that even in respect to its religion. Though largely Persian in other respects, the Afghans are, in the main, Sunnites; but, on the side of India, there are numerous Shiites, and on the north of the Cabul River there is a considerable area which is so little either truly Sunnite or truly Shiite that the occupants of it are known either as Half-Mahometans in one part of it, and as Kafirs, or Infidel, in the other.
